'A Great Emergency'

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 3.—Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, acting on a plea from the Ford Motor Co., issued a temporary injunction tonight restraining the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers from interfering with Ford workers. The court said there was "a great emergency."

He held that "nothing short of armed force of the militia" is able to control the situation which existed yesterday and part of today and which "I fear may occur and continue into the future."

The injunction climaxed a day of further scattered violence in the two-day-old U. A. W. (C. I. O.) strike which has halted production at the huge River Rouge works, world's largest industrial plant.

The union immediately accused the company of breaking its word in a pact to keep the River Rouge plant closed.

The company's application for the injunction, a union statement said, was a "deliberate violation of its pledge to make no effort to open the Rouge plant during a period of conciliation."

I. A. Capizzi, Ford attorney, retorted the union had failed to "keep its part of the bargain," particularly, he said, that part permitting peaceful picketing.

"If it had," he said, "we wouldn't be here (in court). We agreed that we would not operate the plant and we kept our part of the bargain."

James F. Dewey, Federal mediator, resumed conferences tonight with union men after having consulted earlier today with Ford officials. He reported "some progress."

In its complaint the Ford Co. also had asked an injunction against

Airliner Found in Swamp; 16 Injured, None Critically

Dr. George W. Crile, Noted Surgeon, Is Among Passengers

By the Associated Press

Miami, April 3.—A Miami Herald reporter at Vero Beach informed the newspaper tonight that all 16 occupants of the Eastern Air Liner forced down in a swamp were injured, but none critically.

His information was that the pilot and steward were most seriously hurt.

The pilot, Gerald O'Brien, had a crushed chest.

Dr. and Mrs. George W. Crile were first to be brought to the highway. The eminent Cleveland physician had a broken rib, while his wife suffered from shock.

Mrs. Crile said the plane was brought down in about 3½ feet of water.

Water was up to the waists of the passengers as they sat in the craft, and both motors were torn from the plane, the reporter said.

"It was so black outside when the plane landed," Mrs. Crile said, "that we did not know we had hit the ground until we were jarred from our seats.

"Everyone was very sane. There was no crying.

"The captain was magnificent."

O'Brien was hurt as the result of being thrown against the steering apparatus as he strained to land the craft right side up.

U. S. to Peg Food Prices To Aid Allies

Record Farm Bill

THE SENATE, overwhelming economy advocates, yesterday passed a record-breaking $1,340,000,000 appropriation bill for the Agriculture Department. Parity payments of $450,000,000 were included. Page 4.

Food for Defense

The United States last night announced a program of pegging farm food product prices in order to stimulate production so America can help feed "Great Britain and other nations resisting aggression."

Officially, the undertaking was termed "an expansion of the ever-normal granary program into a food program designed to assure ample supplies" for this country and all those fighting the dictators.

The Department of Agriculture announced it would step into the open commodity markets to buy these products in such quantities as to keep long-term prices at approximately the following levels (Chicago basis):

Hogs, $9 per hundredweight; dairy products on the basis of butter at 31 cents per pound; chickens, 15 cents per pound, and eggs, 22 cents per pound.

An increase of pork prices to the consumer, perhaps as much as 20 per cent, with consumer prices of the other products showing little change, was seen as a possible result by officials.

The price-supporting move will continue until June 30, 1943.

Other Phases Listed

Other phases of the program, Secretary Wickard announced, include:

1. Continuation for 1941 and 1942 of the existing corn loan program, which puts a bottom of 61 cents a bushel under corn.

2. Continuation of the policy of making loan corn available to producers at the loan rate plus certain carrying charges.

3. Allowing producers in the commercial corn-producing area to increase corn acreage up to their usual acreage, without receiving corn payments.

4. No corn marketing quotas for the 1941 crop.

Under the food-expansion drive, the department announcement said, farmers will be urged to increase pork production by feeding hogs to heavier weights and by increasing farrowing of pigs, to increase dairy production by feeding cows more grain and by milking more cows and to increase the size of their poultry flocks.

The Government's purchases in the open market will be used to accumulate reserve supplies of food, it added. These supplies can be used for transfer to the British and other countries under the provisions of the Lend-Lease Act; for release upon the market in case of unwarranted speculative price increases; to meet requests from the Red Cross for shipment to war refugee areas and for direct distribution through school lunch programs or through State welfare departments to public-aid families.

Reich Newspapers Charge Yugoslavs Have Offensive Designs on Austria

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 3.—Complete repudiation by Yugoslavia of English and American influence in her internal and foreign affairs appeared tonight to be the German condition for restoring normal relations with that kingdom.

It was emphasized that no official or authorized source was announcing any German terms, but it was observed that nothing was changed in Germany's long-standing determination to eliminate England as a political influence in the Balkans.

American influence, whatever it might be, was fast becoming as offensive to Berlin as English attempts to shape Balkan policies.

It was also stated by careful observers that demobilization of the Yugoslav army, at least to peacetime basis, could be a logical demand by some elements in Germany.

Mobilization in Full Swing

No one in a responsible position would say the door has been completely closed to negotiations for precisely what Germany would consider adequate adjustment.

But it was obvious that the Reich was concerned by reports of intensive military preparations in Yugoslavia.

German press dispatches said the Serb mobilization was in full swing.

Germany also was seriously and publicly taking account of the increasing force of British troops in Greece and their occupation of positions up against the Yugoslav border.

Contemplation of these troops in a Balkan position which the Axis has proclaimed its own exclusive sphere of influence recalled the oft-repeated German comment that the enemy would be struck wherever he appears.

Possibly significant was the announcement in the press that German occupation of Bulgaria had been completed and that German troops in that region are exactly where the high command wanted them.

Polish Campaign Recalled

Also published was Field Marshal Sigmund List's order of the day to the Balkan army on March 1 in which he said the occupation of Bulgaria was for the purpose of guaranteeing Bulgaria's security and taking the fight to England if the greater German living space should be menaced from the edge of the Balkans.

The German press began tonight to accuse Yugoslavia of aggressive designs on Austria.

Observers remarked on the similarity of the situation to the dark days of the Polish crisis of summer, 1939. Then, Germany was astir with stories that certain Polish generals were talking about Polish occupation of East Prussia.

President Demands Italy Recall Attache After Ship Sabotage

Admiral Roberto Lais Said to Have Ordered Damage by Crews

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

A 58-year-old Italian officer, Admiral Roberto Lais, naval attache here, was under orders last night from President Roosevelt to leave the country immediately, charged with complicity in sabotage aboard 26 of the 28 Italian ships that were seized last weekend.

The ouster of Lais, first action of its kind here since the World War, subjected United States-Axis relations to their severest strain.

President Roosevelt's demand that Lais quit the country was contained in a blunt note from Secretary of State Hull to the Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna.

The Italian government was told that the President considers Lais to be "persona non grata," that his continued presence would no longer be "agreeable" to the United States.

Under diplomatic custom, Italy has no choice but to comply with the American request.

Though the note did not mention the acts of sabotage, it left no doubt that the State Department has evidence that Lais issued orders to the captains of Italian vessels to wreck their machinery.

Belgrade (Friday), April 4.—The Yugoslav government early today designated Belgrade, Zagreb and Ljubljana as open cities in the event of a war which departing German diplomats freely predicted would begin, barring the most unexpected developments, with air attack in the next few days.

Although thus hoping to escape a rain of Nazi bombs, Belgrade just before midnight blacked out for the first time in a half-hour emergency air-raid drill.

As 42 members of the German Legation left for Berlin in an ordinary day coach, one of them disclosed that their last official act was to buy sandbags to protect German buildings from the Nazi bombs "which probably soon will be dropping."

Belgrade, the national capital of more than 270,000 population, is scarcely 50 miles from the Rumanian frontier, where German troops and planes are massed.

Zagreb, a city of 185,000 and capital of old Croatia, is about the same distance from the German concentrations on the Hungarian border, and Ljubljana, chief city of old Slovenia, is barely 20 miles from the Italian frontier.

Traffic Paralyzed

For the practice blackout, master switches extinguished every electric light in Belgrade, and even cut off telephone service. Traffic was paralyzed. The radio warned of what to do in the event of a real air alarm.

[A second trial blackout in the capital began at 11:30 p. m. without warning and lasted for 45 minutes, the United Press reported.]

British Leave 'Indefensible' Bengasi to Axis

Imperial Forces Claim Nazi-Italian Advance Is Costly

By the Associated Press

Cairo, (Friday), April 4.—British general headquarters announced early today that the Army of the Nile had withdrawn from Bengasi, important Libyan seaport, but had inflicted considerable casualties on personnel and tanks" of Axis mechanized forces.

A headquarters communique said:

"In face of the determined advance by strong Italo-German forces possessing numerous tanks, and in pursuance of the policy so successfully adopted at Sidi Barrani of waiting to choose our own battleground, our light covering detachments have been withdrawn to selected concentration areas.

"In the course of this withdrawal the town of Bengasi has been evacuated after all captured military stores and equipment had been destroyed.

British Optimistic

"Bengasi is indefensible from a military point of view and it has not been used by us as a port.

"As in the autumn of 1940 the enemy is evidently seeking propaganda success at the expense of stretching still farther an already extended line of communications. In their withdrawal our troops have already inflicted on the enemy considerable casualties in personnel and in tanks."

Even while this was announced, British officers at the Middle East headquarters were openly optimistic about the prospects of an early finish to the East African campaign, in which the Red Sea port of Mas-

Calling Future Hopeless, Teleki Kills Himself

Nazi Demands Blamed; Premier's Suicide After Warning Hungarians

By the Associated Press

Budapest, April 3.—Count Paul Teleki, the premier who aligned Hungary with the Axis but fought to keep her from falling completely under German domination, was found dead in bed today, and authoritative sources said he had put a bullet through his own brain.

Most Hungarians agreed that the man they knew as the great tight-rope walker took his life because he could not continue his precarious balancing act.

Death came as motorized German troops moved to southern Hungary, amid reports that the Nazis were demanding Hungarian army help to attack Yugoslavia, with which Teleki had made a friendship pact.

He left farewell notes to his invalid wife and to the Hungarian regent, Admiral Nicholas Horthy.

There were reports that in the latter he detailed his feeling that Hungary no longer could hold out against German domination and that his two-year effort had failed. (The Swiss Telegraphic Agency said the note explained that "he no longer felt himself capable of fulfilling his difficult and unhappy task.")

He is reported to have told the cabinet last night:

"The future is hopeless."

The foreign office at first said the 62-year-old statesman died of a heart attack, but friends said he had taken poison, and subsequent reports said he shot himself in the head.

American and British Talks Are Held Here On Convoy Plans

Copyright by New York Times

Staff talks between American and British naval representatives are under way to determine how a joint convoy system could be operated in case President Roosevelt decides to employ American naval vessels for protecting shipments to Britain, an authoritative source said yesterday.

It was emphasized that no final determination of policy has been made and that alternative methods of attempting to insure safe delivery of billions of dollars worth of American war supplies and food are under consideration. One plan, it was understood, was for the United States vessels to convoy merchant ships as far as Iceland, with British sea units taking over from there into British ports.

Plans on convoys are being perfected under the custom by which the Navy draws up detailed arrangements for any possible contingency, it was explained, and, as far as could be learned yesterday, President Roosevelt has not yet approved the convoy principle. There is a growing feeling in many diverse circles in Washington, however, that the United States cannot attempt to act as an "arsenal" for Britain and her allies and not make certain that supplies for the defeat of the Axis get overseas.

President Roosevelt conferred at the White House yesterday with Admiral Harold Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, and Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley who returned to the United States aboard the British battleship George V when that ship brought Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, to this country.

Roosevelt Reported Ready to Give Signal On Red Sea Route

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt is expected soon to clear the way for American ships to carry war supplies through the Gulf of Aden to the Red Sea and possibly as far as Suez Canal.

From that point the British would haul the supplies across the Mediterranean for use by their own troops, the Greeks, and—should they be attacked—the Yugoslavs and Turks.

The President is believed to be waiting only for the fall of Massaua, Italy's last port on the Red Sea, which is now held by a relatively small Italian garrison and is under the threat of British naval guns.

For the first ten months of the war, United States ships were free to sail through the Gulf of Aden and into the Red Sea.

On the day that Italy entered the war, President Roosevelt, acting in accordance with the Neutrality Act of 1939, decreed that the entrance to the Gulf of Aden was a combat area "within which American vessels may not proceed and American citizens may not travel . . ." The Mediterranean was designated a combat area at the same time.

At that time—and for some months afterward—the Italians appeared to be dominant in East Africa. They quickly invaded British Somaliland, adding it to Italian Somaliland, Ethiopia and Eritrea. They also in effect took over French Somaliland.

Today the Italians are making their last stand in their East African empire. They have been driven out of Italian Somaliland; they are on the run in Ethiopia, and about

New York, April 3.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will wear an Easter ensemble of neon purple and violet this year, reversing her usual devotion to navy blue and white. The President's wife had the last fitting today at Arnold-Constable's for the costumes she selected some time ago for her spring wardrobe.

Her Easter church outfit consists of a coat and dress of the purple shades and a wide-brimmed Baku hat of purple, trimmed with two feather flowers in the contrasting shades. The coat is of neon purple, lined with cloud violet, and the one-piece frock is of cloud violet with a front panel of neon purple.

Billion-Dollar Defense Tax For 1941 Considered at Capitol

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Preliminary steps toward a 1941 defense tax bill expected to raise a "minimum" of $1,000,000,000 were discussed yesterday at a series of conferences between House, Senate and Treasury tax experts.

Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee said his group will start work shortly after the House members return from their Easter recess.

Doughton conferred separately with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, ranking member of the Senate Finance Committee.

Later George said he believed the new revenue to be raised should be in the neighborhood of $1,500,000,000 but in no case should go lower than $1,000,000,000. He said the amount and the sources to be tapped would be discussed later at informal conference between representatives of House and Senate committees and the Treasury.

Possibility that the Administration's proposals for broadening Social Security coverage may be dropped from the agenda for this session was suggested by George, former chairman of a finance subcommittee assigned to the plan.

While no definite decisions have been reached, the Georgian said the Irish Eyes Are Stormy

Sure, and Mr. O'Hara Is Angry With the Telegraph Company

One of those little tragedies that set at naught the best efforts of Dale Carnegie, Mary Haworth and Dr. Walter Pitkin was unfolded to the judges of the Municipal Court yesterday by a Mr. Wally O'Hara, of 24 Girard Street Northeast.

He has—that is, he did have—a lady friend named Mrs. Micky Mertz, and her birthday is July 22. And this is the greeting he says he sent her by Postal Telegraph on her birthday in 1939:

Micky c/o Mrs. C. A. Labett, Manhasset, N. Y.

Nothing but the best for the best from the world's worst red-headed Irishman.

And did the spalpeens deliver the message to Micky? Not if you believe Mr. O'Hara. He says they garbled the address into "Mickey C. Labett." And the greeting? Mr. O'Hara says his straightforward Celtic message was transformed into this text:

Nothing better to wish the world's best lover than lots of luck from the world's worst lover, the red-headed Irishman.

As a result, says Mr. O'Hara, Micky's friends and associates really took her for a ride. She was, he asserted, "humiliated and embarrassed and held up to contempt and ridicule."

And, he says, she didn't like it.

So they are not friends any longer, he says, which has caused Mr. O'Hara great mental anguish and destroyed his peace of mind.

As a result of telephone calls and other annoyance, Mr. O'Hara says, he had to move and he lost his job.

He claims it's all the fault of the telegraph company. His attorney, James J. Laughlin (another good Irish name, but he isn't red-headed), totaled up Mr. O'Hara's damages like this:

Mental anguish	$350
Loss of sleep and rest	300
Cost of moving	75
Injury to health	150
Loss of job	125

This adds up to $1,000, which is the most you can sue for in Municipal Court.

The telegraph company has 15 days to answer.

Prosecutions Weighed

Fatal Hair Solution Seized By U. S. at Beauty Shop Here

Food and Drug Administration officials and a United States deputy marshal last night seized in a large Washington beauty establishment a quantity of a preparation used in "heatless hair waving" which was held responsible for the death of Mrs. Agnes Scott Searcy, Griffin, Ga., and Washington society woman, March 19.

The seizure followed finding by Food and Drug investigators earlier yesterday that the widely marketed hair preparation and the solution that brought death to Mrs. Searcy were the same.

Commissioner W. G. Campbell, of the FDA, said seizures of the product would be made throughout the country and that prosecution of the manufacturer might follow.

Sixty packages of the heatless preparation which, contains hydrogen sulfide when in solution, were seized at one beauty shop and another seizure was to follow today.

The Food and Drug Administration investigators applied the hair solution to the skin of a rabbit and the animal died within half an hour.

Mrs. Searcy died a few hours after she left an Atlanta beauty establishment March 19. Hydrogen sulfide had been absorbed into her scalp through a dozen or more lesions. The report of Dr. Allan Bunce, who signed the death certificate, said it could not be definitely determined whether these cuts resulted from application of the hair solution or were there prior to the treatment.

Italian Press Hints at Fall Of East Africa

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 3.—Italy's "sorrow at Eritrea and Ethiopia"—apparently a substantial admission of the imminent fall of all East Africa—was publicly acknowledged today in preparing the people for news of further "painful losses" to the British Imperial armies.

Writing in Premier Mussolini's own newspaper, Il Popoli d'Italia of Milan, the Fascist military commentator Mario Appelius reported that 300,000 British soldiers, "flanked by Halle Selassie's savage hordes and aided by formidable armament and abundant aviation," were now stabbing Ethiopia from 13 directions.

"Our spirit by now is prepared," he declared, "for new painful losses, some of which were imposed by the humaneness of the Italian command, which is evacuating certain urban centers to save the population the horrors of street fighting."

But, he added:

"Where the enemy errs is in believing that he can deliver a mortal blow to Italy through our sorrow at Eritrea and Ethiopia."

The Italian high command earlier had acknowledged the abandonment to the British of Asmara, the capital of Eritrea, saying that such action had been taken to save the city from further bombardment—which already had taken "hundreds of victims."

The East African battle, it was then stated without amplification, had "started up again in new positions."

On the offensive side, the high command announced that German and Italian planes had sunk six British steamers in two convoys in the Eastern Mediterranean, and probably a seventh.

As to the Yugoslavian situation, the Fascist editorialist, Virginio Gayda, wrote that Yugoslavia's virtual repudiation of Axis membership had freed Germany and Italy of the obligation assumed in that pact to respect that country's independence and territorial integrity.

(In Belgrade, however, a Fascist spokesman insisted that war "is not inevitable," and said that the Italians still were "seeking some basis on which to establish contact between the Italian and Yugoslav governments.")

Yugoslav circles here took the line that whether hostilities were to come was up to Hitler. The Yugoslavs indicated that they would make no move to aggravate matters, but neither would they back down appreciably from the independent attitude which resulted in the overthrow of the Cvetkovic (pro-Axis) government.

tions and moved to border positions.

Yugoslav warplanes constantly circled over the city. German troops and tanks still mounted guard over the line in Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria.

Authorities in Zagreb, near the Hungarian frontier, ordered householders to make shelters of their cellars quickly and issued other invasion instructions.

Communities in the vital Vardar River Valley, which a German southward thrust toward Greece would follow, began all-night blackouts.

The army began requisitioning big resort hotels in the mountains for use as hospitals.

The German radio hurled new charges of terrorism against Yugoslavia, and this country in turn dropped its polite tones to slap back boldly at the Nazi campaign of invective.

In this atmosphere, white-haired Vladimir Macek, the leader of the powerful Croat minority, accepted the Yugoslav vice premiership in the cabinet of Gen. Dusan Simovic to establish national unity.

Macek expressed confidence that peace was still possible, with Croats and Serbs thus united to face the common peril. Most persons, however, said war with Germany was inevitable and imminent.

There were reports from Bucharest that German Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch had passed through there en route to Bulgaria to take command of the German Balkan campaign.

White-haired Peter Bojavic, who led the Serbian army that defeated Bulgaria in the Second Balkan War in 1913, was named inspector-general (commander in chief) of the Yugoslav army, a title previoulsy held by the exiled regent Prince Paul.

Diplomatic reports from German countries told of massings of Nazi troops which indicated the German general staff is planning four definite thrusts if war comes.

1. A sweep down from Hungary and old Austria through the comparatively flat Banat district of northeast Yugoslavia toward Belgrade with fast motorized equipment.

2. A drive west from Rumania through the frontier town of Vrsac in an attempt to take Belgrade within two days.

3. A heavy force sent northwest from Bulgaria to attempt the capture of the vital rail junction of Nis.

4. The main attack, from southern Bulgaria through the mountain passes westward to try to seize Skoplje and get to the Albanian frontier to keep the Yugoslavs from driving the Italians into the Adriatic in an Axis Dunkerque.

Russia Backs Simovic Regime

Moscow, April 3 (U.P.).—Russia was understood tonight to have officially recognized the new Simovic regime as the legal government of Yugoslavia.

Gen. Dusan T. Simovic's army coup in Yugoslavia has "altered the Balkan situation" and initiated a new phase in the affairs of southern Europe, the Red army organ, Red Star, said today in the first public Russian comment on the Yugoslavia crisis.

tention of the United States" connecting Lais "with the commission by certain persons of acts in violation of the laws of the United States."

The possibility of a complete break in diplomatic relations with Italy was freely mentioned in official quarters, but there was no indications that such a drastic step was imminent.

No similar demand was dispatched to the German Embassy. The captain of the German tanker Pauline Friederich and nine of his crew were indicted in Federal court in Boston Wednesday for sabotage aboard the vessel.

It was believed that evidence of Lais' connection with the acts of sabotage was collected by agents of the Naval Intelligence, the Coast Guard and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, following seizure of the Axis vessels.

The captain of one of the Italian vessels told reporters Sunday that the sabotage was ordered by Lais.

The comfortable Lais home at 2305 Bancroft Place Northwest was tense with anticipation yesterday when news was received of the United States request that the naval attache be recalled.

Lais is married to an American, the former Leonora Sutton Evans, daughter of Dr. George Evans, of New York City.

SIGNORA LAIS
To Remain in United States

With her comely, red-haired daughter, Edna, 19, standing by her side, Signora Lais yesterday told a Post reporter of her sensations at receiving word that her husband must leave.

"I will devote myself" to my music, said the diplomat's wife, who taught singing for many years in Rome and has the distinction of being the only foreigner licensed to teach Italians to sing.

Signora Lais said she plans to open a music school here in the near future.

Her gaze strayed often to a framed photograph on the shelf of a bookcase in the living room. It showed a good-looking young man in the uniform of the Italian navy. It was her son, Lucio, 21, a student at the Italian Naval Academy.

"I hope no harm befalls him," said the mother.

Lais has served here as naval attache since January, 1940, but he had visited the United States often previously and, in fact, once told an interviewer that he considers himself to be "75 per cent American."

He served at the Italian Embassy here once before, from 1926 to 1929, with the rank of captain.

Edna, a student at a local secretarial school, was born in Italy. She did not appear perturbed by the sudden events. He hair had been recently waved, as though she were preparing for one of the round of social events of the Capital, where she is a familiar figure. Though she spoke perfect English, the interview was interrupted when she answered the telephone in rapid Italian.

Lais was not available for comment, either at his home or at the Embassy.

The American demand for his ouster came as the State Department was preparing notes rejecting two German and Italian protests against the ship seizures.

Relations with Italy had already been strained by American demands that Italian naval and military attaches report their movements outside of Washington to the State Department, that Italian consuls confine their travels to the areas within their jurisdiction, and that the consulates at Detroit and Newark be closed.

There still was no official indication what would become of the seized ships, but Secretary Morgenthau told reporters yesterday he and Attorney General Jackson were studying the question of whether the ships should be forfeited to the United States. Technically, they still belong to Germany and Italy, though they have been taken into United States custody.

The 1917 Espionage Act under which the ships were seized provides that the Government may ask that they be forfeited as penalty for sabotage.

President Roosevelt took a direct hand in diplomatic activities in connection with the Balkan situation yesterday. He conferred at the White House with the Yugoslav Minister, Constantin Fotitch, and the new Hungarian envoy, George de Chika.

Just before the President received Fotitch, Secretary Morgenthau expressed the hope in his press conference that he would be able to release more than $50,000,000 in Yugoslav credits in the United States which were frozen when the since-deposed Yugoslav government joined the Axis last month.

Final action upon this matter, which would release funds for the purchase by Yugoslavia of war supplies in this country, presumably was discussed by the President and the Yugoslav envoy yesterday. Morgenthau indicated that the State Department must approve the liberation of Yugoslav monies, largely ear-marked gold, here, and despite the fact that the new government has opposed Germany and the Axis, Yugoslav adherence to the Axis has not yet been formally repudiated as far as is publicly known here.

The release of the funds would be a "complete liberation" if it takes place, Morgenthau emphasized, and not the mere issuance of a general license authorizing withdrawal of funds which would technically remain frozen.

Although he talked to the President for 45 minutes, Minister Fotitch confined himself to saying, on leaving the White House, that he had thanked the Executive for the message he dispatched to King Peter II shortly after the coup d'etat which upset German plans and placed the boy monarch on the Balkan throne.

"I delivered a reply of thanks and appreciation for the President's message," the Minister said. "Be kind and take that statement."

In presenting his credentials to the President, the Hungarian Minister said:

"I desire to say that I bring a message of good will from my countrymen as well as to the assurance of the Hungarian government of its sincere desire to promote mutual understanding."

Mr. Roosevelt replied:

"You may be assured of my desire and that of the other officials of the Government of the United States of America to grant you assistance and cooperation at all times with a view to strengthening the ties which have so long existed between our two nations."

Admiralty Referee To Make First District Award

Presiding Judge George C. Aukam of the Municipal Court will soon hand down the first award of a referee in admiralty in the history of Washington.

Judge Aukam has under advisement a $4,500 claim filed against Nugent Fallon, Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation manager, by Milton T. and Benjamin Elliott, Suffolk, Va.

The Elliotts owned the yacht Roma and chartered it to Fallon at $500 a month in 1938. On July 2 of that year, the yacht was damaged by an explosion off New Bedford, Mass. Attorney John J. Carmody, for the owners, said Fallon tampered with the machinery and caused the blast.

Fallon's counsel, Albert F. Adams, Harvey D. Jacob and Walter M. Bastian said the machinery was defective.

Justice Oscar R. Luhring of the District Court referred the case to Judge Aukam by authority of a statute passed 40 years ago but never before invoked.

Hungary's 'Future Hopeless,' Premier Says; Kills Himself

eign minister helped arrange the Axis and Yugoslav agreements, died only last January 27 at the age of 46 of an illness officially attributed to food poisoning. He was stricken as he returned from concluding the Yugoslav pact.

Csaky's successor, Foreign Minister Dr. Laszlo de Bardossy, was designated as premier to form a government succeeding that of Teleki, which resigned when Teleki's death became known.

The dead premier, a gentle, retiring scholar and Boy Scout master, went to church with his Scouts Wednesday afternoon, held a cabinet meeting last night, and then visited his wife in a sanitarium before going home to write his farewell notes.

Servants found his body this morning.

Diplomatic circles in London said Germany had been trying to force Teleki to create a Nazi-ruled military zone on the frontier facing Yugoslavia and to denounce the Hungarian-Yugoslav pact.

The German radio, however, said Teleki's death was "a great loss to Hungary, and Germany mourns the loss of a great friend."

Teleki hung the tightrope walker title on himself.

Two years ago he declared he hoped "never to live to see Hungary go to war against Britain or the United States."

He told friends that he and Csaky cooperated with Germany in order, paradoxically, to maintain their country's independence. Despite his adherence to the Axis, the annexation of part of Czechoslovakia and a portion of Transylvania with German aid, he was, personally, pro-British.

Teleki's position was not well understood, but he paid lip service to Hitler in the hope that the Nazis would not meddle in Hungary's internal affairs.

Smashed Nazis

Teleki made Hungary a member of the anti-Comintern Pact the same day he ordered police to smash Hungary's leading Nazi party. He publicly thanked Hitler for friendship toward Hungary while arresting local Nazi leaders.

Britsh Troops Quit Bengasi

saua remains as the only Eritrean city still held by the Italians and the British are closing in on Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, from several directions.

However, London dispatches said the abandonment of Bengasi jolted the British public and in London military circles there was unpleasant surprise at the evacuation, which followed so closely British reports minimizing progress of the German-Italian column.

Neutral observers in Lisbon termed the Italo-German operation in Cirenaica primarily a diversion, but said that it might develop into a major drive if the Axis found British resistance weak and was able substantially to reinforce troops sent to Africa.

It was estimated by competent sources that Germany has three motorized divisions in Libya, withdrawn from the French-Spanish border early in February.

Before announcing the withdrawal from Bengasi, the British said imperial forces had given up the town of Agedabia, some 80 miles south of Bengasi, and between 75 and 80 miles of worthless desert."

Bengasi, capital of the province of the same name, is a railroad and communications center and one of the best African harbors on the Mediterranean. The Italians considered it part of their national territory.

In Berlin a military commentator declared the Axis thrust was "the first time German land troops have had a real tussle with the British army since the days of Dunkerque." However, the Berlin announcement said only that the Axis force was about 20 miles north of Agedabia, or some 60 miles from Bengasi.

"It was definitely established that the German troops now are just as superior to the British as in the battles of Belgium," the Berlin spokesman said. "Also noteworthy is the fact that it was the first real test of German motorized units under semitropical conditions in a desert region."

Bengasi was captured by the British on February 7 after a 61-day drive from Egypt which carried the British forces east to Agheila, 180 miles down the coast from Bengasi, before it slackened.

Most British attention was focused on the continuing Italian retreats in Ethiopia and Eritrea.

A British unit driving westward along the Awash River Valley from Diredawa, Ethiopia, toward Addis Ababa claimed today the capture of Miesso, within 180 miles of the capital city.

The advance was preceded by planes which dropped "messages" as far ahead as Hadama, about 50 miles from Addis Ababa, and on Awash, next British goal.

China Revamps Economy After Lauchlin Visit

Copyright by New York Times

Chungking, April 3.—The results of the visit to Chungking of Lauchlin Currie, President Roosevelt's special emissary, are seen here in decisions of the Kuomintang (Chinese Nationalist Party) central executive session, which closed Wednesday.

Extensive changes were announced in government organization and personnel and measures were adopted which for the first time will establish a comprehensive, closely regulated wartime economy for China.

Informed sources say many measures taken after exhaustive examination by Chinese officials and Currie, were necessary to strengthen the country's military and economic effort in the war with Japan. Authoritative quarters believe there will be further personnel and organizational changes.

Aside from selection of Quo Tai-chi as the new foreign minister, important steps to strengthen the national economy are implicit in the establishment of new ministeries of food and trade.

The vital question of increasing production, improving distribution and regulating consumption and prices of food are expected to be dealt with by the new food ministry. This is in keeping with the judgment of experts on China's war problems that increased cost and sectional shortages of food are among the most serious difficulties facing the government.

The new trade ministry will take over the task of expanding China's foreign commerce, with a view to obtaining more foreign exchange, and also handle the growing barter of Chinese raw products for foreign war supplies, including exports of United States wood, oil, tungsten, antimony and tin, with payment made from loans and materials.

With current government revenues meeting only a quarter of the cost of the war, efforts to increase government income are evident in the decisions to set up salt, tobacco, wine and sugar monopolies and expand direct and indirect taxation.

Transfer of land tax collections to the central government is expected to achieve a fourfold increase in these taxes.

An increase in workers' hours of labor and a prohibition against laborers arbitrarily changing their jobs are included in the measures for increasing production.

Plow Up, Till Astor Lawn, Laborite Urges

By the Associated Press

London, April 3.—A suggestion for plowing up the 300-acre front yard of the Cliveden estate of Lord and Lady Astor was injected into a House of Commons discussion today.

Agriculture Minister Robert Hudson earlier had warned there was bound to be a meat shortage "because of claims (on shipping) of the Middle East campaign."

William Leach, Laborite, immediately inquired about the Thamesside Cliveden estate, asking if Hudson would "take action in the case of a Buckinghamshire mansion where a head gardener and 15 gardeners are employed, where no efforts to grow foodstuffs except for the house were made and where flower beds were camouflaged with intersown lettuce."

David Lloyd George, Britain's elder Liberal statesman, also emphasized the seriousness of the situation with the recommendation that owner of vast estates and deer parks "should not be allowed to keep deer and have as much meat as they want while other people are rationed."

"I say to my Tory friends who want, as I do, to maintain private ownership after the war that we had better stir up some of these people. It does not matter whom you ruin so long as you keep the people from starvation and so long as we win the war," he said.

Leach demanded that Hudson take steps to put an end to this defiance of national interests.

Hudson said he would "inquire further into the matter."

The Laborite member then asked the minister if he would "draw the attention of the chancellor of the exchequer to the fact that people can afford to keep 15 gardeners and does he not think it rather discreditable that the facts should be as stated and that they reflect very badly on the Astors of Cliveden?"

The Astors have explained that the soil of their park-like estate was unsuitable for cultivation and that many of the flowers grown there were donated to hospitals.

They also have been housing children withdrawn from London to escape the dangers of bombs.

Work on New 25-Ton Tank Begins—Year Ahead of Time

The Army announced last night that production had begun on a new 25-ton tank—officially described as "superior to anything of its type in the world"—one year ahead of schedule.

The announcement coincided with final Congressional action on the $4,393,221,174 fifth supplemental defense appropriation, the greater part of which will go for additional weapons and equipment for the Army. The measure, which now goes to the White House, carries funds for 4,750 bombers and new plants to produce weapons for a 4,000,000-man military machine.

The new medium tank, which will be publicly exhibited for the first time at Aberdeen, Md., tomorrow, is 7 tons heavier than the existing medium tank and carries heavier armament, it was said.

Secretary Stimson disclosed at the same time that more than 300 new Army units will be created in June and July, when 148,000 selectees will be "graduated" from recruit replacement centers.

Six of the new units having a combined strength of 3,150 men will be established at Fort Belvoir, Va., while seven units totaling 1,350 men will go to Fort Meade, Md. Belvoir will gain a regiment, three battalions and one company of engineers and a medical detachment. The new Meade organizations are signal, engineer, quartermaster and medical detachments.

Among the 300-odd new troop units are ten General Headquarters tank battalions, nine antiaircraft regiments, railroad and other artillery units, and miscellaneous organizations to round out the Army's 33 divisions with supporting troops.

Meanwhile, the Navy awarded a $31,000,000 contract for construction of two shipbuilding dry docks at the New York Navy Yard, capable of handling 65,000-ton battleships, and disclosed that 211 planes and 6 warships were added during March.

Four destroyers—the Gwin, Ludlow, Ericsson and Grayson—and the submarines Mackerel and Tuna were completed during the month, bringing the total number of warships in service to 329.

Stimson urged qualified physicians of draft age to apply for commissions in the Medical Corps Reserve, revealing that several thousand such posts are available. In another announcement the War Department said that commissions in the Regular Army will be given to about 100 Reserve and National Guard officers this summer.

Two Buildings at Fort Meade

The War Department also announced that two buildings will be constructed at Fort Meade to house the Signal Communications School, part of a project for providing buildings for 39 such schools all over the country, at a total cost of $904,085.

The new units to be established at Fort Belvoir, with the number of men allotted, are as follows: Forty-fourth Engineer Regiment (general service), 1,000; Ninety-fifth Separate Engineer Battalion, 1,000; Eighty-fifth Engineer Battalion (heavy pontoon) 1,000; Eighty-fourth Engineer Battalion (camouflage), less Company A, 300; Seventy-second Engineer Company (light pontoon), 200; 218th General Hospital.

New units at Fort Meade will be: Sixty-second Engineer Company, 100 men; Sixty-fourth Signal Battalion, 500; Sixty-first Surgical Hospital, 100; Fifteenth Evacuation Hospital, 150; 109th General Hospital, 250; Eighty-seventh Quartermaster Company (railhead) 100; Company A, Seventy-fourth Quartermaster Battalion (light maintenance). The Seventh General Dispensary, with 25 men, also will be established at the Army War College.

Parade Marks Army Day Tomorrow

Steel-helmeted fighting men, youthful reservists, and graying veterans of a past World War will march down Constitution Avenue tomorrow as America marks Army Day in defense-mindful 1941.

Nearly 200 military, patriotic and civic units will swing down the avenue in what promises to be the most elaborate and lengthy parade in years.

It will start at 1:45 p. m. from east plaza of the Capitol to Constitution Avenue continuing west on this thoroughfare to Seventeenth Street.

Washingtonians, never since 1917 so interested in defense forces, are expected to throng the line of march and pack the public reviewing stands seating approximately 4,500 on Constitution Avenue between Fourteenth and Seventeenth Streets.

Gen. Grant in Vanguard

Representative foot and mounted units will display the Army's might in the first and shortest section of the parade, following the vanguard of Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, Third Corps Area commander, and his staff, escorted by a cavalry detachment and Maj. Ernest W. Brown and a platoon of Metropolitan Police.

Brig. Gen. John N. Greely, Washington Provisional Brigade commander, will ride at the head of the first division of marchers.

The Army Band will be followed by the Second Squadron of Fort Myer's crack Third Cavalry. Next in order will be the regimental band of Washington's 121st Engineers, National Guard unit now in Federal service at Fort Meade, Md.

Trucks to Follow

In columns of ponderous gray-green trucks will roll the Fifth Engineer Regiment from Fort Belvoir, Va., with bridge-building equipment.

In a reviewing stand at Seventeenth Street will be Secretary Henry L. Stimson, Representative Andrew J. May, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee; Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall and Charles C. Allen, of Philadelphia, and Maj. James A. Lyon, of Washington, respectively, national and local heads of the Military Order of the World War, sponsoring the parade.

After soldiers of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment will come Fort Myer's Third Cavalry, an Army ambulance detachment, led by Col. William W. Gordon; the Navy Band and companies of Marines, Blue Jackets, Coast Guardsmen and Naval Reservists.

In the second division virtually the entire corps of high school cadets will march. In the third will parade representatives of 118 patriotic organizations, American Legion posts, Masonic lodges, utility companies, many of them with bands.

Wheeler Names Committee Of 9 to Direct Antiwar Drive

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, yesterday appointed a nine-man "executive committee" to direct a Nation-wide campaign "to halt the few remaining steps" he said will lead to actual participation in the war.

Wheeler, who threatened to stump the country against war when leading the fight on the lend-lease bill, said he was instructed by a Tuesday night caucus of 75 House and Senate members to appoint the committee.

The group, Wheeler said, will press for action on the Tobey resolution to ban use of convoys and will encourage "mass meetings in every part of the country" to oppose war involvement.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who Wednesday told the Senate the President wasn't thinking about convoys, declined comment on the Wheeler move. Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, repeated he had heard no suggestions that convoys be used.

Besides Wheeler, who will be chairman, and a tenth member to be selected later, the Montanan named the following to his "executive committee:" Senators Clark of Missouri and Bulow of South Dakota (Democrats), Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin; Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, and Representative Fish of New York, Van Zandt of Pennsylvania and Mundt of South Dakota (Republicans), and Knute Hill (Democrat), Washington.

All of these opposed passage of the lend-lease bill. Wheeler issued an appeal to "representative citizens" to arrange mass meetings and invite speakers to oppose war entry.

Representative Karl Mundt, South Dakota Republican, introduced yesterday a new anticonvoy bill. In a one-minute speech, the South Dakotan claimed that "the crimson corollary of convoying ships is sending troops in transports."

"Furious propaganda is now being promoted in this country by interventionists urging that the United States follow the convoy route to war," he said. "Each of you knows in his heart as does the President that when they ask you to send our ships they also ask you to send our sons to total, bloody, shooting war on foreign battle fronts."

LaRoe Urges Support of Drive Against Vice

Wilbur J. LaRoe, jr., local layman and lawyer, last night urged support of the Washington Federation of Churches' financial drive to "help war on vice in Washington."

Chairman of the Civic Affairs Committee of the Federation, he spoke at another campaign report dinner meeting at First Congregational Church, where workers reported $2,089, bringing the total to $5,121. The goal is $25,000. Another report will be heard on Monday.

Refugee Aid Group Sets May 14-30 For Funds Drive

The executive committee of the United Jewish Appeal, an organization to raise funds for relief of Jewish refugees in Europe, last night set May 14 to 30 as the date for its annual campaign.

At a meeting held in the Woodmont County Club, Bethesda, Md., the following persons were appointed to service as campaign officers:

Morris Simon and the Rabbi Isadore Bresleauf, cochairman; Isidore Hershfield, honorary chairman, and Paul Himmelfarb, treasurer.

Fumes Kill Man On Houseboat

George Bashford, 65, a retired Navy Yard worker, was found dead in a bunk aboard a houseboat moored off the foot of Duke Street in Alexandria yesterday, apparently the victim of monoxide gas caused by a small oil stove in the cabin of the boat.

His death was discovered by a neighbor. Dr. John A. Sims, city coroner, said Bashford apparently had died in his sleep. All windows and doors in the boat were closed tightly.

Bashford was the son of the late Phillip and Maggie Bashford, and retired from the Washington Navy Yard less than two months ago. Police said they believed he had been living aboard the houseboat since his retirement.

$1,340,000,000 Farm Bill Passed by Senate, 61 to 9

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate late yesterday approved a record-setting $1,340,000,000 appropriation for the Agriculture Department, exceeding by $444,000,000 President Roosevelt's 1942 budget estimates.

Economy advocates were overwhelmed as the Senate voted 61 to 9 to increase by $238,000,000 the parity payment fund approved by the House and convert a House authorization of $162,000,000 for parity payments into an outright appropriation. Five Republicans and four Democrats opposed the increase.

The Senate bill brings to $450,000,000 the funds available for parity payments to producers of wheat, cotton, corn, rice and tobacco, of which $150,000,000 can be used during the present fiscal year.

Goes to Conference

An increase from $100,000,000 to $135,000,000 in the funds provided for disposal of surplus commodities, the only other major amendment of the House bill, was approved by a vote of 58 to 0. The bill itself was approved by a voice vote without dissent. It now goes to conference for action on the Senate amendments.

The roll call on the parity payment increase came after a warning from Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, that the farm bill would bring nondefense expenditures for 1942 to $6,500,000,000, a sum equal to anticipated revenue, "leaving all our colossal expenditures for defense to come from borrowing."

Byrd said a Federal debt of $100,000,000,000 was in sight "in the near future," carrying with it annual interest charges of about $2,500,000,000. The postwar period, he said, can bring only staggering taxes, repudiation or "uncontrolled inflation."

Byrd Gives Reasons

The Virginian pointed out that the boost in parity payments had not been approved by President Roosevelt, the Budget Bureau or Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. He contended that farmers wil gain substantial benefits from the defense program because of the increased purchasing power of industrial workers and purchases of agricultural commoditits for the democracies overseas under the lend-lease program.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee which handled the farm bill, said he had not been given the President's views on the parity increase but "would venture to say he would not veto the bill if it carried twice as much for parity."

Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, said Secretary of Agriculture Wickard had told the Senate Agriculture Committee that "wheat and cotton will suffer a disaster if Congress doesn't do something."

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, appealed to his colleagues "to make a stand here and now for economy in nondefense expenditures, since this is the first bill before us carrying a substantial increase over the budget estimate.

"These payments are not in the nature of relief," he said, "since they go to wealthy farmers as well as the poor. They would add only about 2 per cent to the gross income of the American farmers and would distribute that in a most inequitable way."

The only change made by the Senate in the bill recommended by its Appropriations Committee was the elimination, by a 31-22 vote, of a ban on use of loans, grants, or rural rehabilitation funds for the purchase or establishment of mills, stores or plants competing with existing private firms.

Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and others contended that the provision would limit the operations of many rural cooperatives.

Aid Shis' Lane to Suez

ROUTE UNITED STATES VESSELS MAY TAKE—Map indicates probable route United States ships would take from New York to Suez Canal, through Gulf of Aden and Red Sea, if and when the way is cleared for American vessels to carry war supplies. Inset map shows how British would haul the supplies across the Mediterranean for use by their troops, the Greeks and—the Yugoslavs and Turks, should they be attacked

all that is left of their oldest colony of Eritrea is the beleagured port of Massaua.

The time therefore is imminent when President Roosevelt must take up the question of whether the approaches to the Suez Canal shall revert to their status before East Africa became a battleground.

German fliers, taking off from Libya, have been dropping mines in the Suez Canal, and that fact might enter into the President's consideration of the question.

But it would be to the advantage of Britain and her Allies in the Balkans if American ships were able to proceed only as far as Aden, which lies at the tip of Arabia near the mouth of the Red Sea.

The voyage from Atlantic ports around the Cape of Good Hope to the Red Sea is a long one, nearly as long as the voyage to India, which requires 90 days for a round-trip by the new freighters and 110 days for the old ones.

If, however, enough ships could be put into service, the United States would be giving eloquent expression to the Lend-Lease Act.

At present, the United States has three steamship lines running freighters to such South African ports as Mombasa in British Kenya. They are the American South African Line, with 13 ships; Seas Shipping Co., with 13 ships, and Lykes Bros. Steamship Co., with four ships.

There are two lines running to India, the American Export Line, with 14 ships, and the Ismithian Steamship Co., with 18 ships.

The United States Maritime Commission has a pool of 40 or 50 ships which it can assign by charter to any routes on which they are needed.

pressure of the international situation probably will make it necessary to defer any general revision of the Social Security Act.

He stressed that no tax action need be taken by the Finance Committee pending return of Chairman Pat Harrison, who is convalescing from an illness at Hot Springs. Harrison is expected back around May 1.

As tax legislation must originate in the House, Chairman Doughton said that his House group may start hearings before that date. Doughton said his conference with Morgenthau was solely to determine when the Treasury wished to proceed. He indicated that both his own Joint Committee on Internal Revenue and Treasury tax experts will be ready to go ahead in the House soon after the Easter recess ends, April 14. March 15 tax returns, exceeding all estimates, already have been analyzed by the experts of both groups as a basis for the new tax computations.

John L. Sullivan, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of tax matters, meanwhile, called briefly on Senator George but said taxes were not discussed.

George, who while chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee still retains his finance committee rank, outlined to reporters in an interview his own ideas of the tax problem ahead.

He said if the Treasury asks for no more than $1,500,000,000 in new revenue, he believed it could be raised principally from the present individual and corporate income tax structure, without resorting to new or experimental forms.

"The taxes would be high, but I think they could be borne," he said.

He favored retroactive application of taxes to apply to income from January 1, although the new bill may not pass both houses until May or early June. He thought the new excess profits tax structure is geared to cope with defense industry profits.

Crashed Airliner Found in Marsh reported to have a broken leg, and to have been forced to sit with the injured limb under water.

Ernest Tyner, the Herald's Vero Beach reporter, was one of the first to reach the ship.

Rescue workers said it would take hours more to remove all those on the plane.

Also aboard the plane was Mrs. James M. Cox, jr., daughter-in-law of Newspaper Publisher James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio and Democratic Presidential nominee.

The plane, which left Miami with 11 passengers aboard and with Capt. Gerald O'Brien in charge, assisted by Copilot B. M. Crabtree and Flight Steward Al Marin, had been missing since 8:57 a. m. when the crew flew over Fort Pierce, 60 miles north of West Palm Beach, in murky weather. That was the last radio contact with the ship.

To West Palm Beach, where two more passengers boarded before the plane took off at 8:16 a. m. for the one-hour, 130-mile run into Daytona Beach, the flight was routine.

But, as the big ship roared north it ran into increasingly bad weather conditions as it moved into rough weather. At 8:49 O'Brien radioed that he was "going on top," above the storm conditions.

First apprehension for the big ship was felt when she failed to make her routine radio report from Melbourne about half an hour out of Daytona. Her normal gasoline supply deadline passed at 1:20 p. m.

Baltimore Rites Today For Mrs. C. T. Kemp

Mrs. Charles T. Kemp, 72, mother of Mrs. Joseph S. Devereux, of 1 Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., and a friend of many District residents, died Wednesday night in her Baltimore home after a short illness, it was learned here last night.

She was the widow of Charles T. Kemp, Baltimore sugar broker, who died there in 1939. Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. today in St. Ignatius' Church, Baltimore. She will be buried in the Cathedral Cemetery, in that city.

Injunction Issued In Ford Strike

the Communist Party, but this was denied by Judge Tuttle. The company, through Attorney I. A. Capizzi, had charged that "The United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) and the Communist Party" were "threatening and intimidating employes."

Judge Tuttle granted the injunction, which also is specifically directed against the C. I. O. itself, over the protests of the Affiliated Auto Workers Union. The union claimed that the company's allegations were incorrect since "at this time" there was "no interference with anyone."

"I think this is a great emergency," Judge Tuttle said. "When thousands of people gather and blockade roads, it is time we showed it to be an emergency, and everyone, plaintiff, defendants and everyone else, should do everything they can to end it."

The company obtained the injunction in a surprise move at the very time that negotiations were being continued by a Federal mediator in hurried efforts to secure a settlement and return 85,000 men to work.

The order, effective for five days, declares that the Ford Co. "is suffering loss of large sums of money in excess of $1,000,000." Capizzi had asked that damages be set.

The injunction forbids the C. I. O. and its U. A. W. affiliate from:

1. "Interfering, by threats, intimidations or otherwise," with any employes of the company.
2. Molesting or disturbing employes "in the quiet and peaceable pursuit of their lawful avocations."
3. Preventing ingress, egress and regress of employes to the plant.
4. Molesting or disturbing "any person or persons having business" with the company or its officers, directors, agents or employes.
5. "Maintaining barricades upon the highways and across the entrances of said plants."
6. "Intimidating, coercing, or humiliating" any officers, etc., "or assaulting or offering to do violence" to any officers, etc.

Hard upon further violence at the Rouge plant and warnings of possibly more bloodshed, Harry H. Bennett, company personnel chief, said today that Ford competitors "would like to have us give this plant to the Government."

"Ous competitors" and "the Communists," he said, "desire that."

"But that's not in the books," he added.

The Bennett statement came close upon an announcement by Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner that he had assurances of cooperation from both company and union representatives in his effort to start mediation of the strike that has made more than 85,000 workers here idle and threatens to close some 16 branch assemblies throughout the country before the weekend.

Simultaneously with these developments, Rolin McGrorty, shop organizer for the American Federation of Labor in the Ford plant, said his union was asking Gov. Van Wagoner to send 5,000 troops to the Rouge factory to "prevent bloodshed between strikers and men who wish to return to work."

McGrorty said he was convinced a back-to-work movement would start "if the men who want to go back get a leader." There will be a "lot of bloodshed," he went on, "if such a movement starts."

McGrorty estimated there were 10,000 to 15,000 Ford workers in his union. The U. A. W.-C. I. O., which called the strike Tuesday midnight, has never disclosed its membership strength in the Ford plants.

In scattered clash at the plant today pickets chased four Negroes a mile from the main gate and thrashed them. Three pickets were bowled over by a car which followed the Negroes' machine and crashed through the knot of struggling men at a speed estimated by witnesses at 40 miles an hour.

One picket said he was stabbed in the abdomen during the affray.

Commonwealth To Fight SEC Integration Plan

Asserting that it was "shocked" by the securities commission's tentative integration findings, the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation told the SEC yesterday that it would fight such a program in the courts "as far as we can go."

George Roberts, New York lawyer, speaking for the billion dollar system which Wendell L. Willkie headed until his nomination for the Presidency, declared that the plan of geographic integration outlined by the SEC staff under the so-called "death sentence" of the Utility Act meant "dismemberment" of the C. & S. system.

"We can't be rushed in this matter," Roberts said. "We're fighting for our very life. We have no intention of committing suicide."

The staff had proposed that Commonwealth & Southern could keep only one of its major companies, and few if any of its minor subsidiaries. The major choice would lie among Consumers Power Co., which serves most of lower Michigan; Georgia Power Co. and Alabama Power Co., the latter two serving virtually all of their respective States.

Stimson Hints U. S. May Run Allis Plant

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of War Stimson, declaring that strikes are "seriously holding back" defense production and are "getting worse," yesterday raised the possibility of the Government taking over the strike-closed Allis-Chalmers plant.

Without directly threatening such action, the Army chief said that the War Department is "equipped" to operate the establishment if necessary. At the same time, he warned that "Uncle Sam's patience" in such matters should not be mistaken for weakness.

"The patience of Uncle Sam is very long, and rightly so," he told reporters, "for the power of Uncle Sam is so great it ought to be used very carefully. But nobody makes a greater mistake than to misconstrue Uncle Sam's patience for weakness."

With regard to the possibility of Government operation of the Allis-Chalmers plant, Stimson said the War Department's plans did not contemplate sending its own civil service workers into the factory. He added that he had "an idea we might find a force right nearby."

Cites Pullman Strike of 1894

As an example of possible Government forceful action, Stimson cited the intervention of Federal troops in the 1894 Pullman strike in Chicago over the protests of the Governor of Illinois and Eugene Debs' union leader. The situation today, he said, reminded him of that action and the following jingle written at the time by "Marse Henry" Watterson, famous editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal:

"Now don't you try it, Mr. Debs,
"Don't tackle Uncle Sam,
"Ten thousand Johnny Rebs
"Can tell you that project, Debs,
"Ain't worth a tinker's dam."

Asked if he believed the strike situation was growing worse, Stimson said that "in general, the situation is getting rather worse." He turned to Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson, who has direct charge of production matters, for verification. Patterson replied that the actual number of men out on strike is now smaller than before, but that the Allis-Chalmers strike stretching out into its tenth week "is serious."

The Secretary described the request of Gov. Heil of Wisconsin for Federal aid in the strike as a "rather piteous appeal" and said it indicated the need of forming State home guards to replace National Guardsmen called into Federal service.

He noted that Wisconsin had authorized such a force, but that it "had done nothing to make that authority effective." Only nine States—Florida, Indiana, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Connecticut and New Hampshire—have as yet requisitioned arms and equipment for home guard units, he stated.

Air Armada Raids Bristol; Toll Is Small

By the United Press

Bristol, England, April 4.—An armada of several hundred German planes, attempting to subject this vital west coast port area to "Plymouth-type" destruction, hurled thousands of bombs on a 150-mile-wide stretch of English countryside last night and early today.

Only one of the great fleet of raiders was known to have been shot down in the four-hour attack, but others may have been destroyed or crippled by antiaircraft fire.

Many fires broke out, among them one at a small hotel, but all were controlled quickly. British night-fighters were heard among the planes over the area.

Damage and casualties were mostly confined to suburban and rural districts. The toll of life and property was believed to have been comparatively small. Hundreds of incendiaries and bombs fell harmlessly on open ground. The countryside was brilliantly lighted at times as German "chandelier flares" floated down.

First reports indicated only two dead and a dozen injured.

(Bristol, on the Bristol Channel, is an important port of arrival for United States shipments, and, like the recent bombings of Plymouth and Southampton, presumably was attacked in force in an effort to disrupt port facilities and hamper the flow of American aid.)

London early today had its first night attack in two weeks. There was one evening alarm without any gunfire being heard, and another about midnight.

Strike Suspends Production Of Midget Scout Cars for Army

By the Associated Press

Butler, Pa., April 3.—Operations of the American Bantam Car Corporation plant, which is turning out midget reconaissance cars for the Army, have been suspended because of lack of materials, Francis H Fenn, president, reported today.

Fenn said that as a result of a strike of grinding-machine operators at the Hillsdale, Mich., plant of the Spicer Manufacturing Co. the Bantam plant was unable to obtain an adequate supply of transfer cases to equip the cars.

New Bethlehem Dispute

Pottstown, Pa., April 3 (AP).—An official of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee announced that 50 cranemen stopped work yesterday at the Bethlehem Steel Co. plant here because, he said, the firm refused to negotiate a request for wage increases.

Peter McCagno, S. W. O. C. subregional director, said the work stoppage had "seriously crippled" production in several departments of the plant, where approximately 1,400 men are employed. Company officials declined to comment.

S. W. O. C. strikes at Bethlehem's Johnstown and Bethlehem, Pa., plants were settled last week. A similar walkout occurred in February at the Lackawanna, N. Y., plant.

Oakland Strike Arbitrated

Oakland, Calif., April 3 (U.P.).—Terms for settlement of a strike that closed four General Motors plants in Oakland March 18 were reached tonight by representatives of General Motors and United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.).

Omar F. Hoskins, Federal conciliator who has participated in the negotiations, said terms are being submitted to a membership meeting of the union tonight for ratification.

Stockyard Agreement Expected

Chicago, April 3 (AP).—John L. Connor, Federal labor conciliator, reported tonight that he was "very hopeful" that a settlement would be reached tomorrow in the contract dispute between the operators of the Union Stock Yards and their 600 employes.

He said considerable progress was made in the negotiations today.

The C. I. O. Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee has threatened to tie up the yards with a strike unless their demands were met.

A contract between the union and the Union Stock Yard & Transit Co., operators of the yards, expired March 15. The workers have asked for an eight-hour, 40-hour week and an increase in hourly minimum wages from 55 cents to 75, as well as reinstatement of a discharged employe.

Shell Plant to Resume

Buffalo, N. Y., April 3 (AP).—A two-day work stoppage at the American Car & Foundry Co. plant which curtailed production of shells for Great Britain ended today with A. F. of L. and C. I. O. leaders accepting a second basis for settlement.

An agreement was announced by United States Labor Conciliator Thomas M. Finn after conferences with representatives of the company, employing 1,400, and A. F. of L. Federal Local 22518 which called the walkout yesterday.

The A. F. of L. local, which claims 900 members, called the "holiday" because of what it alleged was the firm's violation of a year's contract signed January 20, concerning overtime payments, piece-work rates and seniority rights.

The S. W. O. C., claiming 700 members and which has petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for a bargaining election at the plant, joined the stoppage, but denied responsibility for it.

Strike Truce Voted

South Plainfield, N. J., April 3 (AP). Cornell Dubilier Corporation employes, who have been on strike since March 10 voted today to accept an agreement reached at conferences with the National Defense Mediation Board and to return to work Monday.

As this strike ended another work stoppage began, however, when C. I. O. workers left their jobs at the Bloomfield plant of the Delco Remy battery division of General Motors, refusing to work beside two non-union men. He said about 300 workers were affected by the shutdown.

Don't Indict Labor as Whole, McCormack Pleads in House

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

As Democratic leader John McCormack warned his colleagues yesterday not to "indict" organized labor as a whole, a full-fledged House inquiry into the defense program was scheduled to begin Monday with testimony of Clarence A. Dykstra, head of the National Mediation Board.

Denouncing "Communist leadership" in the Allis-Chalmers strike, Representative McCormack told the House that he expected President Roosevelt to "speak" to labor. He added that he thought labor would "respond."

"Does not the gentleman think that it is about time for him to speak?" queried Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia.

"Yes, and I am satisfied that he is going to speak," replied the majority leader, "and is going to appeal to those influences who will repudiate the leadership of division, the leadership of hate, in labor."

"I'm satisfied that he will bear down—in a constitutional way."

Last night there were reports that the President would make a statement today.

To Call Defense Leaders

Acting less than 24 hours after House approval of a broad investigation into the rearmament effort, the Military Affairs Committee decided to call Dykstra, OPM Director William S. Knudsen, Associate Director Sidney Hillman, Secretary of Labor Perkins and Director of Priorities Edward R. Stettinius, jr. to testify early next week.

It was learned that the committee may also call labor and management representatives of the Allis Chalmers Co. and the Ford Motor Co., both vital industries affected by strike disturbances.

To Sift Costs

Chairman May of the Military Affairs Committee said it was his intention "to inquire into unnecessary costs and into the extent to which the preparedness program has been delayed." Representative Thomasson, of Texas, ranking Democrat, commented that "we'll head right into the labor situation to find out about both management and labor—we don't want just one side."

Through its speedy decision to begin Monday, the Military Affairs Committee stole a march on the other two official Congressional investigations into the defense program. (The Military Affairs group has for several weeks been conducting on its own responsibility an inquiry into certain defense matters, notably land purchases, cantonment construction and contracts. It did not have subpoena power however, which it now has under Wednesday's House resolution.)

The House Naval Affairs Committee, also authorized to examine defense matters, and the special Senate investigation will not commence hearings until the week of April 14.

Senator Truman said that his committee was "cooperating with both House investigations."

Majority Leader McCormack took the House floor yesterday shortly after Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, asserted that "it is time for the President to begin to cooperate with the defense program."

Praises Roosevelt

Asserting that "if ever a man has been leader of the defense program, it has been President Roosevelt," Representative McCormack observed that "the President knows that we cannot indict all of labor for what a small group does; he knows that labor, as such, is patriotic."

However, said the majority leader, "we all agree on the Allis-Chalmers strike; we know that the Communists are in there getting in their work. A small group of fine Americans out there are being influenced by them, but they should awaken to the realization that there is communistic leadership engaged in that strike."

Noting that the House Judiciary Committee has been conducting hearings on labor impediments in the defense effort, the majority leader said: "We are awaiting their report. This House cannot act until a report comes out of a committee. To write labor legislation on the floor is wrong."

To Continue Hearings

The Judiciary Committee is planning to continue its hearings. It has thus far steadfastly refrained from reporting out any legislation on the strike problem; and, of course, will not suggest new law during the nine-day Easter recess that began last night.

In the Senate, however, the report persisted that an attempt might be made to attach a rider to some pending bill in order to give the Government power to take over industrial plants that are tied up by strikes.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, reiterated his belief yesterday that the first legislative remedy should be to clothe the National Relations Board with power to handle all strikes—not merely the ones referred to it by the Labor Department.

If the board failed to obtain a voluntary settlement of disputes, he said, it should have the authority to arbitrate, under legislation that would forbid interruption to production while the issue was being settled.

Anthracite Miners' Group Asks Pay Rise

New York, April 3 (AP).—A $1-a-day wage increase for hard-coal miners paid by the day or month and a 20 per cent boost for miners working on a tonnage basis were recommended to the convention of anthracite miners by its scale committee today.

The tri-district convention of the United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.) will decide the proposals to be placed before operators next week when negotiations for a new contract open. The present two-year pact expires April 30.

Immediately after the scale committee's report, the convention adjourned until tomorrow to give the 350 delegates an opportunity to study the proposals.

Contrary to expectations, the committee did not propose a reduction in the present working hours—seven-hour day and five-day week.

"In the interest of national defense, we deem it advisable not to press for the six-hour day," the report said.

Want $4.62 Minimum

The committee also recommended that the union seek two-week vacations with pay, time and a half for overtime and double time for Sundays and holidays, and an agreement to provide that none working around the mines should receive less than $4.62 for a seven-hour day.

The present contract provides a minimum of $4.62 a day for outside workers and $5.96 for company miners, with the tonnage rates varying considerably.

Other proposals were for a system of seniority and a clause to prevent dismissals on account of age.

The proposals followed closely those sought by the union in the now deadlocked negotiations for a new contract in the bituminous fields.

Pensions at 55 Urged

The convention, representing more than 100,000 miners in eastern Pennsylvania fields, earlier adopted a resolution urging that the Social Security Act be amended to enable workers to start receiving benefits at the age of 55, instead of 65 as at present.

Meanwhile, differences between Northern and Southern bituminous coal operators were indicated today as the chief obstacle to the ending the work stoppage which closed most of the Nation's soft coal mines two days ago.

While there was no official word on the situation, it was learned reliably that the Northern operators were in a mood to break away and sign separately on terms agreeable to the union, unless the operators find a common meeting ground within the next 12 hours. The disagreement among operators centered around the question of wage differentials between Northern and Southern fields.

No D. C. Price Rise, Coal Dealers Promise

Washington coal merchants yesterday promised their customers they have no intention of "profiteering or increasing prices" in view of the present strike in the bituminous coal industry.

Called in for a conference by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, executive vice chairman of the District Defense Council, the presentatives declared they have ample stocks for the needs of their customers "for some weeks to come" but urged commercial bituminous coal users not to call "upon their respective dealers for supplies except for current needs, and there will be ample coal to go around until mining operations are resumed."

The statement was issued by Worden W. Reed, chairman of the coal division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. He was accompanied to the conference by James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade, and Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the association.

Also present were Robert E. Bondy, welfare director, and Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, chairman of the subcommittee on consumers interest of the Defense Council.

Mediation News Quiets Allis Workers

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Leaders of rival workers' groups at the strike-bound Allis-Chalmers factory in Milwaukee, Wis., called off demonstrations scheduled for today after being informed of the National Defense Mediation Board's request to union and management representatives to confer here tomorrow.

Besides avoiding almost certain resumption of rioting and clashes between groups of striking C. I. O. unionists and employes who planned to force resumption of operations, cancellation of the plans was also hailed here as indicative of a more conciliatory attitude by both parties to the dispute.

Before receipt of the board's conference request, dispatched yesterday by Chairman Clarence A. Dykstra to Max W. Babb, company president, and Harold Christoffel, auto workers union head, the union, joined by the C. I. O. Industrial Union Council of Milwaukee, had scheduled a "holiday" and parade to demonstrate workers' solidarity. On the other hand, employes who had heeded the Government's back-to-work plea earlier this week, only to remain idle when rioting forced a new closure of the plant, had planned to attempt resumption of operations regardless of a picket-line barrier.

Board Panel Named

They were requested by officials of the plant to postpone their plans.

In calling both sides to the Saturday conference, Dr. Dykstra also announced that the board panel which will attempt to settle the dispute will consist of Vice Chairman William H. Davis, as public representative; Cyrus Ching and Eugene Meyer, employer members, and Thomas Kennedy, of the C. I. O., and Robert Watt, alternate for the A. F. of L. member, to represent labor.

Significantly, in his telegram to Babb, Dykstra departed from the wording of telegrams sent in previous strike cases certified to the board, by asking Babb to bring with him "such other members of your board of directors" as he desired.

The wording of the invitation would appear to exclude the presence of company vice president and General Counsel Harold Story, hitherto a central figure in negotiations and reputedly the least conciliatory of company officials.

The conference invitation did not include, as was usual in past cases, a request for plant and strikers to resume work. The omission, it was inferred, arose from the unsuccessful attempts toward this end by Secretary of Navy Knox and OPM Chief Knudsen, who issued a back-to-work call last week. Attempts to carry it out led to the clashes between police, pickets and workers seeking to enter the gates.

Asked for comment on charges of John L. Lewis, president of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers, that the board's previous back-to-work calls constituted a "strike-busting" technique, the chairman replied:

"I don't consider this is a strike-breaking board. The board will do its best under the order given to it by the President."

Dykstra Releases Telegram

At the same time, Dykstra made public a telegram from Frank Sylva, director of the C. I. O. farm equipment workers' organizing committee, involved in the Harvester strike, threatening new strike action. It read:

"Company has flagrantly violated their word about no discrimination and this very minute are allowing company union elements to roam the plant in an undisciplined mob terrorizing our membership. Many tractor stewards have told me today that they are proposing restrike action . . . This is a serious matter and if what goes on now in the McCormick plants is continued tomorrow you may expect serious results."

From the company, however, came a flat denial of the charges and insistence that no "mob" was roving the plant. S. G. McAllister, company official, wired Dykstra that there may have been minor clashes between individual A. F. of L. and C. I. O. members, but that superintendents were making every effort to preserve peace.

May 4 to Start U. S. Job Week

President Roosevelt yesterday proclaimed the week beginning May 4 as National Employment Week "to the end that interests in the welfare of all those not now working, and especially the worker over 40, may be stimulated and employment be extended to them."

He spoke specifically of the World War veterans, "men who now average 48 years of age," and who, I feel, have a special appeal to our national sense of responsibility particularly during this time of national preparation."

The text of the proclamation follows:

By the President of the United States.
A Proclamation.

Despite great expansions in employment resulting directly and indirectly from our vast national defense program, the State and Federal governments continue to be concerned with the problems of older workers, many of whom still lack a place in industry. Among these are a considerable number of World War veterans, men who now average 48 years of age, and who, I feel, have a special appeal to our national sense of responsibility particularly during this time of national defense preparation.

Special Efforts Made

The United States Employment Service—a Nation-wide network of 1,500 offices operated jointly by the State and Federal Governments—has made special efforts in behalf of workers past 40 years of age, including veterans. In the interest of utilizing all possible skills in our defense program, I urge that employers review carefully their standards of physical qualifications to assure that these valuable workers are not barred from employment. We know from available facts that men and women in middle life possess abilities and skills which fit them for employment in nearly every line of work, and that they have a definite contribution to make at this time of increasing shortages of experienced workers. It is important in our national defense effort that we fully and effectively use the available man-power of the Nation.

A year ago I designated a national employment week during which I asked that all our citizens give particular and active attention to the problem of older workers who lack employment. The concerted efforts of Government, many public-spirited groups and particularly of employers throughout the land, resulted in the employment of thousands of workers past 40, among them many veterans.

Grateful for Response

I am grateful for the wholehearted response to that appeal, and as President, I desire to encourage a continued Nation-wide interest in this persistent problem.

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do hereby declare the week beginning May 4, 1941, as National Employment Week, and Sunday, May 4, 1941, as National Employment Sunday. I urge all churches, civic organizations, chambers of commerce, boards of trade, veterans' organizations, industry, labor, public-spirited citizens, radio and the press throughout the United States to observe that week as National Employment Week, to the end that interest in the welfare of all those not now working and especially the worker over 40, may be stimulated and employment be extended to them.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Jackson Urges Americans To Give Hitler a Trojan Horse

Copyright by New York Times

New York, April 3.—An argument that the United States should turn Hitler's propaganda tables against him and "out fifth column the master Fifth Columnist himself" was advanced by Attorney General Robert H. Jackson tonight. He spoke at a dinner of the Common Council for American Unity.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, presided as honorary chairman of the national committee of the council.

The Attorney General held that Germany was now much more vulnerable than the United States to Fifth Column activities, because of the millions of "alien and unwilling subjects" Hitler has brought under his rule, and predicted that Hitler would have even less success than the kaiser did in 1917-18 in attempting to divide the American people on national and racial lines and thus disrupt our national unity.

The dinner, the first large public event sponsored by the organization under its present title, was intended to bring together old-stock Americans and representatives of the many racial and national groups that make up the United States, as a demonstratiion of their unity in support of American democracy and defense even though their native countries are divided by war.

The council is continuing the work of the Foreign Language Information Service, an outgrowth of the United States committee on public information in the World War, and was organized to promote the education, citizenship and assimilation of the foreign-born.

U. S. Sales Tax for Defense Gains Support; 54% Now Are in Favor, Survey Finds

Princeton, N. J., April 3.—With some observers estimating that the cost of the defense program may run to as high as $40,000,000,000, one of the important questions before the country is how to pay this bill.

There can be little question that the public is prepared to dig down in its pockets for increased taxes for defense. That fact has been established in many recent surveys of public opinion by the Institute. The majority are willing to pay more in income taxes, and have already accepted other increased levies. Now a proposal which is receiving renewed attention is the proposal that the Federal Government levy a general sales tax.

2 Per Cent Levy Favored

The public has opposed a Federal sales tax up until now. But today, for the first time, sentiment has changed to a point where a majority of voters approve of a 2 per cent Federal levy on all sales in order to help pay the cost of national defense.

This sentiment is revealed in a survey which put the sales tax issue before a cross-section of persons who voted, or were eligible to vote, in the Presidential election last November. The issue was stated as follows:

"In order to help pay the cost of national defense, would you favor, or oppose, a Federal sales tax of 2 per cent on everything you buy (in addition to State and local sales taxes now in effect)?"

A similar question was put to the voters in a survey last January. A comparison of the results, showing the trend of sentiment in favor of sales taxes among those with opinions, follows:

	JAN.	TODAY
Favor sales tax for defense	46%	54%
Oppose sales tax for defense	54	46

In today's survey the proportion of persons expressing no opinion on the issue was 8 per cent; in the January survey it was 9 per cent.

If the percentages for the sales tax are applied against the eligible voting population, the results indicate about 27.5 million voters in favor of the defense sales tax last January, and approximately 32.5 million in favor of it today.

Poor Most Opposed

As might be expected, the greatest opposition to the sales tax comes from the lower economic levels. In those levels the Institute's interviewers found the greatest number of persons saying that "We have too many taxes now," and that a sales tax would pinch the poor people more than the rich.

However, even in the low income group ($20 a week or less), a sizable number are willing to pay a Federal sales tax. Forty-eight per cent with opinions favor it, 52 per cent oppose it.

Greatest approval of the sales tax comes from the above average income groups. The typical voter in these groups feels that the adoption of a sales tax would spread the taxation burden more evenly, instead of placing it largely on the shoulders of the rich.

U. S. Experts Unimpressed By Nazi Plane

By the Associated Press

Downey, Calif., April 3 (AP).—Vultee Air Corporation engineers took a quick look at a German Messerschmit 110 and reported today:

At least four American-made fighter planes are equal to, and in some respects superior to, the famed Nazi craft.

The Messerschmit, shot down in Britain, was received at the Vultee plant yesterday for detailed study.

William G. Wilson, Vultee traffic manager, reported after a preliminary study:

"Fighter planes produced by Vultee, Wright, Lockheed and Curtis are as good as the Messerschmit in construction, and in general our instruments are finer, more reliable and more versatile.

He said that if there is any lesson to be learned from the captive machine, it may be in the streamlined aerodynamics of the wing structure, plus the ship's ability to maintain high speed—365 miles an hour—throughout its cruising range of 850 miles.

Engineers discovered that the Messerschmit uses the control stick instead of the wheel common to American planes. Wilson said the Germans may be convinced the old-fashioned stick permits greater maneuverability.

The Nazi plane has a wingspread of 55 feet, length of 35 feet and weighs 14,000 pounds. It carries two 20 mm. cannon and two fixed 30 caliber machine guns, all firing through the nose. A third machine gun was on a movable mount from the rear of the single cockpit.

Two 11,050 horsepower Daimler-Benz motors powered the machine, which was shot down within the past six months. Engineers were elated that it is one of the Nazis' latest models—and only slightly damaged.

William H. Jackson Marks 98th Year

William Henry Jackson, pioneer photographer in America, will celebrate his ninety-eighth birthday anniversary today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. A. Pattison, in Chevy Chase.

Jackson was the first to photograph the primitive wonders of the Yellowstone country, as a member of the Hayden expeditions of 1871-72. After serving in the Union Army in the Civil War, Jackson went as a bullwhacker on a covered wagon with a party of 300 Mormons 1,000 miles over the Oregon Trail to Salt Lake City. Sent around the world in 1896 by Harper's Weekly, he brought back many of the first pictures of foreign lands some Americans had seen.

GHA-Doctors' Case Rests With Jury

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Two months after their swearing-in, a jury in District Court today will take in hand the organized medical profession, to decide whether its more than 100,000 members are activated by selfish or altruistic impulses.

As the line is drawn, the jurors' verdict will be narrowed down to the guilt or innocence of the American Medical Association, District Medical Society and 18 individual physicians in the stand they took against Group Health Association.

But closing arguments yesterday left no doubt that fundamental motives are the thing. That G. H. A. is but the vehicle by which an entire American profession either will be vindicated or besmirched.

William E. Leahy, chief of counsel for the defense, put it this way as, in Justice James M. Proctor's crowded, yet expectantly silent, courtroom, he concluded his four-and-a-half-hour argument:

"Most of those who are within the age have been across the water, some of them are now engaged in the work of building up the national defense. Do you think men of that ilk and stripe would stand here and violate the law, or do you think they have worked for you, for men, for us all?

Lewin Calls Plea "Emotional"

"I ask you that, by your verdict, they shall be found free of this vile, this unnecessary, this sadistic accusation which would crush them to the grave."

In his 75-minute rebuttal, John Henry Lewin, special assistant to the Attorney General, deprecated Leahy's plea as emotional rather than rational, shouting that "a doctor is no more above Federal law than the poor cigarette or orange vendor in the street."

The charge against the defendants is that they violated the Sheramn Act by obstructing and boycotting Group Health Association, medical care cooperative for Government employes in Washington.

This morning Justice Proctor will instruct the jury—ten men and two women—and then turn over the case to its deliberations.

Winding up a suit upon which he and his colleague, Grant W. Kelleher, have worked since it was in the pre-indictment stage, Lewin's final argument was a scathing denunciation not only of the accused doctors, but of the whole structure of their legal defense.

"Very able and persuasive, indeed, was Mr. Leahy's argument," he told the jury, "if you happen to be emotional and are willing to shut your minds to the overwhelming evidence that his clients have supplied to you, without a reasonable doubt, the answer to the issue.

"Because of lack of evidence, he had to talk to you about false issues."

The charge that the Government tried to inflame the jurors' minds came from a man (Leahy) "who devoted 90 per cent of his time to confession and throwing himself upon your sympathy," Lewin said.

Charges "Medical Politics"

Arm-swinging and mobile, in contrast to Leahy, who could have stood on a dime while he addressed the jury, Lewin renewed his charge that the defense injected into the case a "muckraking, hearsay-on-hearsay" letter in an attempt to impeach the character of Dr. Raymond E. Selders, former GHA staff surgeon.

"Dr. Selders, if he had had the qualifications of Sir William Osler, would still have been faced with obstacles that he couldn't crack," the prosecutor cried.

He accused the doctors of playing "medical politics," ready to "brand as immoral or unmoral any plan that seemed to cut in on their purse."

Resuming at 10 a. m. where he left off when court was recessed Wednesday, Leahy consumed the rest of the morning and part of the afternoon heaping criticism on the Government's case and its tactics, thus making the feeling mutual.

Claims Documents Withheld

He said the prosecution "twisted and distorted" the purpose of the A. M. A.'s so-called Mundt resolutioin, which recommended that hospital staffs be composed entirely of association members. Everything the two accused societies and their members did was given a suspicious tinge by the Government, Leahy charged.

"What manner of men and women do they think a jury is composed of?" he cried. "Do they think you have lost your reason, too?"

He charged Government counsel with holding back certain documents, the better "to poison your minds," adding that he did not think "they would have the hardihood or temerity to use the Selders case against the medical profession."

Dr. Selders, now believed to be practicing medicine in Texas, was denied privileges by Washington hospitals in 1937-38 because of pressure allegedly brought to bear upon them by the District Medical Society and its defendant members.

Leahy chided the prosecution for not bringing him to the stand and argued that no Washington hospital ever denied its services to a G. H. A. patient.

One by one he mentioned the instances where, according to opposing counsel, Emergency, Garfield and Sibley Hospitals were guilty of shabby treatment to G. H. A. members. In none of the cases did the hospitals do anything culpable, the doctors' counsel said.

Profiteers in Defense Are Traitors to U. S., Martin Says

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., Republican national chairman, in a Nation-wide broadcast last night warned that "this is no time for strikes or lockouts which prevent us from achieving the earliest possible adequate defense."

Martin, recently reelected to head the G. O. P. National Committee, also warned that "those who may seek to take advantage of this perilous hour to exploit the Nation's needs to their own profit" will be condemned by the public as "traitors."

A strong and virile minority party he declared essential to "police and audit the New Deal Administration to protect our country from financial, political and social bankruptcy."

Martin said the Nation is confronted by two "great dangers." He declared the first is that "some groups may seek to make use of our present emergency and the great burden of debt we are piling up to destroy our economic and political system." The second, he said, is that the Republican Party, "suddenly returned to power through reaction against the New Deal, might lack a carefully prepared program of action."

"Unity in Defense"

Repeating in substance what he told the Republican National Committee, Martin said all wanted unity when "it aids in preservation of America," but no unity could be expected "in any policy which would destroy the two-party system of government."

"We must, of course, have unity in our defense plans," Martin said. "Republicans, Democrats and Independents must stand together to make our Nation invincible against any assault whether it should come from outside or inside of the country. Events abroad should not be permitted to distract us from the vigilance required at home. Our greatest danger is still from insidious inside forces. That fact will be apparent to every American as we proceed with the deefnse program."

He said vast powers granted the President, bewildering sums voted for defense and enormous taxes soon to be imposed do not present "a pleasant picture."

Powers granted the President, he declared, must be policed by the Republican Party "to assure, as far as possible, their wise administration." The party, he added, "must be ready to fight to restore those powers to the people's representatives when the emergency has ended."

"Fatal Mistakes"

Discussing the strike situation, he said:

"No honest American workman wants to defeat the security of his country. No American worker wants to imperil the welfare of his people. Honest workers are just as unselfish and patriotic as any other class of citizens. Under honest, patriotic leadership, American workers will respond to the call of their country as readily as those men who serve under arms. Waste of time, waste of money, waste of men—these are the fatal mistakes that could end the glorious reality of a free America.

"A grave responsibility rests upon us all, whether we be Republicans or Democrats, employer or employe, public official or private citizen. We must unselfishly contribute all we can to our national security."

Man Drowned After Fall From Pier in Sleep

John Homer Brown, 46, of 1660 Avon Place Northwest, drowned in the Potomac River yesterday when he apparently fell asleep on a pier at the foot of Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, and rolled into the water 15 feet below.

His body was found 2 feet from the shore lying in shallow water by Andrew Coleback, of 3102 M Street Northwest, who was fishing along the seawall.

Two Seventh Precinct patrolmen, A. F. Scheible and C. W. Disney, pulled Brown from the water, but he was dead when a doctor from Emergency Hospital arrived.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, of the homicide squad, said Brown had a cut on his head. It is believed he struck a wooden pile which knocked him unconscious before he hit the water.

SUMMER ARRIVES ON APRIL 12 THIS YEAR! For that's the date of Glen Echo's opening which makes summer official. This is the earliest date ever for an Echo opening, beating last year's opening on April 13 by just 24 hours. If we live long enough we expect to see Boss Man Leonard Schloss opening Glen Echo with a Valentine party . . . Paul Kain and his radio orchestra will be on the bandstand again in the Spanish Garden Ballroom with beauteous Adele Van as their nightingale. The Kains raised musical cain so gorgeously last season that they were signed up for 1941 months ago.

Blond Boris, Metronome Room captain, will sing in Jack Coffey's floor show next week. Boris was dragged out on the floor at the April Fool's party as a joke, astounded everyone by singing handsomely. It turns out that he's been studying voice for years. And he's as good-looking as Nelson Eddy.

TROIKA BOOKS OPERATIC SOPRANOS. Martha Errol of "Blossom Time" will double in soprano next week by also singing at Troika's midnight show. She was last seen in Washington in "One Night of Love" . . . Soprano Marjorie Gainesworth, who has often appeared at the Capitol Theater, has also been booked by Owner Helen Hamilton and will open on April 14 . . . Troika's new dancer, Gloria Belmonte, takes special pride in her last name. It was an official gift from Juan Belmonte, the world's greatest bullfighter and idol of all aficionados . . . Singer Rosita Rios will go to New York next week for a screen test. It's believed she will give real competition to Carmen Miranda.

STARLIGHT, STAR BRIGHT! The Starlight Roof of the Roger Smith Hotel will open May 29, says Manager Daniel Wathey, who also imparts the pleasant news that it's almost as certain that Arthur Herbert and his orchestra will return as that Easter is coming.

OLMSTED'S CHANGES MANAGEMENT. Olmsted's new ownership has just acquired two star figures in the restaurant world. Leo Tos has left L'Escargot to become the new manager and Eugene Bianchi, former chef for Archduke Otto of Austria, is the new head chef at Olmsted's. Leo, who first came to prominence as the greeter at the uppity Heigh Ho Club, has thousands of friends who'll want to congratulate him on his important new post. Chef Bianchi, whose fine cookery has been appreciated at London's Savoy Hotel and the Hay-Adams House in Washington, plans to introduce a variety of specialties and unusual dishes on the Olmsted menu.

Carmen Cavallaro, of the Cosmos Room wants you all to know that his name is pronounced "Cavallarrow." Don't speak the "l's" as "y." They're just "l's."

EXTENSION CHAMPIONS. The Gentlemen of Rhythm who open at Mayfair on Monday have a 100 per cent record on engagement extensions. They have stayed for longer than their original booking on their every engagement. And the list of places where they've played occupies almost a page of typewriting, ranging from Montreal's Mount Royal to the St. Charles in New Orleans. They are booked through the Music Corporation of America, the equivalent of a guarantee of 24-karat melody.

ON THE LINE WITH CONSIDINE. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Considine were regaling friends in the Mayflower Lounge the other afternoon with tales of their Nassau interview with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. Mildred Considine posed for movies with the Duchess, can hardly wait for the film to be developed. But Bob's breaker-upper story was the one about discovering that the Brooklyn Dodgers' Florida training headquarters is a sanitarium.

WESTERN ATMOSPHERE is rife in the Hi Hat and Casino Royal this week. Gene Autry's cowboys spend a lot of time in Hi Hat when they're not riding or being bucked off broncos and Brahmas. They come right in wearing their rodeo clothes. . . . The sassy little Muriel Kretlow Dancers are conducting a sort of rodeo of their own at Casino Royal. They literally rope the customers right out onto the floor.

Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room spent a recent afternoon figuring out how many numbers he can play from memory: They added up to 959. He's going to learn 41 more very soon so he can make it a round 1,000.

PARLOR TRICKS. Ben Hellman, of the Neptune Room is a wonderful piano player, but we're crazy about his popcorn trick. He puts a piece of popcorn on the back of his hand, hits it a brisk rap and, presto! the popcorn pops right into Bert's month. If you think it's easy, just try it . . . "Mayor" Ciro, of the Famous Village can flip a half dollar over on his wrist by just tightening his muscles. He says it's easy for him because he has so much electricity in his system. The human powerhouse, eh? . . . Paul Young, of Paul Young's can wiggle his scalp so that all of his heavy mop of black hair moves uncannily. It scares onlookers more than "Dracula."

BONNIE BOYD,
songbird of the Mayflower Lounge. This picture taken by "Ha-Cha" Gardner of Dick Koons' Orchestra

"AMA POLLA," the pretty Mexican song that's sweeping the country, is really an old, old song according to two Mexicans. Lina d'Acosta, of the Silver Fox and Vicente de la Garza, of El King Cole Room, Lina says she was singing it in France when Hitler was just a petty politican. Vicente said he's been singing it as long as he can remember, added that he first sang "Frenesi" in 1938, "Perfidia" in 1932 and "Quiero Mucho" in 1927.

SHOREHAM VIEWS. Singer Marjorie King looking especially lovely in a highly becoming deep blue gown with white jacket . . . Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones dropping in solo to see the floor show . . . Herbert Sachs, owner of the late lamented and cremated Del Rio, with his mother, Mrs. Sarah Sachs, his sister Cecelia and aviator brother Harris and several aunts. It was a birthday party for Mrs. Sachs, who left for Florida the following morning . . . Kenny and Norris, most wonderful acrobats we've ever seen. You'll enjoy 'em even if you're an acrobat hater . . . The smickety-smick of beautiful little Honey Murray's tap stepping . . . Dancer Vera Fern swirling in a rainbow of lemon, pink and mauve tulle.

Tanya, of the Lotus is the most exotic dancer who's arrived here in months. Both her rooster and fire dance are infused with the spirit of voodoo.

IMPORTANT SNIPPETS. Bob Holben, saxist of Lounge Riviera, is married to the sister of singer Penny Ford . . . Violinist Durward Bowersox, of the Rainbow Room is looking forward to army life . . . Loezi, cymbalon player at the Plymouth, looks like the twin of Madrillon's Lou Franco . . . Bill and John Kavakos, owners of Kavakos' Grill, look like twins, but aren't . . . Patsy Zarzour, dazzling blonde hostess at Restaurant "823," has won two bathing beauty contests . . . Hogate's cocktail special is called the "Commodore Forsberg."

THE PAN-AMERICAN TOUCH is being given to Rodd Raffell's Nightingale band by a new giant size tom-tom and tricky cymbals. The 'Gale is now all set to go south of the border.

Army Silent on Fort Meade Waste Charge

War Department officials declined to comment yesterday on charges made in the House that hundreds of thousands of dollars had been wasted in the expansion of Fort Meade, Md., due to "incompetency and inefficiency" of Army officials.

Secretary Stimson, asked about the charges made by Representative Engel (Republican), Michigan, and his demand that those responsible be court-martialed and "kicked out of the Army," said he "didn't think it necessary to answer that now."

"All those matters are going to be investigated fully by a Senate committee in a week or two, and we will present the facts then," he stated. A committee headed by Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, is beginning a general investigation of the defense program later in the month.

Engel told the House that the Army had paid a Baltimore engineering firm $40,120 for surveys and then had ignored its recommendation for the location of new buildings at the post.

Says Advice Was Ignored

He said that a considerable part of the increased construction costs was due to the fact that the Army did not follow the engineers' advice to build the new camp on the site of the old World War cantonment. Roads and utilities still in existence could have been utilized, he said.

While military authorities would not comment on the charges, attention was called to testimony given to a House committee some weeks ago by Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Army construction chief. When questioned on the point, Somervell said that Maj. Gen. James K. Parson, then Third Corps Area commander, had "insisted on" a new camp site because he felt it was "better adapted for the training of the troops."

Engel stated that engineers had informed him that the old concrete roads and sewer lines on the World War camp site were in good condition and could have been used. He said that many construction difficulties occurred which greatly increased the cost of the project and which could have been avoided by using the old site.

The estimated cost of the Meade cantonment was $9,053,187, while the actual cost will be $23,117,000, Engel stated. He demanded that the Army officers responsible for "this willful, extravagant and outrageous waste" be "kicked out" of the service.

Discussing the labor situation at Fort Meade during the construction of the camp, Engel criticized Secretary of Labor Perkins for fixing higher wage rates for Fort Belvoir, Va., than for Meade. This drove the better workmen to the Virginia post and resulted in the contractor paying extra pay for overtime to keep other workmen, he claimed.

The camp, he stated, was operated as a "closed shop" and unions there charged initiation fees ranging from $25 to $57.50.

"The contractor informed me," Engel stated, "that while he had to hire through the union, he could fire anyone he wanted to fire, for any cause, without interference by the union. It was naively suggested that the more men he fired the more fees the union could collect."

Dumbarton Oaks Park Opening Postponed

The opening of Dumbarton Oaks Park, 3100 block R Street Northwest, scheduled for tomorrow, has been postponed to Saturday, April 12, because the cool weather has delayed the annual spring show of the foliage, National Capital Parks office announced last night.

The park, formerly part of the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, was presented by them to the parks service last November.

House Votes Probe of U. S. Workers' Communist Ties

Solicitation in Government offices of Federal workers to attend Communist meetings was charged last night by Representative Robert F. Jones (Republican), of Ohio, author of an amendment, adopted by the House yesterday, which would direct the Federal Bureau of Investigation to investigate United States employes belonging to "subversive organizations."

Jones declared that one of the purposes of his amendment, the only change approved by the House as it sent the Justice Department appropriation bill to the Senate, is to find out who the solicitors are and what employes are attending Communist meetings.

The amendment, if approved by the Senate, would allocate $100,000 to the FBI "exclusively" for the purpose of investigating employes of "every department, agency and independent establishment of the Federal Government who are members of subversive organizations or who advocate overthrow of the Government." The measure directs the FBI to report its findiings to Congress.

Jones suggested that the FBI might start its investigation with the 563 Federal workers named by the Dies Committee in 1939 as members of the Washington branch of the American League for Peace and Democracy, now nonexistent but then described by the committee as a "Communist-front" organization.

The Ohioan said that he had written letters to all the Federal agencies where the persons listed were then employed. Replies received, he declared, showed that while some of the workers had since transferred to other agencies, a large majority of them are still on the Federal payroll.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, told The Post that he didn't know any Government workers who are members of subversive organizations, but added that "it wouldn't be surprising if, out of 1,200,000 people, there wouldn't be a few bad eggs."

Ramspeck was on the floor of the House when the Jones amendment was adopted by voice vote, with Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, the only dissenter.

The FBI and other Federal agencies already investigate Government employes. Ramspeck pointed out, asserting that the amendment might tie up funds which would otherwise be put to other uses. He cited the amendment's failure to limit the investigation to Washington employes and declared that $100,000 "is not a drop in the bucket" if the House expects to investigate Government workers in the field, as well as in the District.

Ramspeck declared that the time to investigate Government workers is before they are put on the pay rolls. The Civil Service Commission, he said, has been attempting this kind of an investigation, but never has been given enough money by Congress for the task.

As proposed by Jones, the amendment called for allocation of $200,000, but Representative Louis C. Rabaut (Democrat), of Michigan, who was in charge of the bill, said he would accept the change if the sum were halved.

Representative Noah Mason (Republican), of Illinois, a member of the Dies Committee, in a speech supporting the amendment, recalled that two years ago he had been accused of "trying to smear the New Deal" because he named a few Government employes as members of the League for Peace and Freedom.

"The day has come," Mason declared, "when we should point out and name those in the Federal service who have a Communist background."

Cole introduced a bill to authorize the Twenty-ninth Division Association to build the memorial in Washington in honor of its dead in France in the last World War.

Recall In Order

Rarely in American history has the Government of the United States found it necessary to ask for the recall of foreign diplomats or attaches accredited to it. In the case of Admiral Alberto Lais, the Italian naval attache, whose immediate recall has been requested, the Government, as Secretary Hull pointed out in his message to the Italian Ambassador, had "no alternative course." It is an established fact that an attempt was made to sabotage the 28 Italian ships in American waters. There is evidence that this illegal action which, fortunately, went only as far as to damage five ships, was undertaken after orders had been received by the crews of the Italian vessels from Italian representatives in this country. Whether the orders came from Admiral Lais himself or from a subordinate does not make any appreciable difference so far as the naval attache's responsibility is concerned. He was the willing or unwilling party to an infringement of the law and must suffer the consequences. The incident recalls the case of Capt. Carl Boy-ed, German naval attache at Washington between 1911-1915. He was the center of a widespread net of intrigue aimed at sabotaging munitions plants and shipments of war material to the Allies. When his machinations were finally exposed his recall was demanded. He left for Germany at the end of December, 1915, and there was as little sympathy with his case as there will be with Admiral Lais'.

A Warning Example

Coal mining is an industry that has been struggling for years to overcome the cutthroat competition that has kept coal prices at levels below average production costs. Both the first Guffey Coal Control Act, which was held to be unconstitutional, and the second act passed in 1937 were designed to put a floor under prices of coal sold at the mine and to regulate marketing practices. A bill providing for extension of the 1937 act, which expires at the end of this month, has just passed the House, and will shortly be acted upon by the Senate. It was not till last October that the Bituminous Coal Division of the Department of the Interior, successor to the National Bituminous Coal Commission set up under the Guffey Act, put into effect a schedule of minimum prices enforced by heavy penalties on sales below the official minima. Yet in spite of the industry's excess productive capacity, which requires protection against price-cutting, the National Defense Commission has found it necessary to issue an order setting ceiling or maximum prices for coal, so long as strikes paralyze production in the bituminous coal fields. Nothing could emphasize more forcefully the disrupting effect of labor troubles than this sudden shift from price-raising to price-restraining policies.

However, the establishment of maximum prices as a temporary measure to prevent profiteering—desirable as it is—would only slightly alleviate the hardships that would be inflicted upon the Nation if the United Mine Workers and the operators should fail to reach a speedy settlement of their differences. Even though competing fuels have made serious inroads on the coal mining industry, coal still supplies 75 per cent of the fuel and energy used in turning factory wheels, 85 per cent of that consumed by the railroads, and nearly half of the energy used by electric power plants. Directly or indirectly, coal is not only a basic industrial commodity, as Commissioner Henderson says; it also enters into the cost of living of consumers everywhere.

A prolonged strike in the bituminous coal fields is, as we well know, a major disaster at any time. It would be one of the worst things that could befall the country in these times of acute crisis with defense industries dependent upon steady supplies of fuel to complete preparedness work. The public is vitally interested not only in speedy settlement of the soft coal strike, but in a settlement that will make no concessions to unreasonable demands. It is surmised that the promptitude with which Commissioner Henderson acted to "freeze" coal prices at prestrike levels may have been due in part to a desire to stiffen operator resistance to wage demands that would so increase production costs as to force a rise in coal prices. Whether or not that was his purpose, that is likely to be the effect of the order. Preventive action putting a ceiling on price rises will, however, be of no avail unless a ceiling is also put on labor's demands for higher wages. Inflationary price movements in past emergencies have been touched off by pressure for higher wages, which in turn bring higher prices and renewed pressure from labor. In the long run rising living costs offset the momentary gains of labor, while production is inevitably retarded by the necessity of adjusting operations to mounting production costs.

Sea Power

A lull seems to have come over the Battle of the Atlantic. At least there is some encouragement to be found in the latest figures of shipping losses made public by the British Admiralty. They show that three weeks after what looked like the beginning of the Battle of the Atlantic, the ravages of German U-boats and bombing planes have been held in check. Whereas for the week ended March 3 a total of 141,314 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping was sent to the bottom, the week of March 16-23 saw the losses cut to 59,141 tons.

By no means does this prove that the British are out of the woods so far as the U-boat problem is concerned. What happened in World War I suggests that there is almost a tidal rhythm in submarine sinkings, the peaks being followed by periods of decline which, in turn, rise to new peaks. The British spokesmen who told the Associated Press in London that "it would be unwise to deduce that our troubles are nearly over or that we have mastered this great menace to our ultimate victory" was only emphasizing the obvious. Indeed, the rate of sinkings even at the present reduced level is still well above Britain's replacement capacity, the average for the past four weeks being at the rate of well over 5,000,000 tons a year.

Nevertheless the fact that losses since March 3 have been less must be comforting to the British. For it suggests that the measures which they have taken to overcome the dangers arising out of the German counterblockade have not been without effect. In addition to convoys and patrol planes, the British have been pounding away from the air at Germany's submarine bases on the Atlantic Coast. Now, with the Italian fleet reduced to shreds and tatters as a result of Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham's brilliant victory last week, it may be possible to transfer some warships from the Mediterranean to the Atlantic. This should ease the convoy problem. Yet the shipping situation will remain the No. 1 problem for the British unless and until losses can be kept down well below their present level.

It is up to us to weight the balance in Britain's favor in this vital battle. Sea power is the stake. In our hands or in those of the British the command of the seas is the only means which will enable us to maintain a decisive voice over our own destiny. Thus the Battle of the Atlantic is an American affair. Our part in it should be twofold. First, there must be a redirection of our industrial effort to what Arthur Krock calls "a priority of objectives," and the elevation of an enlarged shipbuilding program should be put in first place. And, secondly, we must dovetail our Battle of Production with the Battle of Transportation. Whether our role is actually to convoy the contents of our arsenal or to set aside for British use part of our naval establishment, this is a minor point. The nub is that we must relieve the British of some of the immense burden of transport while they are standing off the greatest challenge to our sheltered security in our national history.

Civic Unity

No citizen interested in the civic development of Washington should overlook the unanimity which has been attained in sponsorship of the bill to create a recreation commission. For ten years consolidation of recreational agencies in the District has been a subject of dispute among local officials and civic groups. Little has been done to improve the present unsatisfactory setup because there was no agreement as to where the necessary authority should be lodged. Now a compromise satisfactory to all groups, at least in principle, has been worked out, and the bill will doubtless be enacted by Congress.

Special commendation is due the Board of Education for its constructive attitude toward the bill. Playgrounds are and must continue to be an integral part of the school system. In the past some school authorities have feared that a centralized recreation agency would interfere with their playground activities. Safeguards against such interference have now been devised, and the board has wisely subordinated other objections to the general community welfare.

Here is an object lesson in cooperation that Washington may well take to heart. One of our greatest difficulties in getting legislation through Congress or even in securing action at the District Building is the tendency to present various plans rather than one representing a reasonable compromise of standpoints. This example of cooperative action is no less gratifying than the prospect of having a unified recreation program.

Long-Range Planning

The six-year program of public works recommended by the National Resources Planning Board has been rather hastily and undeservedly criticized as evidence of an intention to commit the Government to a large-scale post-defense spending schedule calculated to displace private industry and perpetuate pump-priming experiments. Examination of the full report and the board's introductory statement tend to dispel such fears. The board refers to its program as "a reservoir of long-range projects originated by Federal construction agencies from which Congress and the Administration can select activities in amounts and kinds appropriate to the times and the needs of the Nation." This is only one of many reports which have been issued by the planning board dealing with various aspects of the national economy and offering suggestions for long-range systematic development and utilization of our resources.

Public construction projects will always be necessary whether times are good or bad, normal or abnormal. Hence careful preliminary plans listing in order of importance the projects that must, should, or might eventually be undertaken and well-thought-out methods of procedure for getting such projects under way without delay are much to be desired. In the recommendations the board stresses the need for flexibility to allow for changing conditions. And it points out that flexibility, insofar as financial resources are concerned, is also provided since the formulation of the program entails no advance commitment to undertake any of the proposed projects. There is nothing to be lost and much to gain by having in reserve projects that could be launched if needed to ease the post-defense transition to a more normal industrial order of things. The lack of such plans in the past has meant waste of time and misdirected effort on the part of Government officials.

Virginia Woolf

The words "a born writer" have probably been applied as often to Virginia Woolf as to any other writer of her generation, though perhaps it could have been said with equal plausibility that she was a "made" one. On the side of heredity it can be argued that she was the granddaughter of the great Thackeray and the daughter of a distinguished critic, Sir Leslie Stephens, and that greatness was predicted for her, at the moment of birth, by our then Ambassador James Russell Lowell. On the side of environment it could be said that she was reared in an intensely literary atmosphere. The guests at her father's house included some of the most famous men of letters of the late Victorian period, and from childhood she was at home "in a roomful of poets and novelists." Anyway, taking heredity and environment together, it is difficult to see how she could have avoided becoming what she was, one of the most talented and influential authors of the postwar generation.

Like Joyce and Dorothy Richardson, who were approximately her contemporaries, she was "a writers' writer." That is to say, she had more direct influence on the work of other novelists than with the public, though her public was large and devoted. She, in turn, showed influences of other writers. She could be best described as a novelist of indirection. "Jacob's Room," published in 1922 and considered by some her masterpiece, was an evocation of a character almost entirely through a study of his effect on people and things. Three years earlier an interesting but much less skillful use of a similar method had been employed by another English woman, Clemence Dane, in "Legend." In this book the character of a woman is gradually developed through fragments of gossip or conversation about her after her death. Again, Mrs. Woolf's technically admirable "Mrs. Dalloway," dealing with one day in the life of a fashionable matron, seems to show an influence of the 24-hour odyssey of Leopold Bloom.

Mrs. Woolf's militant feminism as expounded in "A Room of One's Own" and the more recent "Three Guineas" had a curious anachronistic flavor. She seemed to be laboring points that she had already admitted to have been carried. Her own career, and many others in England and America, afford ample illustration that, other things being equal, sex is no longer a barrier to the full development of creative talent in woman. But whether the artificial "creativeness" of literature is not often made at the sacrifice of an even more urgent creativeness in womankind is still open to question.

The article, "G. O. P. Gets $13,000 Bill From Willkie Voice Specialist," is stirring up comment. Good Republicans are shocked; good Democrats are laughing up their sleeves, to say the least. Nonpartisans are looking at it from an ethical point of view.

To pay or not to pay; that is the question. And if "to pay," who is to pay the piper?

Certainly not Mr. Willkie himself. He protested strongly when the suggestion was made that he needed treatment. If Mr. Willkie chose to bellow his voice away in the first few days of the campaign and go croaking about over the country thereafter, he cannot logically be expected, even by Democrats, to pay for services he did not solicit nor feel the need of.

Not members of the official party, for the article specifically called attention to the fact that "members of the official party thought that Dr. Barnard was giving his services gratis and frequently fought to pay his dinner check." Are their faces red now?

That seems to leave the Republican National Committee and Mr. Walter O'Keefe, radio announcer and suggester of the treatment, with the bag to hold.

Was the treatment worth $13,000 to Mr. Willkie? The results are said to have been marvelous. In spite of Mr. Willkie's feeling that he needed no treatment, perhaps he did. Perhaps he couldn't have completed his campaign without it. Fifty-two days is a lot of days to be spraying the throat of even a Presidential candidate, and while 13,000 is a lot of dollars, if Dr. Barnard's treatment had caused Mr. Willkie to win the Presidency at $75,000 per annum, plus prestige, it would have been considered worth it.

While Dr. Barnard may charge $500 a day when in his home town, I doubt if he collects it. He had a nice trip, lots of publicity, a chance to get away from home, and the fun of charging a large amount, even if he never gets it. Surely it is worth something to be able to feel that you are grand enough to merit $13,000 for less than two months of your life. Furthermore some of his old clients will now remember him and pay their overdue bills; people who never heard of him before will be looking him up and, if he lives and nothing happens, he cannot lose whichever way the coin falls. So why worry?

LAURA K. POLLOCK.
Washington, March 30.

Fearlessness

As a Nation, through democratic procedure, we pledged ourselves to send Britain all the war material she needed. We did it on the premise that it was vital to us that she win this war.

Why all this furious argument about the possibility of convoys and the danger involved? If that becomes the only means of delivering the promised goods, we surely should have the courage to take any risks it might involve without all this hedging. For what is the alternative? The chance that Britain might fall. If through fear we are willing to take that chance, which gambles with our own survival as a democracy, I don't think that we, as a Nation, measure up very well against such bravery as we are seeing demonstrated in England, Greece and Yugoslavia today and in other nations fighting for the ideals which we claim to cherish.

Fearlessness, courage and the brotherhood of man are very necessary qualities in these days of peril, and if we are not ready to manifest these qualities, in face of all danger, we can not and do not deserve to survive.

Blue Plains

Recently you had an interesting discussion on "beauty." There is no better definition than "Beauty is as beauty does." And there is no more unbeautiful thing about Washington than the way it treats its poor at Blue Plains.

Yesterday I happened into a little store and its lady proprietor told me she had just returned from a visit there. "May I never complain again," she said, wiping tears from her eyes, "after the misery and poverty I have seen today. No one who ever goes out there will come back discontented with his own lot. Everything I can spare from now on is going to be sent out there."

We swell with pride at our lovely parks and bridges and galleries, but some day the emphasis on beauty will put less on externals and more on "man's interiors," as Swedenborg would say. The Master placed a "woe" on those who looked to externals but within were empty sham. It is he who helps a needy human soul in its evolution who creates the most beauty. C. L. J.

Ireland And The War

Everyone is now convinced, surely, that Ireland will fight to the last extremity any attempt to violate her neutrality. A few misguided persons, sadly lacking in common sense, pretending to be friends of both Ireland and England, persist in encouraging forcible seizure of Irish ports by the British.

It behooves England, in this crisis, to retain at least the passive good will of the Irish and their friends in America, numbering many millions. Premier De Valera, whose word is good, has guaranteed that Ireland shall not be used as a base for any attack on England. Considering her wrongs, this is real Christian practice—returning good for evil. Desiring to aid the British, the Washington government should sell Ireland all needed supplies—food, oil and gas, arms and ammunition—to assure Ireland's invincible defense of that guarantee. The best way effectively to help the English right now is speedily to supply the Irish with what they need.

Good business, too, for Ireland is a creditor instead of mendicant nation and is prepared to pay for all purchases.

Post-War Problems For Youth

Referring to Herbert Hoover's very important recent address at the New Haven (Conn.) Y. M. C. A., and to Mr. Kaltenborn's last Sunday's broadcast, which rightly emphasized points in that address, I concur that it is incumbent on national leaders that they urge the maturing youth of the Nation to do their own thinking-out of the postwar problems which will be very largely of a nature their elders never had to face. I venture to suggest that one of the great needs consequent upon the 1914-18 World War was that of still greater interchange of goods between the nations; yet it is startling to consider the extent to which the current was reversed, and desirable to inquire whether this reversal of current has not been one of the prime causes for the present world tragedy.

A very easy way to approach this question is to take the 1941 World Almanac at page 584, at the bottom of which page is the caption, "World Trade and Share of the United States Therein." This table starts with the prewar year 1913, skips the war years 1914-18 and the postwar years 1919-24, all of which were so abnormal as not to be judiciously comparable, and restarts with the year 1925, running consecutively through 1939. The phenomenal increase in world trade during 1925-29 I take as being due jointly to the world's postwar needs and to the United States providing credits in dollars by means of loans, noting that, of the postwar loans, more was loaned to Latin America than to Europe. This latter doubtless was due to an effort to maintain trade with that section of the world—the increased trade that had accrued from paralysis of Europe during and after the World War. An instructive feature of the table referred to is that increases in imports closely approximated exports, bearing in mind this is an essential of foreign trade if normal rates of exchange can be maintained. If normal rates are not maintained, trade collapses.

Immediately following the American bank collapse in 1929, and the consequent stoppage of loans to foreign nations, the result was reduction of exports to such extent that by 1933 American exports were only about one-fourth of those of 1929 and many previous years; imports decreased correspondingly, with American unemployment at its maximum for all time, and almost all the world in the kind of trouble that is largely responsible for the present World War. By 1938, the last year before the start of the present war, the value of American exports was under $2,000,000,000, fully a third less than in 1913, 25 years earlier; and this decrease was mainly in farm products, which indicates one of the new problems youth has to consider as one of those which their elders either created or have utterly failed to solve.

All these points, I think, are incontrovertible, and provide ground for Mr. Hoover's appeal that youth do its own thinking on the postwar problems that must be solved on facts as they exist, keeping in sight the mistakes of the older generation as warnings of that which is to be avoided.

A prime fundamental greatly overlooked by nonrural citizens (meaning the large majority) is the extraordinary falling off in foreign demand for American farm products, thereby throwing on the American market almost continuous surpluses in excess of home requirements, and this excess, such as was formerly relieved by shipment abroad, has for many years resulted in such low prices, often below cost of production, as to cause the agricultural distress that has prevailed so generally for the last ten years or more.

A noteworthy feature is that the loss of world outlet for American surplus farm products came after the imposition of customs duties for the protection of the farmer; and coincident with the greatly increased tariff against imports of farm products, there has been the greatest loss of outlet for surplus farm products ever recorded in all American history.

I maintain that fundamentals of this kind provide proof of necessity for Mr. Hoover's appeal to the youth of the Nation that they should do their own thinking-out of the coming problems to be solved, taking due warning from the proved mistakes of their elders which have led to the present world disaster, and that they do not too easily accept the theory that it was mainly the Versailles Treaty that obstructed the way of peace.

High In The Hills

The country was cold and quiet. It was all blue from the sky and the snow and the far-off hills.

The man in the car stepped on the gas a little harder and put his head up to feel the new rush of cold air that came in the window, the way a dog might, wanting to feel the wind on his face. He wasn't going fast even now—you couldn't go fast on the rutted and frozen dirt road. He had been traveling since early morning, making time on the clear cement highways, and now he had just turned off a few miles back when he saw the hills really beginning—so that when you came across one hill you could see the next in front of you a little higher, a little wilder looking.

He smiled now, a down-turned smile that had nothing of mirth in it but made his face look less tired. He didn't know exactly where he was going, but it was something like this that he'd wanted to see.

And then the car stalled going around a corner that he hadn't noticed was uphill. He tried twice to get it going again, and the motor raced and the wheels turned but the car stayed where it was. He could not even back it without going into the bank of piled snow.

"Ice," he thought. "Time for chains." But he didn't get out to do anything about it. He just sat there in the driver's seat, looking off at the hills and their blue shadows slipping slowly into the valley. The country was perfectly still, and he heard now a sound like the sea at a great distance, that goes and comes and is always there. It was the wind moving faintly in the tops of all the trees.

He relaxed down in his seat and was about to take out a cigarette when a voice startled him.

"Need help, stranger?"

He turned quickly, his face somber again, and saw standing in the road a wiry little man, made bulky by his heavy winter farm clothes, who was looking at him sharply from under his cap.

"No—I can manage," said the man in the car, and because the farmer didn't move away he thought he might as well get to work and get the car moving again. He took the little clip chains from under the seat and got out of the car and went to the back wheels to put them on. He felt the farmer watching him.

"From New York, eh?" he said.

"Yeah," the man answered.

"They tell me New York is a mighty fine place."

"It looked dirty enough to me after this last snow," the man said, struggling to get his arms around the wheel without actually lying down in the road.

"They tell me there are some mighty nice buildings down there—skyscrapers and all, fine stores."

The man didn't answer that one. He was lying down in the frozen road, half under the car, wondering if the car could roll back on him. When he came up again he saw that the farmer had moved a step nearer, and he looked at his thin wrinkled face and into his sharp blue eyes.

"What's he trying to get out of me?" he thought.

"They tell me the people in New York are pretty wide awake. They must keep the wheels turning all right!"

"Well—there are more of them," said the man, hoping to shut up the old codger. "Maybe that's why you keep hearing so much."

He tackled the other tire. It took a minute for his words to soak in and then the farmer laughed, as if he'd really enjoyed that.

"You know, I'm inclined to agree with you, Mister. I've been down that way myself—I went down to the Fair last year, and I've seen other places, too. I went out to the Chicago fair—why, I've even been out to the Coast," he paused. "And it's been my experience that most places are pretty much alike, a little bigger or a little smaller, sitting by the river or by the sea. They're still full of people and the people don't change from one coast to the other, hardly any. Some run a little faster to catch a subway—some walk slow behind the cows, that's about all.

"I grew up right here," the farmer went on. "And I got to know the people pretty well. There was a doctor who lived too easy, people said, but I noticed they always ran to him right off when they got into trouble. There was an old skinflint who kept the store and he'd take the last penny owing him, even if it was your last penny, too. We had a justice of the peace that nobody thought about till some family got to quarreling too bad about what the old man left. There were gossip makers and there were those who spoke right out what they were thinking, even if it did land them in trouble. I knew them all pretty well and I got kind of tired of them, and I always thought I'd go to the city and find some new kinds of people: they always said men were different in the city, maybe on account of the streetcars—"

The other man laughed then.

"And you found them all about the same?"

"Yes, sir, I did. I found the ones who'd speak out what they meant and the ones you could always count on when you were in trouble—though they weren't always doctors. And I found the skinflints and the gossip makers, too, plenty of them."

"So you came back home?"

"Well, I had the farm to run, you see."

The farmer's voice trailed off and the other man found himself looking out across the fields at the thin gray trees. There were a few evergreens and he could see the white trunks of the birches way in the woods—and then he noticed that the branches of the trees were not gray, but pinkish against the snow. The wind had dropped and it was very quiet.

He turned back to the car and got in and started the engine and with a few pulls the car was off the ice and in the road again.

"Need a lift?" he said to the farmer who was still standing there.

"Thanks—I just live up the road a piece—"

As the farmer was getting in, the man saw that the shadows from the hills reached all the way across the valley now. The air was clear and sharp.

"Maybe I don't need to go any farther," he thought to himself. "Maybe this is far enough to go—maybe I could stop right here."

'The End Of Our Times'

ONE OF THE phenomena of our age that would certainly astound the traveler in time, or one awakened from a sleep of centuries, is the universal obsession with politics. Politics infects all classes, permeates all human activities, lends a bias to all thought. In this Senor Ortega y Gasset sees but another manifestation of his famous "Revolt of the Masses." "The mass in revolt can contain nothing but politics, a raving frenetic exorbitant politics that claims to replace all knowledge, religion, wisdom—everything, in short, really qualified to occupy the center of the human mind."

LALLY

These may seem rather curious words from a man who, after all, was one of the leaders of the Spanish revolution of 1931, but they follow quite logically from the philosophy of history that Senor Ortega has been developing these many years and which is considerably elaborated in the latest volume of his essays to appear in English.* To Senor Ortega politics are at best but a secondary effect of historical activity. The key to the political characteristics of an age are to be found not in the manifestoes of parties, but in the philosophic thought of the generations immediately preceding them. Thus our own age, characterized by the ubiquity and tyranny of the common denominator, was nurtured in the intellectual womb of the complacent nineteenth century.

In other words, it is a case of "thinking makes it so." So we find Senor Ortega in a rather paradoxical agreement with the Marxists to the extent that politics and revolutions are a mere catching up with history. But of course Ortega's history is the very reverse of dialectic materialism, as he shows in his essay on "Man the Technician." This is a brilliant tour de force of logic in support of his thesis that the ways whereby man gains his living are determined by his concepts of what constitutes "living." Or to put it otherwise, his existence and even his liberty are important only as prerequisites to his pursuit of happiness.

BUT HIS concepts of happiness are subject, historically, to modification and change. And thus we have an ingenious explanation of the curious problems of why technics have been so often discovered and developed only to be later lost or abandoned and of why certain technics have been historically effective in certain times and places and quite ineffective in others. Gunpowder and the printing press, for example, in the centuries in which they were the exclusive possessions of the Chinese had none of the profound historical consequences that followed their introduction into Western Europe.

Senor Ortega distinguishes three main phases of technology—the technology of chance, by which he means such primitive discoveries as fire making, bow making and planting; the technology of the craftsman, and the technology of the engineer. In each of these is involved a whole congeries of social technics arising from the concept of the Good Life. But our own times tend more and more toward technology for its own sake, and this, apparently, is a dangerous thing. Our attitude toward our technologies comes to resemble that of primitive man toward nature. Our locomotives, automobiles, clothing factories, apartment buildings, chain groceries are simply there in the sense that the coconuts on the trees and the fish in the streams and the caves in the cliffs are there. If we touch the switch, light comes by much the same sort of irrelevant magic that makes fire come when two sticks are rubbed hard enough together.

We are thus as much at the mercy of our technology as primitive man is at the mercy of nature, and it is not surprising that we begin to feel toward our machines some of the vague animistic terror of the savage toward his environment. For whereas man can, if necessary, retreat from an economy of handicrafts to the primitive life without intolerable hardship, it is no longer possible for us to retreat to the technology of the artisan. Any serious interruption to our technology would doom millions. And whereas in the Middle Ages the engineer and the workman were united in the craftsman, today they have separate and wholly disparate functions. The unity of ends and means has thus been broken and the inventor, no longer able to conceive the entirety of his aim, reverts to the empiricism of the savage.

TO DISCOVER why in the past 200 years technology has reached a development never before known in the world, it is necessary to understand something of Senor Ortega's historical etiology. It is similar in many respects to Spengler's. As nearly as it can be put into a few words it is that the creative force in history is faith. Man is incapable of living without faith, but his faiths are mutable.

To be historically effective a faith must be not merely collective but vital and active. The desires of medieval man, his pursuits of happiness, were directed by the Christian revelation. "He believed with a living faith that an all-powerful, all-knowing Being would unfold to him all that was essential to his life." But inevitably his faith coming into collision with his earthly experience, lost its vitality and decayed. By the end of the fifteenth century it had become a "tired, ineffective faith." An age in which faith has grown ineffective is an age of crisis. Thus we have the ferments and upheavals that accompanied the breakup of the Middle Ages, which were first of all a breakup of faith.

But by the end of the sixteenth century man had found a new faith—the faith in physical science, the Christian revelation, out of which was born our modern world. This, however, did not mean that the old faith had been utterly erased. The old faith was contained in the new in the sense that what a man has been is contained in what he is. Christianity was contained in the Cartesian faith, as Platonism and Stoicism were "contained" in the medieval faith.

WE ARE NOW, if I understand Senor Ortega, approaching the break up of the Age of Science, which by promising us there would be "nothing so remote that it will not finally be revealed, nor so hidden that it will not ultimately be discovered" gave the impetus to our technology. We have not yet lost our faith, but it has become tired and ineffective. Science, we find, has taught us everything—except that which we most need to know. Man has learned the truth about almost everything in the universe except himself!

But why has physicial science, which has disclosed almost all the mysteries of nature, been utterly baffled by the mystery of human nature? To answer this Senor Ortega boldly challenges the ontology we have inherited from the Greeks. There is no human nature! There is nothing stable or changeless about Man, as such; he belongs wholly to the world of "becoming." His only "being" consists in that ideal picture of himself which he projects from his faith. In the struggle to realize this "being" he makes his history.

And here we begin to have a glimmering of what Senor Ortega conceives to be the new faith that will at once contain and supplant that faith in physical science which has made the modern world. It seems to be nothing more or less than faith in the new historism, which has been so industriously expounded in our own day by Spengler, Toynbee and Ortega himself. Of course it is possible for a people to repudiate its historical destiny simply by refusing to believe, or to think or to "live." And this it would seem is what we have most to dread from the Revolt of the Masses.

But before going any further into this, it might be as well to wait for the new work which Senor Ortega has promised us.

The Ship Seizures

By Ernest K. Lindley

Facts Behind Them

IN 1915, WHILE still neutral, Italy requisitioned 34 German merchant ships tied up in Italian harbors. The German government did not even register a protest.

LINDLEY

In 1916, Portugal requisitioned 72 German merchant ships idle in Portuguese harbors.

In 1917 Brazil and Peru, while neutral, took possession of German vessels in Brazilian and Peruvian ports to prevent damage by the crews. Later they put these vessels to use. Brazil, after entering the war, chartered some of them to France. Peru never declared war, but, nevertheless, chartered to the United States some of the seized German ships.

On February 17, 1917, the United States Government stationed guards aboard certain German vessels to prevent their destruction or departure. This was about the time Wilson decided to arm American merchantmen as an answer to Germany's resumption of unrestricted submarine warfare.

In 1918 Spain requisitioned 90 German vessels in Spanish ports, and proclaimed it would allow the German government no compensation for them because of the damage done to Spanish shipping by German U-boats.

THE RIGHT of the United States Government to take into protective custody foreign ships in its harbors is fully sanctioned by law and by precedent. Ample precedent and law exist for going a step farther and requisitioning them for use.

While in American harbors or waters, all ships are subject to the law of the United States. The Secretary of the Treasury was empowered by the President, under the Espionage Act of 1917 to "make rules and regulations governing the anchorage and movement of foreign and domestic ships and, if necessary, to secure such vessels from damage or to prevent damage to the waters and harbors of the United States, take full possession and control of such vessels and remove the officers and crews therefrom."

If the Treasury Department is to be criticized, it is not for exceeding its authority—which it did not do—but for failing to take possession of the vessels before they had been damaged.

The power to go further, and put these vessels to use, rests also in the ancient right of angary, which has been recognized since the third century B. C. This is the right of a sovereign to requisition means of transportation. It has been used to requisition almost everything from donkeys and chariots to telephone and cable lines, railroads and, of course, ships.

STATE DEPARTMENT records disclose no instance in which the United States Government has invoked the right of angary. During World War I it based its seizure and use of German and neutral shipping on the Espionage Act of 1917.

There is no doubt, however, about the right of a belligerent to seize and use neutral property on its territory. And, judging from the precedents cited above—as well as others—the right may be exercised by a nonbelligerent. In a right which has been recognized and used variously for 22 centuries, there are precedents for almost any action.

It probably is profitless to refer to law and precedent in dealing with nations which have flouted and derided both. But the most comic official comment of the war was that of the German spokesman who said that the taking of German ships into protective control "violated all human rights."

The Axis reaction to the ship seizures obviously is not based on law or precedent. It is propaganda. The bottom of the Axis has just been soundly thrashed again, and the top has just been slapped in the face by the Yugoslavs. The double humiliation was especially keen because it occurred in the presence of the foreign minister of a friend and prospective ally.

Under such circumstances, a bristling display of "front" is to be expected. The Axis has been hurt, but it has not been knocked out. Its obvious play is to belittle its wounds and to bluster—with the hope also of scaring the more timid portions of the American community.

The means of sabotage resorted to by the Italians puzzles our officials. They broke cylinder heads and condensers, sheared gears and cracked drive shafts. The damage is serious, but it can be repaired within a few months.

If, on the other hand, they had simply opened the seacocks, submerging the ships, many more months would have been required to salvage them.

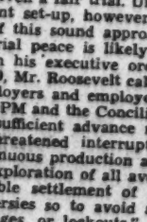
The lack of skill and enthusiasm which has been evident in the Italian army, navy and air force seems to have been revealed also in the simple business of sabotage.

Strike Paralysis

By Merlo J. Pusey

A Code Of Good Labor Manners Needed

EVERYONE seems to be complaining about strikes but comparatively little is being done to prevent this waste of energy needed for national defense. Particularly in Congress there is much sound and fury, but no action. President Roosevelt has dumped the problem into the lap of the National Defense Mediation Board and intends to do nothing until this agency has had a chance to prove its worth. He wishes to avoid legislation on the subject if possible and many other citizens and officials take a similar view.



PUSEY

The prevalence of this attitude occasions no surprise because of the drastic means of curbing strikes that are being advocated in and out of Congress. Representative Ford has a bill that would make strikers or defense jobs guilty of treason. Other members of Congress have indulged in loose talk about death penalties and the complete abolition of strikes that affect Army and Navy orders.

When Congressmen voice such irresponsible threats, there is little incentive to request them to enact restrained and sensible legislation. Nevertheless, it is doubtful whether a negative attitude on the part of the White House will tone down these outbursts of indignation. What is needed is courageous leadership in working out a policy for the prevention of strikes without encroaching upon the basic rights of labor and management.

THE PRESIDENT has reason to be pleased with the work of the Defense Mediation Board to date. It has shown both dispatch and good judgment in the settlement of various strikes. But while this constructive work is going forward, other large industrial disputes are getting out of hand. Even if that agency makes a perfect record in settling strikes finally referred to it, defense industries will probably continue to suffer much lost motion for want of an adequate mediation statute.

Certainly the President is right in saying that mediation must be given a fair trial. Under the present set-up, however, no fair test of this sound approach to industrial peace is likely to be made. In his executive order of March 19, Mr. Roosevelt called upon employers and employes to give the OPM and the Conciliation Service "sufficient advance notice of any threatened interruptions to continuous production as will permit exploration of all avenues of possible settlement of such controversies so to avoid strikes, stoppages, or lockouts." His request is being flagrantly ignored.

The simple fact is that the present machinery is designed to settle strikes after work has been halted instead of bringing about amicable agreements before any walkout is ordered. The coal strike is a case in point. Negotiations for a new agreement began in February. Representatives of the operators and miners got down to business in early March but had failed to reach an understanding when the contract expired last Monday. Neither party asked aid from the Labor Department's Conciliation Service. So it was not until last Sunday that the Government took a hand in the dispute. Dr. John R. Steelman, chief of the Conciliation Service, rushed to New York at the request of the President and Secretary Perkins, but it was then too late to avert a walkout.

DR. STEELMAN and his colleagues have rendered invaluable service in the adjustment of many labor controversies in defense industries. But they have no authority to intervene in struggles between employers and employes even after a strike has begun. They frequently proffer their services and few employers or unions decline to accept their aid. In practice, however, their efforts are usually concentrated on the adjustment of differences after factory wheels or building operations have been stopped.

The new Mediation Board handles cases only after the Conciliation Service has failed to bring about an agreement. So the best we can hope from the present set-up is the expeditious settlement of strikes after some precious time in the manufacture of defense weapons has been lost. Since no delay in the armament program is consistent with the national interest, this system is poorly adapted to present requirements.

Congress appears to have been slow to act because so many of its members are thinking in terms of denying the right to strike. In a democracy that right is basic. If there were any question of abolishing or even suspending it, Congress might well hesitate. But that is not the issue. The only practical question at this time is whether Congress should put employers and employes participating in the defense program under more positive obligations to exhaust the possibilities of the conference table before resorting to a show of force.

Collective bargaining is the law of the land. In ordinary times it may be sufficient merely to guarantee the right of employes to act collectively and leave companies and unions to fight out their differences in their own way. But when the Nation's security is dependent upon continuous production in strategic industries, more definite governmental leadership in the settlement of disputes becomes imperative. And that leadership should be in evidence before as well as after the calling of strikes.

YEARS AGO Congress decided that a special formula was essential to safeguard our transportation system against prolonged strikes. On the ground that railroads—later airlines were included—are "affected with a public interest," it set up what Otto S. Beyer, of the National Mediation Board, calls a "code of good labor manners" for these systems. In the present emergency, plants turning out machinery for warships and powder for ammunition are certainly affected with as great a public interest as are the railroads in peacetime. Why, then, shouldn't Congress prescribe a code of good labor manners for defense industries?

The purpose of such a code is twofold: 1—It would discourage hasty action and thus keep men at work while arguments as to wages, conditions of work and employer-employe relations go forward. 2—It would automatically bring pressure to bear upon any company or union daring to flout the code of good manners. Either party desiring to change existing conditions of work would be required to give the other notice in writing. During the period of the negotiations, labor would be protected against arbitrary dismissals, wage cuts, speed-ups and similar practices which provoke strikes. Employers and the Government would likewise be protected against stoppages of work.

Trained Federal conciliators would supervise the enforcement of the code and aid the disputants in settlement of their differences. Hot-headed union leaders or employers refusing to follow the approved formula of mediation would suffer only one penalty—public condemnation. That would probably mean, in the end, loss of the cause for which the hotheads flouted orderly and peaceful methods. For the Defense Mediation Board could investigate any dispute and make public the facts which would condemn the party refusing to cooperate.

IT IS AMAZING that the Government has not made wider application of this principle. The President included a terse code of good labor manners in his order creating the Defense Mediation Board. But the machinery he created is not well adapted to direction of the policy he appears to have had in mind. It becomes effective only after Industrial warfare has broken out.

Moreover, the President's order lacks the force of law. There seems to be little hope that employers and employes in defense industries will give notice of desired changes in working arrangements and adjust all points of controversy at the conference table until they are put under obligation to do so by act of Congress. Nor would a legislative act be effective without a watchdog to see that its provisions are complied with before disputes reach the walkout stage.

There is no reason to delay legislation of this kind, for its purpose and effect would be to strengthen the conference-table technique. On the contrary, the news of each passing day underscores the necessity for haste in thus reinforcing our arms-building effort. Since Congress is awake to the danger of strike paralysis, why doesn't it stop shouting threats and begin working on practical legislation?

Man And The Blits

("Some people in this war have put their trust in machines, forgetting that man, who made the machine, can whip the machine. The Greeks had no big war machines. A rock for a parapet, a mule to carry the stores, and a gun or cannon for a weapon. If you have brains and courage you find a way to deal with a machine."—Col. William J. Donovan).

A jutting rock for a parapet,
A mule to carry the stores—
A gun in the hand of a fearless man,
Just as in ancient wars . . .
Machines are the weapons of terror now,
And death's a production plan,
But over them all in the final fight
Are the spirit and will of man!

The bombers are getting their work in now,
And the big tanks spread the blitz;
A world's been cowed by the thing of steel
As patterned by Hans and Fritz;
But courage and brains are a winning pair,
As ever their course they run,
For things that are made by the will of man
Can by man be well undone.

Contrivances massive and monster-like—
Sheer devils of forge and shop—
Have tended to stun and to stupefy,
But soon must the terror stop.
For people with naught but the weapons old,
Backed up by the will to fight,
Have shown what the spirit and flesh can do
When freedom's their guiding light.

A tank is a matter of metal parts,
A bomber's a hellish thing,
A mechanized corps is a devil's dream,
And some to such things will cling;
But man made 'em all with his mind and hands,
And man on his own good day,
Resolving they need to be stricken low,
Shall find, in the end, a way.

The Greeks they were shy of all weapons new—
They didn't have much to awe;
(Not much, save the spirit of free-born men,
Some guns and their courage raw);
No tanks and no modern machines of hell—
No "panzer divisions" vast . . .
Just honor and guts and the firm resolve
To fight to the very last.

So others live on in their peaceful ways
Ne'er scheming the despot's course;
Not secretly arming to rule by hate
Or conquer a friend by force;
Now, facing the onslaught, they too, shall rise,
Each man with the strength of ten,
And, fighting as only the freeborn can,
Shall triumph like freeborn men.

A jutting rock for a parapet,
A mule to carry the stores,
A gun in the hand of a fearless man,
Just as in the ancient wars . . .
It doesn't seem written in war lords' books
But this you will see come true:
The mind that can fashion a war machine
Can manage to lick it, too!

A bank has been opened in a railroad depot at New Rochelle, N. Y., and it is at least a novel idea. The country has always wanted to see a demonstration of how money could be withdrawn or deposited at full gallop by a man with his arms full of garden tools and his coat half off.

Elmer Twitchell wants to know if the depot bank runs on Eastern standard time or daylight saving time.

And there is sure to be the confused commuter who isn't certain whether he was to deposit $8 just before the 7:55 a. m. or deposit 7:55 a. m. just before the $8 pulled in.

You would think the Nazis would at least have had tact enough not to put a tall man on each side of Matsuoka in those newsreels.

Change Of Climate

By Barnet Nover

The World And The Axis

A YEAR AGO Europe was on the eve of tremendous events. Denmark was overrun and Norway invaded on the 9th of April. A month later the German wehrmacht began its sweep across the Low Countries. Before the end of June, Hitler had made himself master of all of western Europe from the Arctic Circle to the Spanish frontier. Only Great Britain was left to challenge his authority. In one of his greatest speeches, the one made on the morrow of the evacuation from Dunkerque, Winston Churchill had promised war unending against the enemy of all mankind.

NOVER

"We shall fight on the beaches," he said in words that will echo down the corridors of time, "we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender. . . ."

But many there were who wondered whether the flesh would be equal to the spirit. Hitler's final victory by midsummer or fall was taken for granted in many quarters both here and abroad.

A LOT of water has passed over the dam since then. Hitler's victories of last spring and early summer still stand as one of the most remarkable feats in military history. There is no danger of Germany's strength being underestimated today. Evil days and horrible moments still lie ahead.

The evacuation of Bengasi by the British in the face of pressure from German mechanized forces pushing ahead from the west shows how fluid is the military situation, how dangerous is overoptimism. But since last June there has been a definite change in the climate of opinion. A German victory is no longer regarded as inevitable, except by Col. Lindbergh and a few others. Defeatism has been replaced by confidence, a confidence based not on wishful thinking, however, but on a realistic appraisal of the forces operating in the world. The turning point came when the British people refused to break or falter under the fearful punishment visited upon them in August and September. Since then much else has happened to keep alight the flame of optimism regarding the ultimate outcome of the war. There was the miracle of Greece. There was the sudden and drastic deflation of the myth that was Mussolini. More recently there was the coup d'etat at Belgrade, which proved anew that the love of freedom still burned fiercely in parts of Europe. Admiral Cunningham's spectacular naval victory in the Ionian Sea, and the collapse of the Fascist Empire in East Africa.

THE REPERCUSSIONS of these recent events have been felt in every corner of the world. Because of them Yosuke Matsuoka will return to Tokyo a sadder and a wiser man, less inclined than he once was to make Japan the handmaiden of the Third Reich. Because the probability of an Axis victory has rapidly begun to diminish, Latin-American nations which not so many months ago were believed to be ripe for Hitler's plucking have followed this Nation's example and are placing German and Italian ships in "protective custody" when not seizing them outright. Hitler and Mussolini may get red in the face because of such affronts to the prestige of the Axis, but with British warships sweeping the Mediterranean and still in command of the Atlantic, the republics of this hemisphere do not fear them.

NOT SO MANY months ago very considerable alarm was expressed in this country over the widespread activities of Nazi-Fascist propagandists and Fifth Columnists in Latin America. The alarm was well founded. For the intrigue and propaganda of these agents of Hitler and Mussolini did involve a very real danger to the security and independence of the nations to our south. Nothing succeeds like success. Hitler's victories had made German many so feared that many in Latin America were inclined to make terms with the new masters of Europe, a continent which purchased a good part of the surplus products of the Latin-American republics.

The best counterpropaganda against the Nazi-Fascist propaganda was that provided by the British when they held out in the face of constant air raids by the British and the Greeks when they administered one defeat after another to the Italians in the Balkans, Africa and the Mediterranean and by the Yugoslavs when they defied the Reich.

OF WHAT VALUE is all Fascist propaganda now in the face of what has been happening to Mussolini's Italy? The glories of the new Rome portrayed by the Duce's mouthpieces have a mocking connotation now. The money Italy spent for propaganda in the New World may have had its uses when the measure of Fascist might had not yet been taken; it has boomerang characteristics now. As for Hitler, the fact that he has successfully been defied will infuse life and hope into millions now living in subjection on the continent darkened by his malignant shadow. The spontaneous outburst of rejoicing that occurred in Marseille following the news of the Yugoslav overturn is symptomatic of a state of mind not confined to the inhabitants of that French city. It is all but universal. Hitler was quite willing to have Germany hated if at the same time she was feared. He has succeeded in getting the Third Reich both hated and feared. But as fears diminish, the hate becomes dynamic. Hitler sowed the wind. The first premonitory signs of the whirlwind that will ultimately sweep him and his evil crew into the dustbin of history are clearly to be detected.

British Secretary Arrives in D. C.

Sir Arthur Salter, parliamentary undersecretary to the British ministry of shipping, arrived in Washington yesterday. He was accompanied by Lady Salter.

The couple were met at Union Station by Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, and a representative of the British Embassy. They drove away from the terminal in Secretary Perkins' limousine.

Sir Arthur said that he would have no public statement to make until he could arrange a press conference. On his arrival in Canada, he said his mission was to discuss United States "shipping and shipbuilding interests as part of the war effort." He said he hoped to "give Americans a picture of Britain's situation and tell them how best they may help."

D. C. Heads Oppose Land Purchase

The Commissioners yesterday sent an adverse report to Congress on a proposed bill to purchase the Keane-Loeffler property at Minnesota Avenue and Benning Road Northeast.

Introduced by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, the bill would authorize the Secretary of Interior to purchase the land, out of Federal funds, at a cost not to exceed $500,000. A proviso, attached to the bill, however, interested the Commissioners. It stated that, if any time an appropriate use for this property or any portion thereof shall be found for District of Columbia purposes, such property may be transferred to the government of the District and the Federal Government reimbursed from District appropriations.

Circus, Under Night's Tent, Makes a Two-Hour Stand

By Gerald G. Gross
A Staff Correspondent

For a few delicious hours yesterday it was circus day in Washington, with midgets, tigers, super-superlatives and all.

Rolling into Potomac Yards a few minutes before 1 a. m., 56 carloads of what it takes to make us young again yielded unto the night conclusive proof that spring is here, that "the biggest show on earth" once more is on the move.

MABEL GROSS, a member of the Pan-American finale act, was fast asleep when the photographer knocked, but she looks pretty wide awake here

Bound out of winter quarters in Sarasota, Fla., for New York's Madison Square Garden, where they open the 1941 season on Monday, practically the entire Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey troupe were aboard — Gargantua and his bride, Toto; Gottleib Fischer, 100-inch giant, and his 325-pound wife, who is 3 inches shorter; the Great Yacopis, the riding Christianis, clowns, lions, camels, roustabouts.

Missing faces? The only ones noticed were those of Felix Adler, the show's top clown; Frank Braden and Beverley Kelley, pressmen par excellence; John Ringling North, the president, and a few others. They'll join the circus in New York.

It lasted only three hours, but it was wonderful. These were the highlights:

The duenna of the all-girl car chasing photographers and reporters out because it was 2:30 a. m. —but not until after a couple of shots had been made.

Tiny Eddie Yacopi, of the Great Yacopis, standing on the sleeping car steps, emptying stale coffee grounds from a soiled percolater while his white-haired mother took a hitch on his robe so he wouldn't fall off. No, sir, mustn't fall off. Eddie is doing a 4½ somersault into a chair this season and he must be spared, for art's sake.

The Christianis fearfully wondering if they'll ever see Fifi again. Fifi is their spitz, who disappeared from the car when the train stopped briefly a few miles below Alexandria.

Flabbergasted trainmen tripping over midgets in the all-night restaurant across from Potomac Yards, where many of the performers went for coffee.

Young Henry Ringling North, vice president of the big show, chinning in his private car with Dr. William H. Mann, Washington Zoo director, who accompanied the troupe from Sarasota; Melvin D. Hildreth, local circus fan extraordinary; Fred G. Orsinger, ditto, and Mmes. Mann and Orsinger.

Ah, if there were but the space and this typewriter had the gift to draw the picture! It was wonderful, honest.

EINSTEIN, MAN OF SCIENCE

D. C. Council Asks Survey Of Rising Rents

Authorization for a survey to determine how close the defense boom has brought Washington to a return to the World War era of sky-rocketing rents was asked yesterday by the District Defense Council.

The move was made as leading witnesses before a House subcommittee studying the Randolph rent bill gave general indorsement to the principle of Government control as a means of keeping boom-time rents within reasonable bounds.

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, chairman of the council's consumers' interest subcommittee, revealed the District Commissioners would be requested to authorize and provide facilities for the survey. The aim, it was explained, is a fact-finding survey of congested areas of the city to learn how far rents already have gone up and what justification may exist for the increase.

Shortage Stressed

At the Capitol, the special National Defense Subcommittee of the House District Committee was told, on one hand, of "shocking" low-income housing shortages and, on the other hand, of more than ample supplies of rooms for young Government workers. This picture of Washington housing conditions was given as the subcommittee opened what is expected to be a long series of hearings on the Randolph bill.

The room vacancies situation, witnesses declared, is complicated by the antipathy of young men and women defense workers from rural sections of the country toward life in the city's outskirts, where "private family" rooms are plentiful.

Want "Bright Lights"

They prefer, the subcommittee was told, to crowd three and four, and sometimes as many as seven, into rooms close to their offices and the bright lights of the city.

The trouble is, said Helen Duey Hoffman, of the Washington Housing Association, Young people see "no fun" in living in the quiet residential districts of Cleveland Heights and Chevy Chase.

Lawrence E. Williams, chairman of the housing subcommittee of the District Defense Council which maintains a housing registry at 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest, disclosed a vacancy list of 1,600 rooms in rooming houses and private homes with rooms in the suburbs "going begging." The rooms, he said, rent on an average of $5 a week for single persons and are the most desirable kind of accommodation for young men and women.

Set 20-Cent Zone Limit

Applicants for rooms, he declared, "lose interest" when they find that accommodations are beyond the 20-cent taxi zone.

"You can almost draw the line on the housing shortage beyond the 20-cent taxi zone," he said.

Williams said the registry lists, in addition to rooms, about 300 houses and 400 apartment units. He stated:

"There are two classes of property which we are not listing in sufficient numbers to meet the demand. In the first place, the greatest demand from people coming to Washington to work seems to be for one-room, kitchen and bath furnished apartments and there seems to be practically no supply of these.

"We are having difficulty with people coming to Washington to work in Government departments on two scores and that is primarily due to the fact that the majority of them come from small towns or rural communities. With that background it is easy to understand why most applicants expect to be able to secure accommodations at lower rents than we are able to furnish them or, in fact, at a lower price than they could secure them in almost any city of this size.

Would Live Near Work

"The other point is that most of these people desire to live within walking distance of their place of employment and that is obviously impossible in Washington or any other large city."

Mrs. Hoffman posed for the committee a problem not unlike that brought up by the city's rush-hour traffic. Speaking of overcrowded rooming houses in the central and older sections of the city, she observed that minimum health department standards require a bath for every four rooms in houses built since 1910 and a bath for every 15 persons in homes built prior to that time.

"They ought to stagger the hours for the bathroom like they do the Government working hours," cracked Representative Randolph.

Mrs. Hoffman said she was forced to confess that minimum District health standards are "pretty low." She described homes in some older sections that are "no good to anybody, landlord or tenant," and other houses where roomers merely "rent a bed in a cell." In the old, high-ceiling homes, she said, it is possible to put six or seven single beds in one room without violating Health Department requirements for air space.

Environment Stressed

Representative George J. Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, the third subcommittee member attending the hearing, observed that "the real problem here is locating rooms for young men and women to see that they get in the proper environment." He said "rent control is secondary."

Mrs. Martha Dudley, chairman of the housing committee of the League of Women Shoppers, testified to a "shocking shortage" of housing for low-income families, adding that the blow falls hardest on those families whose incomes are below the $1,800-a-year average.

"For those people there are virtually no vacancies whatsoever available," she said. "Such families who are forced to spend more than one-fifth of their income on rent have recourse only to the protection against prohibitive increases which this proposed rent commission could afford."

Miss Harriet Elliott, of the consumers' division of the Defense Commission, declared the construction of new homes to be the only "real remedy for the housing shortage resulting from an influx of workers." Until the homes can be built, she said, it is necessary to keep rents within bounds.

National defense, she said, already has brought 30,000 new workers to the city with another 28,000 expected before the end of June.

"All reports indicate," she declared, "that there are virtually no fit quarters available for newcomers at less than $50 a month."

John Ihlder, executive officer of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, suggested that rent controls be so applied as to affect nearby Virginia and Maryland as well as the District.

Charles Tufts, chief of the housing section of the defense commission's consumer division, also testified that the "real problem" is provision of housing for persons who can afford to pay no more than $50 a month rent.

Other witnesses included Mrs. Harold Stone, legislative chairman of the Voteless District League of Women Voters, and George A. Warren, representative of the District Department of the American Federation of Government Employes.

Piccadilly Arcade Here Does Booming Business for R. A. F.

DEAN ACHESON'S WIFE AS SALESLADY—When the Piccadilly Arcade benefit bazaar for the R. A. F. opened yesterday Mrs. Dean Acheson (right), wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, was on hand to help. Here, she explains the works of art on sale to Mrs. Percy Morgan

The Royal Air Force did a bang-up business yesterday at the Piccadilly Arcade, 1423-25 F Street Northwest.

There was scarcely standing room on the three big floors where almost everything imaginable is being sold, under auspices of the British War Relief Society, for the benefit of the R. A. F. Benevolent Fund.

The sale will continue through tomorrow evening, concluding with an auction to start at 7:30 p. m. All proceeds will go to the R. A. F., with no deductions for expenses, which have been underwritten. The benevolent fund helps to care for the wives and children of the British fliers.

Mrs. Patrick C. Hill, vice chairman for the event, said the cooperation by the public has "been wonderful." Carpenters gave their time, as did sign painters, and the children of Cardoza High School spontaneously prepared a number of attractive window displays, she said.

The goods on sale vary from a Royal Air Force insignia in diamonds, contributed by an anonymous diamond merchant, to 51 pails of Vermont maple sugar.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth contributed a silver cake basket; A. C. Rosenbach, the famous book collector, contributed many volumes and two antique French chairs, and Pierre Bardet, formerly chef on the Normandie, gave 16 kinds of relishes and preserves. Justice Felix Frankfurter gave letters written and signed by the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. A porcelain figure of a woman and child was given by Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Minister. Mrs. Madge Pritchard, cook at the Australian Legation, gave a Queen Victoria sovereign and a letter from Princess Mary, now Viscountess Lacelles, on Buckingham Palace stationery.

Nazis Reported Ready to Seize U. S. Property

Stockholm, Sweden, April 3.—The Berlin correspondent of the newspaper Aftonbladet reports that the German government has decided to confiscate American property in Germany with a value equivalent to that of the German ships seized in American harbors.

The German action, the correspondent says, will be taken as a reprisal for the American measure, which is considered in Germany as a "flagrant contradiction of international law" and a "method previously completely unknown in relations between countries which are not at war with each other."

An address by Senor Don Mario Rodriguez, first secretary of the Chilean Embassy, will feature a "Chile Night" meeting of the Pan-American Club of the Central Y. M. C. A. at 8:15 p. m. today in the building at 1736 G Street Northwest. There will be music and dancing.

New 'City Hall' Ready in June, McCoach Says

The District's new $5,000,000 "city hall," complete with underground parking facilities, air-conditioning, modern chemical laboratories, citizens meeting space and murals will be ready for occupancy in June, it was announced yesterday by Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr.

Completing an inspection trip of the building known officially as East Administration Building of the Municipal Center, the Commissioner said he was pleased with the progress. Accompanied by his assistant, Capt. John L. Person, he also visited the new $1,175,000 drill hall of the National Guard Armory, on East Capitol Street.

After years of striving, the local Guard has this huge drill hall, which will be available in two weeks, but they can't use it; not, at least, until they return home from Texas and Camp Meade. Second and completing unit of the armory is now under way and will be finished in one year. Plans to rent the drill hall for sports events, automobile shows, conventions and the like, will be put off until the entire armory is completed. Since work is progressing around the entire drill hall unit, it would be inconvenient for the public, Col. McCoach said, to attend affairs there.

City hall, located at John Marshall Place and C Street Northwest, will house the following departments: Police, health, welfare, vehicles and traffic, weights and measures, fire, parole board, city refuse, minimum wage board, insurance, community center and playgrounds, board of barber examiners and cosmetology board. The old District Building will, of course, continue to function. The Board of Commissioners will remain in the old building as will the assessor, collector, highway director, auditor and architect, among others.

The proposed second unit of the Center, to be known as the West Administration Building, will be "a long time coming," as one official said. The first unit was built with PWA funds, which are no longer available.

U. S. Madrid Staff Is Inoculated

Madrid, April 3.—The typhus epidemic in Madrid has reached such proportions that all members of the American Embassy staff and their families and servants recieved injections yesterday. There is not enough vaccine available for all, but the Rockefeller Foundation has been asked for enough to inject 20,000 persons. There also are outbreaks of typhus in several towns in southern Spain.

TABLE HARMONY—Why leave spring outside the house "just around the corner?" Bring it to the table and clear away those winter blues. One easy way to do it is shown in luncheon table at left, all a-bloom with spring flowers. The Irish cambric linen printed with gay floral border also adds the spring-like touch. The plates are ringed with flowers, and several varieties of the real thing make the low centerpiece.

The table setting below also has the touch of spring with its Norton crystal flower globes and the horn of plenty vase filled with flowers. The presentation of the salmon mousse fish mold on the large platter with its garnish of cucumber rings topped with a sprig of parsley also makes a pretty picture. Cucumber sauce to be served with the mousse is in the bowl.

Plate Luncheon Will Pep Up Winter-Jaded Appetites

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Food Editor

SPRING is welcome in more way than one. Especially is it welcome to the homemaker because it carries with it many an idea to help pep up appetites that have become jaded during the winter.

Have you thought of the plate luncheon as a means of simplifying luncheon meals? The all-on-one plate idea represents an easy to save time and effort needed for other things, such as spring house-cleaning or getting out into the sunshine.

The plate luncheon should be planned with the thought of flavor, color and eye appeal as well as ease of preparation. Such a luncheon, which is easily prepared, attractive and healthful, is cheese asparagus, poached egg in potato nests, hard rolls toasted with butter, milk or hot chocolate and a fruit crisp for dessert.

Martha Ellyn

Be sure to select tender green asapargus of medium thickness and of uniform length, to assure ease of cooking and serving. If cooked in boiling salted water in an uncovered utensil, it will stay a nice fresh green color. And there is a special asparagus cooker obtainable in the household sections of the department stores.

The cheese in which the asparagus is rolled should be a nippy variety of yellow cheese and should be freshly and finely grated. Here is the recipe for preparing the luncheon plate.

Plate Luncheon—Pare 4 medium sized potatoes and cook until tender in boiling salted water. Drain thoroughly and mash. Add ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup heated milk and 3 tablespoons butter and beat vigorously until potatoes are fluffy and smooth. Cook 1 bunch fresh asparagus (¾ pound) in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Roll asparagus while hot in melted butter and then in 1-3 cup freshly grated cheese. On each luncheon plate place a mound of mashed potatoes. Drop a poached egg into a depression on top of each mound of potato, sprinkle each egg with paprika. Arrange 4 or 6 stalks of asparagus on plate and serve immediately. Serve 4.

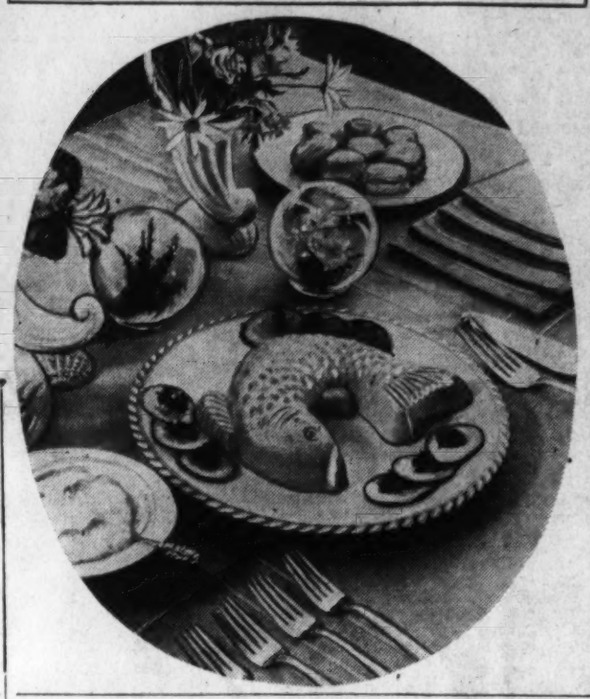
A refreshing spring salad that is vitamin giving and has a dash of sweetness for added flavor is Tossed Salad de Luxe. It's easily made, too. Just mix all ingredients and toss together lightly until blended. Try it soon!

Tossed Salad de Luxe—Shred cabbage to make 2 cups, and cut 2 carrots into slivers, cut 1 packette (16) marshmallows into pieces, and add ¾ cup pineapple cubes and place all in a salad bowl. Combine by tossing together very lightly. Garnish with ½ green pepper cut in slivers and watercress. Serve with cream salad dressing, which can be made by thinning any good salad dressing or mayonnaise with cream. Serves 5 to 6.

Salmon Roll with Mushroom Sauce is a perky dish to serve in these last Lenten days. And it can be used as a main dish because it is substantial, tempting and attractive. Here is the recipe:

Salmon Roll with Mushroom Sauce—Drain 1 pound can of salmon, and reserve the liquid for the biscuit dough. Flake the salmon with fork. Sift flour, then measure to 2 cups. Resift with ½ teaspoon salt and 4 teaspoons baking powder. Work in 1-3 cup shortening until the mixture has the appearance of coarse meal. Stir in quickly 1-3 cup salmon liquid mixed with 1-3 cup irradiated evaporated milk. The dough should be soft. Turn onto a lightly floured board. Knead about ½ minute. Roll to about ⅜ inch thickness, keeping the dough in a rectangular shape. Spread with the flaked salmon. Sprinkle with a little lemon juice and grated onion, if desired, or finely chopped parsley. Roll like a jelly roll. Cut in slices about 1 inch thick. Place on greased baking pan, cut side down, and bake in hot oven, 425 degrees until brown, about 20 minutes. Serve hot with mushroom sauce. Yield: 8 servings.

Mushroom Sauce—Drain 12-ounce can mushrooms (½ cup) and reserve the liquid for sauce. Melt 1½ tablespoons butter. Stir in 2 tablespoons flour. Blend in mushroom liquid plus water to make 2-3 cup. Boil until sauce begins to thicken, stirring constantly. Add 1 1-3 cups irradiated evaporated milk and the mushrooms. Continue cooking until sauce is slightly thickened, stirring occasionally. Salt to taste. Sufficient for 8 servings.



Bring Spring To Settings Of Your Table

WITH SPRING in our hearts, though not yet in our gardens, it's the time of year everybody wants to do something to hurry along the actual arrival of the season when dogwood blooms, when redbud trees burst into full glory, and the whole world seems to be in tune.

Table settings are one way to do it and to do it inexpensively, for they involve only the ensembling of accessories that you probably have in the house, or if not, of things that can be purchased for very little and used for many years afterward.

Breakfast and luncheon tables lend themselves particularly well to this brightening up process, for there are so many of those handsome Irish linen cloths and sets which feature gay, springlike patterns. Flowers, of course, are the natural thing to think of when you start to bring spring to the table. And almost any of the flowered china sets, expensive or the more inexpensive kind—even from the 10-cent store—can be matched up with cheerful printed Irish linens.

Match Patterns

In selecting cloths or mat sets to ensemble with china, it's a smart idea to look for a design arrangement that won't interfere with your patterned china, otherwise the effect will become too cluttery. Border decorations are a splendid selection, leaving plenty of white space around the china.

Any florist's window will give you inspiration for the floral centerpiece, which should be arranged in a low container to encourage conversation. And if there are to be but four at your table, try the new idea of a friendly seating arrangement, facing the couples opposite each other rather than placing them four-square around the table.

If it is a luncheon you are giving, remember no candles are used. The silverware and glassware depend upon what your menu is to be. Four courses are as many as should be served for the most formal of luncheons in these days. Three courses are sufficient for most occasions, and a two-course luncheon will no doubt prove best and easiest, especially if there is no maid service.

Whet the Appetite

Be sure to serve something to whet the appetite. Plan the food to fit in with the general scheme of decoration as well as with the season and the atmosphere of the party. The more attractive the food is served, the better the party will be. A few whole strawberries or wedges of fresh pineapple arranged around a mound of powdered sugar is always a good springy start. Orange juice accented with lemon juice is unusual when poured back into scooped out orange skins and a sipper put through a small hole in the top. Broiled grapefruit is also a fine "starter."

Hot breads are always a favorite. And it might be well to serve Melba toast and rye wafers, too, just in case some guests do not appreciate the "heavier" breads.

Salmon Scrapple, Savory and Homey

Salmon scrapple is just the food to serve with chutney or sweet pickle relish and a wedge of lemon. Tossed vegetable salad and hot rolls also round out an excellent menu. Prepare the scrapple according to the following recipe:

Salmon Scrapple—Measure 1 cup corn meal into a large saucepan. Pour 2 cups water over meal. Add 1½-teaspoons salt and cook until thickened. Pour in 1 2-3 cups milk and 1 pound canned salmon, 1 medium onion and 1 carrot chopped fine. Season with pepper. Cook slowly until thick enough to cling to side of spoon (as for mush to fry), stirring all the time. Pour into a bread pan that has been rinsed in cold water. When cold, turn from pan, slice about ½ inch thick, dip in meal and fry to a golden brown. Serves eight.

Vitamins in Milk For Healthy Skin, Says Dairy Expert

"Beauties of ancient days relied on milk baths for beautiful complexions but drinking milk would have been more beneficial," says Milton Hult, president of the National Dairy Council, "as milk contains vitamins now known to be valuable for this purpose."

Vitamins in milk may account for the difference between a healthy skin and an unhealthy one. Outstanding is vitamin A which helps prevent dry and rough skin.

One quart of milk furnished one fourth to one half of the daily vitamin A requirement, a fact attested by the Council on Foods of the American Medical Association which has stated:

"Milk is an excellent source of vitamin A as well as other dietary essentials. The observations emphasize the necessity of giving particular attention to the vitamin A content of the diet if for any reason it is not possible to secure the large amounts of milk properly recommended for daily consumption."

Candied Orange Peel

Cut oranges in half. Extract the juice or remove pulp. Then remove the tough skin, but leave all the white and yellow part of the peel. Cut into strips and boil gently in three waters, draining it off each time. Measure the amount of peel. Alow 1 cup of sugar for 1 cup of peel, and half that amount of water. Make a syrup in a large kettle. Drop cooked peel into it, and cook until tender and the syrup almost dry. Remove, drain, and when cool enough to handle, roll the peel in finely granulated sugar.

Maple Reflects Friendliness

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE AFFECTION we all feel for maple furniture has resulted in many a charming friendly room throughout the land. For the New England tradition strikes a very responsive chord in the taste of most Americans, since such a large percentage of us have Puritan blood—whether we know it or not. The rest of us, whose heritage looks elsewhere for its origins, like this staunch forthright furniture because it reflects so genuinely the mood and character of the basic things we all cherish most about America.

A letter from a reader with maple furniture and a refurbishing program to plan poses an interesting problem. She is doing over her living room and wants to achieve something really special and different here but wonders whether that will be possible with the furniture she has and loves. She expects to get a new rug, new lamps and accessories and will do over the walls and have new slip covers and curtains. She needs more seating facilities in the room but doesn't feel there's space enough for more big easy chairs.

Indeed we do feel that maple can be worked into a very special and different setting. In fact we often feel that few woods are more pleasant and harmonious with so many interesting background colors.

Consider this maple against pale gray walls for instance with a light gray rug. Then choose a splashy flowered chintz or cretonne with a gray ground—use miles of it . . . for draperies and for slip covers. For extra chairs, why not select a pair of upholstered side chairs, then slip cover them with this chintz too, having ruffled flounces around the bottom of a plain gray fabric.

For color accent introduce accessories of terra cotta, and select lamps with copper or terra cotta bases and crisp white shades.

Combine Tuna And Potato Chips

Potato chip crumbs can be combined with tuna. Freshen the crumbs in a moderate oven, then crush. Use ¾ cup tuna to each ¼ cup of crumbs. Add ½ cup cream of mushroom soup and pour into buttered baking dish. Cover with more chip crumbs and bake 20 minutes in moderate oven. This is a thrifty Lenten main-dish to serve two persons.

THE B VITAMINS in HAM

B_1 (THIAMINE) INTERNATIONAL UNITS	B_2 (RIBOFLAVIN) SHERMAN UNITS	ANTI-PELLAGRA FACTOR MILLIGRAMS

Based on ¼ pound edible portion, before cooking

When you get that Easter ham this year don't forget the nutritional essentials that come along with its ruddy color, tender texture and appetizing flavor.

The newest discovery about ham is its high content of B vitamins, particularly vitamin B_1 (thiamine).

As this chart shows, ham—like all lean pork—supplies 500 International Units of this important vitamin per ¼ pound.

Vitamin B_1 is considered necessary for healthy nerves, good digestion, the growth of children and good appetite.

Other B vitamins contained in ham are vitamin B_2 (riboflavin), considered necessary for growth and maintenance of health, and the highly important anti-pellagra vitamin.

Ham is a rich source of complete, high quality proteins and is 96 to 98% digestible, and contains essential minerals: iron, copper, phosphorus.

Remember, many of these food essentials (proteins, vitamins, minerals) are not stored in the body—must be supplied daily in the food you eat.

Buy a whole ham for economy, with its delicious leftovers in mind or, if you prefer, ask your meat-man about the thrifty butt or shank ends.

House Hears Plan to Aid Defense 'Okies'

By Frederick R. Barkley.
Copyright by New York Times

The movement of migrant families to national defense production centers is aggravating the problem of transient workers in the United States and is bound to create a major national problem when the defense emergency slackens, the House was told yesterday its special committee to investigate the interstate migration of destitute citizens.

To help meet this problem the committee offered a three-point program to care for migrants while they are pursuing jobs, to care for potential migrants in agriculture and to care for migrant families trying to get a new start and for whom return to their points of origin is not feasible.

The report quoted Charles F. Palmern, coordinator of defense housing, as estimating that a minimum of 2,000,000 workers would move to defense centers, and also quoted Charles P. Taft, assistant coordinator of health and welfare and related defense activities, as holding that the total of defense migrants may run up to 5,000,000.

The report said that the migrant problem attained large scope in the last decade, due to a number of causes.

"Basically," it asserted, "most of these causes were related to declining economic opportunities for people with more than average initiative who would not accept a permanently hopeless lot in the spot where they resided. The pressure on urban people to migrate had its roots during the 30's in the unemployment problem.

"In the decade just closed hundreds of thousands of these families moved every year. Many of them ultimately bettered themselves but most of them suffered severe hardships while in the process of migration. By and large, their incomes fell within the lowest sixth of the range of national-income groups and were precarious and intermittent, their housing was of the poorest, educational opportunities for their children scanty or nonexistent, and beyond all else the chances of their receiving public assistance were in most States highly unlikely."

Sect Members Run Afoul Of License Law

In an opinion which characterized the District licensing law as "nondiscriminatory," Judge Walter J. Casey in Police Court yesterday convicted two members of Jehovah Witnesses of selling magazines without a license.

The defendants, Orville J. Richie and David G. Busey, of 2101 Thirty-seventh Street Northwest, through their attorney, Mrs. Cecil M. Roeder, notified the court of their intention of appealing from the decision.

The men were arrested at Fourteenth Street and Park Road Northwest September 14. They were tried January 23, at which time it was testified that the men "offered for sale magazines containing religious tracts, setting forth the gospel of the Kingdom of Jehovah." Policemen bought copies of the pamphlets for 5 cents, the court was told.

Mrs. Roeder argued that the District law requiring licenses is in conflict with the first, fifth and fourteenth amendments to the Constitution.

Judge Casey's opinion stated that the local licensing act does not prohibit the sale of literature within the District "except upon the public streets or from public space and then only when a license is not procured."

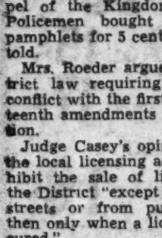
The jurist stated that under the local statute the authorities issue a license as a matter of course. "They may exercise no discretion," he declared.

"This court holds that the Licensing Act in question is general and nondiscriminatory in character and duly regulates the places from and upon which articles and things may be sold, upon obtaining the required license and paying the license tax."

Judge Casey sentenced each defendant to pay a $5 fine or spend one day in jail and then set the sentence aside and ordered the men to post $100 bail each pending appeal of the case.

Callahan to Head Radio Campaign For Defense Bonds

Vincent F. Callahan, Washington broadcasting executive, will head radio activities for the drive to sell the new defense savings bonds and stamps, the Treasury Department announced yesterday.



CALLAHAN

The Treasury said that Callahan plans a broad program of cooperation with major networks and hundreds of individual stations to bring the securities to the attention of the public.

Programs featuring stage and screen stars, sports announcements, special event programs, transcribed program and interviews will all be used to further sale of the bonds and stamps, it was announced.

Associated with the National Broadcasting Company here for ten years, Callahan has been in radio work in New Orleans, Boston and Springfield, Mass., during the last few years. He returned recently to this city.

Prior to radio, Callahan worked on newspapers in Washington. He lives with his family at 2943 Twenty-eighth Street Northwest.

D. C. Area Population Is 907,816

Metropolitan Washington — the District and nearby communities in Maryland and Virginia—had a population of 907,816 last April, and 253,052 dwelling units, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

The census count was for April 1, 1940, and showed that in the decade ended on that date the metropolitan population jumped 46.2 per cent, or a total of 286,757 persons.

Their figures were gathered shortly before the national defense program brought in a new rush of Government employes and other workers to the District.

(Area covered by the census figures includes all of the District, Alexandria and Arlington, four voting districts in Montgomery County, 13 voting districts in Prince Georges and two in Fairfax County.)

Within Washington, the April, 1940, count showed 663,091 persons, an increase of 176,222 persons, or 36.2 per cent in a decade. In the remainder of the metropolitan area the population jumped 82.4 per cent to a total of 244,725 persons.

The housing census showed that 13,092, or 5.2 per cent of the 253,052 dwelling uits in the metropolitan area were vacant and for sale or rent last April.

The Census Bureau said that their figures showed an increase of 50.6 per cent in the number of households in the metropolitan area during the decade, compared with a 46.2 per cent increase in population.

In 1940 an average of 3.8 persons occupied each dwelling unit, against an average of 3.9 a decade earlier, "a decrease consistent with the general trend throughout the country toward smaller families," the bureau said.

U. S. Library Gets Shelley Notebook

The manuscript notebook of Mary Godwin and Percy Bysshe Shelley which Mary kept, after the poet's death, in a casket with his heart, has been given the Library of Congress by Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittall, of Washington.

With this rare memento went two Shelley first editions from Mrs. Whittall. One, "Laon and Cythna," dated 1818, is in original sheets, unstitched, uncut and unopened. No other volume of his poetry is known to exist in this state, the library said.

The other gift volume, first edition copy of "Rosalind and Helen," dated 1819, is uncut and in a "magnificent" binding of crushed levant morocco, by Riviere, with the original wrappers preserved.

"The manuscript notebook is of great academic as well as romantic interest because a considerable portion of the 71 pages it contains is unpublished," the library said.

This notebook evidently was Mary's school copybook before she met and married the poet. Her name, Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin, and the date, May 16, 1814, was written in a large hand on the inside front cover.

Besides ten pages of her school exercises, penned in Latin, the notebook contains the original autograph manuscripts of two of her unpublished writings and two unpublished manuscripts by the poet which state his basic beliefs about religion and social justice.

Also contained is the original and only known manuscript of Shelley's famous review of his wife's novel, "Frakenstein."

Mrs. Whittal has made many other important donations to the library.

Senate Unit Gets Vista Battle

The controversy over Secretary Ickes' unobstructed vista yesterday was put squarely up to a three-man subcommittee headed by Senator Charles O. Andrews, a mild-mannered Florida Democrat.

The controversy also is known as the battle of the Pan-American Union Annex. It dates back to the days when the Secretary's new Interior Building was a blue print and when existing plans called for location of the annex due south of the structure-to-be.

Ickes complained that the annex would block the view from his new offices. The controversy he thus started was compromised in January when the Park and Planning and Fine Art commissions agreed to the moving of the annex east and the eliminating of Virginia Avenue between Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets which would be rerouted between C Street and Constitution Avenue.

The compromise started a fresh controversy. Officials and citizens complained that the street rerouting would create a traffic bottleneck at Virginia Avenue.

Nevertheless, a bill to effect the compromise was introduced in the Senate. Chairman Maloney of the Buildings and Grounds Committee, named Andrews and Senators Green of Rhode Island, and Brewster of Maine, as a subcommittee to decide what to do.

Andrews, busy on the Senate floor, first learned of the assignment when a Post reporter asked him if he would hold hearings. He took the suggestion under advisement.

Beautifully designed in conventional grands, uprights and period styles.

Democratic Women Hear Gen. Maxwell

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

Much of the success of the munitions program to which this Nation is committed depends on the efficient operation of the Export Control Act, controlling materials needed in armament production, Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, Administrator of Export Control, declared last night.

Gen. Maxwell outlined the provisions of the act and explained the necessity for it in an address at a dinner meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club. Mrs. Curtis Shears, the club president, presided and Miss Marguerite Rawalt, vice president of the Federal Bar Association, introduced the speaker.

"In contrast with our World War experience, when we were able to purchase the major portion of the initial armament for our expeditionary force from the French and the British, we found ourselves last summer as the principal source for the rearmament of the British army and air force," said Gen. Maxwell. "The purchasing agencies of the British government came into our markets and placed large orders for materials, machinery, and finished implements of war, as well as smaller items required for the maintenance of their forces in England.

"In addition to the demands of the British, the Soviet and Japanese governments, acting through their purchasing organizations, had placed large orders for machinery required for the development of their own industries. These buying programs of foreign nations had served to some extent to develop the type of industry which we require for our own armament program, and thus we have received some tangible benefits from their purchasing activity," he said.

"In the planning and operation of the licensing system, initiated in July and amplified as necessary, we have attempted to anticipate the needs of our armament production program by restricting the export of materials of which there was an apparent scarcity," the Administrator explained. "From the beginning of the controls and restrictions, we have made exceptions in favor of the British Empire and the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

"Such exports as have been permitted to other destinations have been permitted only after a careful check to determine the need for the items in our own defense program.

"While conservation of the materials and machinery essential for the success of our defense program has been the principal consideration throughout the duration of our export control, there are other secondary considerations of great importance," he continued.

"For example, the retention within the country of materials which otherwise would have been exported has had some effect on the cost of our defense program, because the scarcity of an item usually causes a rise in prices.

"By a thorough study of the degree of restriction before putting them into effect, we have avoided needless damage to our foreign trade."

"In the planning of controls, we utilize to the fullest the experience and knowledge of all departments and agencies of the Federal Government," he said, adding that these had all given the fullest cooperation."

"Equally vital to the success of our administration has been the spirit in which the controls have been accepted by the manufacturers and exporters of the country. In no instance," he asserted, "have we encountered opposition after the need for the action we were taking had been explained to the individuals or organizations concerned."

Gen. Maxwell said it was too early to give an adequate appraisal of the effect of the Lend-Lease Act on the control of exports.

"The addition of a $7,000,000,000 munitions program to those programs already under way calls for a very careful analysis and probable revision of our licensing restriction," he said.

"In general, these revisions will undoubtedly result in placing more items under control as well as greater restrictions on the movements from this country of the items under control."

Miss Parry to Speak

Miss Gertrude Hoyt Parry, alumnae secretary for Wilson College for Women at Chambersburg, Pa., will visit the Washington Alumnae Club tomorrow at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles W. Envoy Tells 20th Century Club Of Problems to Follow War

Problems as vital to the United States and Great Britain as is the outcome of the present war will face these nations in working out cooperation after peace has been restored, Richard G. Casey, Australian minister, told members of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday.

Addressing the club at its monthly meeting at the Y. W. C. A. he declared that, confident of ultimate victory for the democracies, good minds already are grappling with the problem of how these nations can cooperate in the peace to solve the difficulties that will face them.

The United States, because of its vast stores of gold and its other surpluses will have a serious problem in that direction. Australia will have surpluses of wool and wheat and the South American countries, an oversupply of other commodities, while needing still others, he pointed out.

"Not only in this war, but in the peace that will follow, the British and American peoples are essential to each other," he said, "if the world is going to stand some chance of being on an even keel and if we are going to live decently. Neither in war nor in peace can we live our own lives. If we maintain ourselves, it will have to be in a democratic world."

Referring to the part of his country in the war, he declared: "We are a small people, in numbers, but because of our geographic location and because of the number of men we can train, we may be a much bigger factor in the outcome than you might suppose. We are 100 per cent with Great Britain in this war and we are going to see it through to a finish."

Mrs. Lawrence Martin, president of the club, introduced Mr. Casey and presided at the business meeting preceding the program.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith conducted a memorial service for the late Mrs. Frederic E. Farrington, a past president of the club and long a prominent member.

Miss Blanche Polkinhorn, chairman of the club's committee for the National Symphony Orchestra, announced that the voluntary contributions of members to the symphony at the last meeting amounted to $816.

The club will make its annual "clean city" awards to garbage, trash and ash collectors and street cleaners next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, in Room 619 of the Police Building. Mrs. Robert L. Townsend is chairman of the committee.

The session yesterday was the last of the season, except for the annual meeting in May.

At the speakers' table will be the honor guests and representatives of the national association. There also will be three special tables for national officers of member fraternities and presidents of the chapters of professional fraternities in Washington affiliated with the Women's Professional Panhellenic Association. AN UNPRECEDENTED THING is happening next Tuesday—or rather, through an unprecedented circumstance, a breakfast in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt that was to have taken place in not happening.

Engraved invitations were issued and promptly accepted but the hostesses have decided to leave town and not to have the party after all—and Mrs. Roosevelt understands perfectly.

The breakfast is an annual affair given by the Congressional Club honoring the First Lady. Now, with Congress recessed until after Easter, members of Congress will be leaving Washington for the week as fast as D. A. R.'s and visitors to see the cherry blossoms will be coming in. By Tuesday, so few will be left to attend the breakfast it has been canceled, Mrs. John Tabor, president of the club, has announced.

ANNUAL PANAMA DINNER—The Women's Auxiliary to the Panama Canal Society will have its annual dinner at Hotel 2400 Saturday, April 19, at 6:30.

This is the second year of the women's society. The men have had an organization and an annual banquet for several years at which they gather to talk over the old construction days on the canal.

Those members serving as officers and the managing board of the auxilary are "old timers" and were there during construction days. They are: Mrs. William D. Wrightson, president; Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, first vice president; Mrs. Thomas Reynolds, second vice president; Mrs. C. J. Severn, treasurer; Mrs. H. M. Payne, secretary, and Mrs. Ed. H. Davidson, corresponding secretary.

Mrs. H. E. Spangler, chairman of the board, has serving with her Mrs. C. R. Chisholm, Mrs. H. Grimmnity, Miss Nina Hansen, Mrs. John Munroe, Mrs. F. D. Willson, Mrs. Bee Jenkins.

The auxiliary now has 89 members who are expected to attend the dinner and others interested will be welcome also.

ART TEA—Mrs. Alfred E. Fivaz, who has recently been admitted to membership in the D. C. branch, National League of American Pen Women, will present an exhibition of her paintings at a tea Sunday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock in the Grafton Hotel Studio. She will be assisted in receiving by Dr. Florence Everhart and Miss Rebecca Sahm.

Alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. F. E. Kidwell, Mrs. Harold Little, Miss Edwardina Warren and Miss Blance Dechamps.

Mrs. Fivaz' exhibition will consist of oils, watercolors and pastels, and the subjects covered will include landscapes, animals, still life and portraits. She has had much favorable criticism of her work, and the exhibition she is presenting Sunday will be of much interest to art lovers.

The Schubert Singers, a sextette of men's voices, directed by Mrs. C. Adair, will present a short program at 4:30 p. m.

Camp Fire Girls Gets Land Gift

A two-acre tract in nearby Virginia has been given to the Camp Fire Girls Association of the Potomac Area by an anonymous donor, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Irene Caldwell, president of the Potomac Area Council.

Mrs. Caldwell made the announcement at the opening session of the spring training course for Camp Fire Guardians, conducted yesterday and today at the Universalist Memorial Church on Sixteenth Street. The location of the tract has not yet been made public, but it will be near enough to the Capital to be convenient for the girls' camping trips and eventually a cabin will be erected there.

The Potomac Area plans to arrange for the use of Camp Wawanessa, of the Baltimore Camp Fire Girls, for a month this summer. Last season 80 girls from this area had their vacations there.

About 50 women are attending the training course now in session, under the direction of Miss Catherine Wahlstrom, of New York, national field executive. The guardians represent the three divisions within the area: Maryland, of which Mrs. F. Norman Hearn is chairman; Virginia, Mrs. Esmond Brandt, chairman, and the District, Mrs. Martin Jansson, chairman.

To Hear Miss Hadley

Miss Laura Hadley, associate professor of home economics at Alabama College, will give a brief talk on her present work in the United States Office of Education at the Alabama alumnae luncheon tomorrow at 1 p. m. at the A. A. U. W., 1634 Eye Street Northwest.

Stretch, Bend, Twist to Keep Form Divine

By Ida Jean Kain

EXERCISE has come a long ways since its middy blouse and bloomer days. It even has a new name. It's now called body proportioning and it's put exercise smack on Fifth Avenue. The modern daily dozen is based on kinesology, which is the science of bodily mevement. With the right technique you can nip in the waiste, slim down the hips, straighten out a sway back and get a beautiful figure.

Correct Sway-back

The stomach muscles are strengthened by forcible retraction of the abdominal wall — this also helps to correct sway-back. Lying on back on floor, knees flexed, pull up and in with lower abdominal muscles. The abdominal muscles are reflexly contracted in creeping movements and in exercises which stretch the body to full extension.

Help Support Bust

Since the muscles of the entire shoulder girdle are coordinated in action, arm exercises are also effective in improving the posture and in toning the pectoral muscles which help support the bust.

Sweethearts for Six Years, Couple Enjoy Every Minute They Are Together; But Girl's Family Criticize Her Indulgent Attitude Toward the Man

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a professional woman, 25 years old, very much in love with a man of 30. We have gone together for nearly six years. We enjoy every minute we are together, and consider time well spent just sitting and talking. Each of us readily accepts the other's suggestions on recreation, whether or not the prospect seems really interesting, just for the pleasure of being together and appreciating the other's enjoyment.

He doesn't believe in giving expensive gifts (which he cannot afford); and he doesn't use "honeyed" words or like a public display of affection. He just shows in everything he does how much he thinks of me. He doesn't like quarrels and neither do I. I believe I am intelligent enough to understand him and I feel that our love is all that anyone could wish for.

But this is my problem: My mother and sister say that I am foolish to be considerate of him,—in doing what he wants to do if I don't really care to. They say I am "foolish to trust him or any other man." They say that living in the big city, as he does (we live in a suburban village), it isn't possible that I am his only girl. They say I am foolish if I don't give him a good "raking over the coals," once in a while. They say he doesn't love me or he would show it. (Once, my mother went so far as to ask him if he loved me. He said, "No." But would you blame him?) My sister, by the way, rarely misses a chance to fuss with her beau the minute he enters the house.

Now, I think I am right in being faithful; in trusting him; and in doing all in my power to make us happy in our feeling for each other, whether we are together or apart. While I don't make an effort to have other beaux, I do take a drive occasionally with men who are mutual friends of ours, in whom I have only a casual interest. Frequently one of these men and I will drive by his house to take him with us. He never shows any alarm or jealousy, because he says he trusts me just as I trust him.

His sister has many girl friends who come to his house and occasionally he will join them in a drink or a game of cards or in conversation. Also, he often goes to the home of his sister's best friend, who lives very near him. When he sees me, he tells me what he has been doing and whom he has been seeing, and I always know he is being truthful. I have never given him any cause to hide things from me, because, frankly, I am not of a suspicious or jealous nature and don't worry about other girls.

Do you think I should follow my own inclinations, or pay more heed to my mother's and sister's warnings and instructions? Sincerely, ALEXANDRA B.

'Back Seat Driving' Wrecks Many Lives

DEAR ALEXANDRA B.: Although no doubt animated by the best of intentions, your mother and sister are guilty of meddling dangerously in your affairs. Their busybody "warnings and instructions," whether heeded or not, are bound to result in more harm than help to you. For while you may have the self-confidence and will power to try to hold to your predetermined course in spite of their arguments, their continuous Niagara flow of criticism must inevitably cast a blight over that area of your life in which they are so aggressively interfering.

Their behavior affords a graphic illustration of the major reason why it is either impossible or impracticable, in most cases, for unmarried young adults to continue living under the same roof with their parents or brothers and sisters, after (say) their twenty-first to twenty-third year. Each individual must (or should, at least, aspire to) work out his own "salvation" in the field of human relations,—permitting himself to be guided more by the dictates of his own intuition and intelligence than by the "back seat" driving of someone who cannot possibly see the road ahead through his eyes or from his position.

Heaven alone knows how many lives have been wrecked completely, or hopelessly bogged down in blind-alley situations, as a result of just such "back seat" driving, emanating from the throats of "bossy" next-of-kin, who assume, with ruthless complacency, that "family ties" invest them with authority to tell a luckless relative what he ought to feel and do and say. That kind of "shooting off the mouth" doesn't constitute enlightened, truly responsibly minded guidance. It is either an unconsidered, impromptu statement of what the speaker THINKS he MIGHT do IF he were the other person; or else a demand that the other person stop acting like himself and slavishly copy the speaker.

It has always seemed to me that nobody has the right to suggest, even tentatively, any course of action to another, without first having made an intensely sympathetic effort to comprehend, imaginatively, something of the other's nature, viewpoint and aspirations. Only by becoming, through the medium of sympathetic imagining, "one-with-another," (so that one looks out upon life from his soul's center, as it were), can one hope to be of any value to him in making one's disinterested, supplementary viewpoint available to him. Our true friends are those persons who maintain with us a vital contact-point of sympathetic understanding, by which they communicate to us a further knowledge of the world as they find it to be,—while comprehending our different emotions and reactions and discoveries and experiences, and showing a willingness to respect their validity for us.

If your six years' association with this man has been a happy experience, and one which you are content to perpetuate indefinitely on the present terms (which, I assume, are "compromise" terms, tacitly and delicately adjusted to your mutual satisfaction), then I see no reason why you should throw a monkey wrench into the works by trying to stampede the gentleman into either marriage or a servile position in the sentimental relationship. (And this, of course, is the idea implicit in your mother's and sister's harangue). After all, who knows whether you would be any happier—if, indeed, as happy—in the relationship in a different form? If the day ever comes that you find yourself acutely unhappy in this particular set-up—without any "needling" from your next-of-kin—it will be time enough then to give serious thought to revising your attitude toward the man. Whisperings Ahead

Now approaches the time of schemes and plans,
The open season of talk behind hands,
As whispering sessions get underway
And club elections have their day

Today Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

Local socialites are whiling away the remaining days of Lent by devoting themselves to ART.

Mrs. Chauncey Potterby-Potts, whose husband recently filed bankruptcy proceedings has announced a new business venture. Mrs. Potterby-Potts will conduct a class at the Plush Sofa Club on "How To Go Through an Art Gallery." Professional models will demonstrate to the socialites how to stand when viewing a painting and at what angles to adjust their lorgnettes or horn-rimmed spectacles. Mrs. Potterby-Potts will also give lectures on how to apply technical art terms to current exhibitions and to the more outstanding works of art in the local galleries.

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, eccentric dowager has started a movement to have wheel chairs and moving platforms provided in the larger galleries so that art lovers may enjoy the paintings at ease.

Mink Mixup

Largest hen party of the season, held last night at the Hotel Swank, resulted in a general mixup of mink wraps. Several Russian mink coats were taken by mistake by women who owned Jap mink coats, and one dowager who posesses a certified champion Alaskan mink found that a guest with only a mink dyed muskrat had walked off by mistake with her coat. Social secretaries and butlers today kept telephones buzzing trying to straighten out the muddle.

Mrs. Ethelbert Vanderpuffer finally recovered her valuable Eastern mink wrap from a woman who had only a blended mink coat. "It serves me right" said Mrs. Vanderpuffer today.

As I told my husband, I should have gotten a chinchilla wrap. Mink is getting so common."

In High Places

"I suppose Juliet and Lucille were at the party?"

"Oh yes! Pouring of course! And acting as if they owned the place."

"I never saw such pushers in my life. I can't see why Mrs. Swagg has them around so much. Still I suppose they've got the right system. It's the only way to get anywhere."

"Well I don't know. Look at Elsie Dripp."

"Yes just look at her! Always left in the corner! And yet Elsie's one of the finest, sweetest, most genuine persons I ever met!"

"Oh but wait! You should have seen her yesterday. She was pouring coffee!"

"Really! Well I'm glad Mrs. Swagg has such sense. Elsie's such a wonderful person. And yet she's always been overlooked."

"Not any more. They say Mrs. Swagg's put her on her committee for the Spring Attic Pilgrimage."

"No! Why I wouldn't think Elsie would be the type for that. She's so backward."

"Yes and Mrs. Luker's invited her to the dinner for Prince Pimento."

"No! Well of course Elsie's a fine person but I wouldn't think she'd fit in there."

"Oh and another thing! They say the Silver Fox League is putting her up for second vice president."

"No! Now that's perfectly ridiculous! Elsie's a nice enough little person, but she so's colorless and drab. I can't understand it."

"Well of course you know what a lot of people are saying?"

"What?"

"That Elsie's not so dumb as she seems. That's she's pretty smart underneath and knows just what she wants."

"Well you know, fond as I am of Elsie, I think she's a good deal of a pusher down underneath."

"I wouldn't be surprised!"

Suits Reach New Height of Style

Never before have suits been as practical, wearable, well designed, well cut as now.

Wool fabrics vary as much as types. The bolero is still with us, although we see with rapid frequency the long torso jacket and coat. The bolero is navy, gray or beige—it fits more closely and usually is worn with a pique or lingerie blouse with frills at bracelet length sleeves, and its skirt is flatly pleated.

Single-breasted, long lapel, wrist-length semifitted jackets, with slim, gored skirts or slender skirts with kick pleat front and back are classics.

Mrs. Emerson Smith Is Honored by Howes

One of the fascinating angles to Washington today is that almost nobody agrees with anyone else.

After the passage of the lease-lend bill, a spirit of sweet tolerance prevailed for almost 24 hours. Then, with "to aid or not to aid Britain" a dead issue, everybody burst into arguments again—this time concerning war aims, the world reconstructed, etc.

Every hostess nowadays should have at least two rooms in which to separate people. Not that anyone at Mr. and Mrs. George Howe's party yesterday wasn't anything other than amiable—but, still, it's nice to have two rooms in which to put the pro-British, anti-capitalists, and the pro-British, anti-everything else.

Mr. and Mrs. Howe gave a small cocktail party in honor of Mrs. Emerson Smith, of Providence, R. I. She is spending a few days with them at their home in Georgetown, which Mr. Howe, who is the well-known architect, did over recently. Mr. and Mrs. Howe have two little English children staying with them this winter, young friends of Angus Malcom of the British Embassy.

Guests Gather In Library

Some of the guests gathered in the library, with its pale green walls and comfortable sofas. The rest stayed in the living room, where bowls of spring flowers were placed here and there on the tables.

Mrs. Howe wore a black dress, simply made. Seen here and there were:

Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, jr., exchanging notes with Miss Rebecca Wellington, in the library. Robert Coe, of the State Department, just back from a brief winter vacation in Havana. . . . Mrs. Higginson Rogers chatting with John Long, public relations official of the Bethlehem Steel Co. . . . Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, in a black dress and a hat to match, trimmed in yellow, chatting with the host.

Maj. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond . . . Osgood Hooker, a visitor from Burlingame, Calif., who is in Washington for the weekend . . . Stephen Morris, of the State Department . . . and Mr. and Mrs. Francis McVeagh, who are visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. Henry Leonard, and Maj. Leonard, over the weekend.

Other guests included Mrs. Donald Hiss, who wore with her black crepe dress a white hat trimmed with red coq feathers; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Dominick, William Elmslie, of the British Embassy; Edward Burling, jr. (Mrs. Burling is skiing in Canada); Miss Anne Perrin, Mrs. Hoyer Millar, wife of the First Secretary of the British Embassy, and one or two others.

Crowd Jams Arcade to Doors

Earlier in the day, practically everybody (but everybody) jammed the Piccadilly Arcade sale to the doors. In two hours, $3,000 worth of goods were sold. Sitting at a table near the door were Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, wife of the Librarian of Congress, and Mrs. Patrick Hill, both of whom had a lot to do with the success of the sale. Probargain people had jammed the sidewalk even before the sale opened yesterday.

Former Senator Hiram Bingham made a hasty visit to most of the shops in the arcade, but stopped quite a while in the book corner . . . Mrs. Gifford Pinchot had to hold customers back from the antiques shop when the crowd got so big nobody could move. Incidentally, there was a bit of "shoplifting" there earlier in the day . . . Mrs. Charles L. McNary filled in as salesgirl in the antiques shop late in the afternoon and was busy every minute . . . "I've already spent all my money," said Mrs. Emil Hurja, ten minutes after she arrived at the book shop. Incidentally, she went there to deliver some books her husband had promised to donate; but she had just handed them over when she spotted two others she wanted to buy, and did . . . Mrs. Ollie James wandered blithely from one shop to another . . . Mrs. George Rublee took in donations for a hospital bed, and had collected $40 in no time at all . . . Mrs. Dean Acheson and Mrs. James V. Forrestal looked fresh as daisies, even after being on duty as saleswomen for several hours . . . Lady Broderick chatted gaily with friends as she sold them British benefit pins.

Mrs. Bruce Smith Entertains for Mrs. W. A. Sturges

Mrs. Wesley A. Sturges, of New Haven, Conn., was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Bruce Smith entertained at a small luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower. Mrs. Sturges, who came to Washington to attend the annual dinner of the Women's National Press Club on Tuesday night, left last night for New York, where she will spend a few days before returning home.

Dr. Sturges, professor of law at the Yale Law School, accompanied his wife to Washington, but returned to New Haven on Wednesday afternoon. The Sturgeses formerly lived in Washington and were widely entertained during their visit.

Mrs William O. Douglas was among the guests at Mrs. Smith's luncheon yesterday. Others there were Mrs. Samuel O. Clark and Mrs. J. Donald Halstead. Mrs. Thurman Arnold, who had guests lunching with her at the Mayflower joined the Smith party for a few minutes.

Mrs. Smith will leave today for New York to spend the weekend.

Daughter Is Guest Of the Leonards

Major and Mrs. Henry Leonard have with them for a few days the latter's daughter, Mrs. Francis McVeagh, of Cambridge, Mass.

Last evening Major and Mrs. Leonard gave a dinner at their home in Georgetown in honor of Mrs. McVeagh. She will remain here over the weekend.

Aletha Harcourt Donates Painting Piccadilly Sale

Returned to Washington after an absence of several years is Miss Alteha Harcourt, of London. She was in New York before the war broke out and has made her headquarters there ever since.

Miss Harcourt and her sister, Miss Aletha Harcourt, leased a studio in Washington a few years ago and spent several months here. Both are talented artists, and Miss Anne Harcourt came here to donate a painting to the Piccadilly Arcade. Her sister has been in London since the war and is driving an ambulance. Their father, Gerald Harcourt, is a well-known portrait painter.

The retiring Air and Military Attache and Senhora de Machado are expected to leave shortly for Brazil.

Mrs. Willkie Makes Rounds At Arcade Sale

"Well, it looks as if the Willkies aren't going to settle down anytime soon," said Mrs. Wendell L. Willkie as she emerged from the fortune teller's booth at the Piccadilly Arcade. "I had hoped we'd be getting back to normalcy, but I must say I've forgotten exactly what normalcy would be," she added with a smile.

She and her Washington hostess Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, and Miss Gretchen Green, of New York, who is also a guest of Mrs. Bacon, made the rounds of the arcade shops. Smartly turned out in a pencil blue tailored suit and a matching hat, Mrs. Willkie lingered longest in the book alcove and in the section where china and glassware were sold.

Mrs. Bacon entertained at dinner last night in honor of Mrs. Willkie. There were 20 in the company. Mrs. Willkie is undecided as to when she will return to New York. At the Piccadilly Arcade late yesterday afternoon she said she probably would remain over the weekend, as her husband is coming down to attend the Gridiron dinner on Saturday night.

Benet Gives Book To Benefit R. A. F.

Among the books that will be on sale today and tomorrow at the Piccadilly Arcade will be an autographed copy of "John Brown's Body," by Stephen Vincent Benet.

The latter, who donated the book, to be sold for the benevolent fund of the Royal Air Force, presented it to the Piccadilly Arcade committee through his aunt, Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, of Washington.

Mrs. Benet, who has been ill for several days, is recovering, but she will not be able to receive on Sunday. She expects to resume her weekly "at homes" later in the season.

C. F. Brooke's Widow Dies

Mrs. Cornelia Miller Brooke, 87, lifelong resident of Sandy Spring, Md., and widow of Charles Farquhar Brooke, whose home housed the first telephone in Montgomery County, died yesterday after a brief illness. Private services and interment were held last night.

Born at Alloway, the family estate of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warwick P. Miller, of Sandy Spring, Mrs. Brooke until a few years ago was active in the Horticulture Society and the American friends Service Committee. She belonged to the Society of Friends. For the last few years Mrs. Brooke lived at Tall Timbers, the estate of Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Tumbleson, her son-in-law and daughter.

Mr. Brooke, who died last June, was president of the board of directors of the Savings Institution of Sandy Spring, where he served as director for 54 years. An early experimental telephone line connected the Brooke home with the residence of Mr. Brooke's brother, James Stabler.

U. S. Must Work as One, Senator Ball Tells Builders

CONGRESSMAN WELCOMED — Representative Ball, of Minnesota (left), guest speaker, is welcomed to the fourth annual dinner of the Washington Building Congress, staged last night at the Mayflower Hotle. Here Ball meets James R. Skinker (right), president, and Col. Hector M. Aring (center), chairman of the board

A call for "real patriotism"—from businessman, professional worker, laborer, farmer, housewife—to solve grave national problems lying immediately ahead was sounded by Senator Joseph H. Ball at the fourth annual dinner of the Washington Building Congress last night in the Mayflower Hotel.

Addressing 700 members and guests of the organization, the junior Senator from Minnesota stressed the urgency of solving our foreign and domestic difficulties through the democratic system.

Declaring we are at war in all except the military sense, the speaker said avoidance of actual conflict is "in the laps of the gods." He voiced the opinion, however, that within a few weeks we may settle that question in deciding whether we will convoy supplies to Britain.

We Won't "Sit Idly By"

"If the survival of Britain," he amplified, "is vital enough to our security to justify passage of the lend-lease bill, and I believe it is, then we are not going to sit idly by and permit the munitions we made for Britain to pile up on our docks or to be sent to the bottom of the Atlantic by Nazi submarines and dive bombers."

Greater than this imminent issue, however, is another which will arise after the war and constitute a real decision for us, Senator Ball said. Advising against repetition of the mistake of isolation, and that a Utopian federation of nations will be slow in evolving, he predicted it would be the job of our Navy and allies to maintain world peace not by sending Marines to every minor disturbance but by domination of the oceans so that no would-be aggressor ever again threatens control of these highways of trade.

Foresees Higher Taxes

"We may have to take some inflation, enough to reduce to some extent our debt load, and make it easier to pay off. But it seems to me that we should by a combination of economy and higher taxes at least manage to raise current revenue to a point where it should cover current expenditures for normal Government activities with at least a billion or two billion dollars a year to apply toward eventual amortizatiton of the debt."

Indicating a certainty of much higher taxes, he said, "Personally I feel that the best place to raise more revenue is in personal income taxes and I am convinced that we can get only a small part of it out of the upper brackets and that it will be in the middle brackets, from $3,000 a year to $100,000 a year incomes that the bulk of any increased revenue will have to come. Corporation taxes probably should be increased, and probably will be increased to the point where no business is going to make any real profit out of the defense emergency—in fact, some of them will be lucky if they don't wind up owing the Government money."

Sees Smaller Profits

"Altogether, what's ahead for America doesn't look very pleasant to me," was Senator Ball's forecast. "There are going to be smaller and smaller profits all around for business. The social gains about which we hear so much are going to slow down considerably. We are going to need some real patriotism to solve the problems ahead."

Calling for unselfish politicians and their support by the citizenry, he emphasized the work in prospect will demand real patriotism on the part of housewives, laborers, farmers, business and professional workers—that of placing the Nation's welfare above their own.

The guest list for the speaker's table included:

Robert E. Freer, commissioner, Federal Trade Commission; W. H. Harrison, Office of Production Management; David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol; Theodore Irving Coe, technical secretary, American Institute of Architects; John Locher, executive secretary, Washington Building and Construction Trades Council; John Ihlder, executive officer, Alley Dwelling Authority; Nathan C. Wyeth, District municipal architect; James E. Colliflower, president, Washington Board of Trade; L. M. Cassidy, vice president, Johns Manville Sales Corporation; Horace D. Rouzer, assistant architect of the Capitol.

Col. Henry A. Osthagan, assistant to the director of procurement, Federal Works Agency; F. Stuart Fitzpatrick, manager, Construction and Civic Development Department, United States Chamber of Commerce; Robert H. Davis, District inspector of buildings and director of inspection; Proctor L. Dougherty, former District Commissioner; W. A. H. Church, treasurer, and Henry A. Johns, secretary of the Building Congress.

Comdr. Rogers' Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Funeral services for Lieut. Comdr. William Burlingham Rogers, 68, retired United States Navy Supply Corps officer, will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Gawler funeral parlors, 1756 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. He will be buried in Arlington Cemetery.

Commander Rogers, who had resided here since his retirement in 1912, was found unconscious in bed by a maid early yesterday when she entered to clean his rooms in the Kedrick Apartments, 1801 I Street Northwest. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Virgil B. Jackson, of the same address, a few minutes later.

Born in Troy, Erie County, Pa., April 10, 1872, he enlisted in the Navy at the age of 16. Following service in the Spanish-American War, he received a permanent appointment in the Supply Corps in 1900.

Commander Rogers, whose wife, the former Adeline von Palmenberg, died three years ago, retired from the Navy in 1912 but was recalled to duty during the World War. He retired permanently in 1920.

During his years of service he had been stationed at the Washington, Philadelphia, Mare Island, Boston, Norfolk and New York Navy Yards. He also had seen service in the Philippines, at the Cavite Naval Station there, and accompanied the Asiatic Fleet on two tours of duty.

His service at sea had included stations aboard the U. S. S. Vicksburg, U. S. S. Minnesota, U. S. S. Glacier, and U. S. S. Wisconsin. He was a grandnephew of Alexander Ramsey, first Governor of Minnesota and former Secretary of War, and a nephew of Commodore Roger Peel.

Intoxicated With Success

New York, April 3 (INS).—Being of Greek ancestry, Alexander Themalis is elated over the success of his fellow-countrymen. But he isn't happy about his own.

Out of work four months, Alexander recently got a job. He followed the war so avidly he developed a nervous condition. This induced hiccups. So he was taken to a Brooklyn hospital and placed in an oxygen tent.

Too Much of a Good Thing

Fort Meade officials yesterday took steps to end a racket. Some of the boys, on weekend leave, had the family physician phone that the soldier was sick and required an extra day's rest. The dodge depleted many companies, prevented drill on Mondays.

Henceforth a sworn statement from Army selected physicians will be necessary for excuse.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Congress has ordered the legal staffs at Farm Credit Administration and Rural Electrification Administration transferred to the Agriculture Department under Solicitor Mastin White. Presumably, White will appoint Robert K. McConnaughey, FCA general counsel, and Vincent D. Nicholson, REA general counsel, his assistants. Both, however, probably will be given salary cuts. White is paid $9,000 and so is Nicholson, but FCA pays McConnaughey $10,000. It's natural to assume that White won't pay his underlings as much or more than he is paid. The merger was ordered in the Agriculture Appropriation bill. It will become effective July 1.

REA is opposed to the transfer and Senator George Norris fought their battle on the Senate floor. Norris seemed to think the merger was all a part of a scheme to oust Harry Slattery, REA administrator. "For some time," Norris said, "it has been known that there has been a sort of organization among Government employes who wanted to get rid of Henry Slattery. Various high officials of the Department of Agriculture have spoken to me about it . . . It is alleged by a great many that there are quite a number in the office who want Mr. Slattery's job. I know there is a systematic effort to get him out of it."

Attorney General Robert Jackson didn't appear too happy with his job when he told a House committee "the Department of Justice has become not merely a law office, but an administrative department, to my regret. I may say I did not seek the Immigration and Naturalization Service." . . . State Department last year requested six foreign service officers to resign "for the good of the service . . . State employes last year worked 156,000 hours of overtime. A few employes who are ordered to work Sundays in the communications division are paid, but all others aren't.

Commerce's Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which has been reorganized time and again since the New Deal came into power, will be reshuffled again. A blueprint has been worked out and it's planned to make it public today.. Reports say it is far more drastic than anything ever proposed. Jobs will be abolished and divisions wiped out. Late last night it was rumored that several key officials in the bureau had threatened to resign.

Secretary Hull has had his official car for six years and it has been driven 40,000 miles. When told of it, Representative Rabaut said he was setting a good example for the other Cabinet members . . . Federal Employes Council is giving a dance Saturday night at Riverside Stadium for Federal employes. Vincent Lopez and his band will entertain. Tickets are $1.10. Hostesses and draftees will be admitted free.

Justice Department has officially requested that it be given the District Building when the local government moves to its new home. Justice wants it for the FBI and Immigration and Naturalization Service. Meantime, the Federal Government is trying to close a deal with the District for its building, but to date its offers have been too low. Justice also is trying to get the old National Hotel Building on Pennsylvania Avenue for an annex . . . Public Buildings Administration has begun to build 650 prefabricated demountable houses at Indianhead.

Immigration and Naturalization Service was given $200,000 by the House in its 1942 appropriation bill to hire noncivil service employes. If the sum is finally approved, it will mean that the several hundred noncivil service employes at Alien Registration will be retained . . . The CAA Act specifies salaries of $12,000 each for the administrator and board members, but the House reduced the salaries to $10,000 by a rider to the Commerce appropriation bill.

Civil Service Commission has ruled that persons whose names are on its registers and who are called to military service shall be restored to registers on which their names originally appeared after being honorably discharged. If the original register is out of existence the name of the eligible will be placed on the succeeding or appropriate register. Eligibles whose names were certified while they were in the armed forces will be restored to the registers ahead of all others.

D. C. Youth, U.S. Employe Die in Traffic

One Killed as Truck Hits Pole; GPO Worker Struck On Baltimore Pike

Traffic deaths in 1940..... 79
Deaths to date this year..... 22
Deaths this date last year..... 16

A Washington youth was injured fatally here—the year's twenty-second traffic death here—when a truck in which he was riding crashed against a fireplug and utility pole, and a Government Printing Office employe was struck and killed on the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard near Berwyn, Md., last night.

The dead are:

John Curtis, 18, colored, of 1812 Gainesville Street Northeast.

Aubrey E. Logan, 38, of 922 W. Madison Street, Hyattsville, Md.

Curtis died from the loss of blood before medical aid could reach him after a Yale Laundry truck, in which he was riding, hit a utility pole when the driver, according to police, lost control while running downhill in the 1400 block of Morris Road Southeast.

Given Last Rites

Called to the scene by witnesses, the Rev. F. M. W. Schneeweiss, of 1600 Morris Road, gave the dying man last rites of the Catholic Church.

Police listed the driver as Benjamin McCalip, 21, colored, of 42 Myrtle Street Northeast, who escaped unhurt. Another passenger, Mosel Yarbrugh, 21, colored, of 1427 Fifth Street Northwest, was treated for a minor head injury at Casualty Hospital. Both men were held for action of the coroner.

Logan was pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital, where he was rushed by the Branchville rescue squad, after he had been felled by an auto on the Baltimore pike. Logan works at the G. P. O.

At Hyattsville, Prince Georges County police listed the driver of the auto as Thomas Brown, colored, of Atlantic City. He was charged with manslaughter.

Auto Victim Arrested

Samuel Wilson, 27, of 13 Grant Street, Takoma Park, Md., was pinned under his car in an accident at Lee Boulevard, near Memorial Bridge, and had to be extricated by the Washington Rescue Squad. At Emergency Hospital he was treated for head injuries.

A Washington motorist was free under $1,000 bond yesterday after having been booked on technical charges of reckless driving and colliding, pending the outcome of the injuries of Mrs. Sarah E. Cornell, 67, 101 Uhler Avenue, Alexandria, who was struck by a light truck on Mount Vernon Avenue late Wednesday night. Her condition was described as critical last night at Alexandria Hospital.

The driver, Adger L. Cureton, of the 1800 block of California Street, Washington, told police his truck struck Mrs. Cornell when she stepped into its path

Cycle Fells Woman

A careening motorcycle struck a pedestrian and smashed into an iron fence at Twelfth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest after its rider had been knocked to the street in a collision with an automobile.

The motorcycle, police said, was operated by Oscar Luckett, 29, of 18 N Street Southeast. The car was driven by Clarence Wilson, colored, 45, of 438 Q Street Northwest.

Luckett was knocked to the street and his machine bounced to the sidewalk and felled Mrs. Stella Wise, 65, of 1221 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

A charge of passing a red light was placed against Wilson, driver of the automobile.

A man identified as George Dent, 37, colored, of Washington, was brought into Casualty Hospital with a fractured skull. Carl H. Schinner, 26, of Edmonston, Md., a milk-truck driver, told police that at Tenth and C Streets Southwest a passerby informed him that a colored man had fallen from his truck. On turning back, Schinner said, he discovered the injured colored man.

Three youths were hurt yesterday when their automobile crashed into a tree and overturned at Rock Creek Church Road and Park Place Northwest. They were all treated at Casualty Hospital.

Police said the driver, William E. Boggs, 21, of 1800 Newton Street Northwest, apparently lost control of the car. He received head injuries.

Midway Citizen Group Hears Housing Talk

A charge that the present influx of workers to Washington is overcrowding housing facilities and resulting in unsanitary conditions was made last night by Mrs. Edna Peyton, chairman of the social service committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Appearing as guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Midway Citizens Association in the Morgan Elementary School, Mrs. Peyton said her committee had just completed an investigation into Washington housing conditions.

As one of the steps to relieve the housing congestion, she urged that all District residents open their homes to recent arrivals. The meeting was conducted by George Johnston, association president.

Washington Highlands

Washington Highlands Citizens Association last night voted not to join the Municipal Assembly, new Washington civic group, on the grounds the organization would duplicate the activities of the Federation of Citizens Association.

Members added the assembly might have been formed for reasons not apparent in its constitution and by-laws.

The unit also approved a resolution seeking resurfacing of Valley Avenue between Atlantic Avenue and Fourth Street Southeast and Halley Terrace from Mississippi Avenue to Halley Place Southeast.

Northeast Conference

A motion to seek national representation and suffrage for Washington on the grounds that the present population here is greater than that of "six Western States and one Eastern State (Rhode Island) was adopted last night by the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations.

Meeting in the Fourth Precinct Station, delegates from 14 Northeast section groups heard John McDonald, representing the Dahlgren Terrace group, declare that Washington should receive a franchise because of the population comparisons.

Bradbury Heights

Bradbury Heights Citizens Association last night urged continuation of Southern Avenue from Bowen Road to Suitland Road Southeast as a means of expediting traffic while an alternate downtown artery, Alabama Avenue, is being repaved.

Members stressed that with Alabama Avenue blocked auto traffic would be delayed in reaching downtown Washington if there were no other direct route. Repaving of Alabama Avenue is expected to commence soon.

Leslie Altman, president of the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis bus line, discussed service of 16 extra buses now operating in rush hours in the area.

Young Pianist Here Plays With Brilliance

By Ray C. B. Brown

Dorothy Hutcheson plays a piano recital Thursday night in the Arts Club of Washington. Program of compositions by Beethoven, Chopin, Rubenstein, Litzenberger, Staub, Schulz-Evler, Debussy, Griffes and Scott.

Members and guests of the Arts Club enjoyed last evening an informal recital by Dorothy Hutcheson, a young pianist who recently came to Washington from Wilkes-Barre. A pupil of her father, Raymond Litzenberger, and of Sigismond Stojowski, she has a sound technical foundation and commands a brilliancy of execution. To these assets she adds an engaging manner and abundance of temperamental warmth, and her playing affords plesure through its spontaneity and freedom.

BROWN

Obviously, though unnecessarily, nervous at the opening of her program, she made some slips of memory in Beethoven's E flat major sonata from Opus 31, but did not allow these lapses to interfere with a fluent and poetic reading. Rapidly regaining her poise as the sonata progressed, she gave a dashing performance of the presto finale.

Chopin was represented by the F sharp minor prelude, which was followed by Rubinstein's "Staccato Etude," one of the war-horses of an older generation of pianists. She negotiated its exacting finger stretches with neatness and speed, and handled its lyric interlude with tonal beauty.

Her own variations on "Russian Lament" showed an imaginative skill in thematic and rhythmic manipulation, as well as a feeling for the potentialities of a melody in development. In the same group were Victor Staub's "Sous Bois" and Anton Schulz-Evler's scintillant arabesques on "The Beautiful Blue Danube."

Her concluding group contained Debussy's A minor prelude from "Pour le Piano," Charles Griffes' "The Fountain of Acqua Paola," and Syril Scott's "Danse Negre."

Dr. Pruden to Speak

Draft Board Member Calls Himself Up

Walter W. Dosh, 26, youngest official of the ashington sleective service machine, has been called up by the same local board, No. 7, with which he has served as Registrants' Advisory Board member.

DOSH

Dosh, of 1757 Shepherd Street Northwest, since last October has been busy aiding registrants in the seventh selection unit in answering the call to the colors.

Because he is to be inducted himself next week as the April call gets under way he took his own case under advisement last night. Dosh said he was considering applying for duty in the Judge Advocate General's branch of the Army.

The young attorney saw Board No. 7 reach his order number about a month ago. He arranged a postponement to permit him to get his legal affairs wound up, then declared himself ready and willing to go into service.

"I'm glad to be able to go to camp and go through the experience of the draft," he said.

Dosh, a native Washingtonian, was the valedictorian of the class of 1932 at St. John's College, took his LL.B. degree at Columbus University in 1935 and earned the master of laws and master of patent laws degree at the same school a year later.

He was admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court in 1939.

Youth Wounded By Stray Bullet

Struck in the leg by a stray bullet while he was walking in a wooded section near Eighteenth Street and Maryland Avenue Northeast yesterday, Robert Cardani, 18, of 1235 Queen Street Northeast, was recovering at his home last night.

The youth told police the shot was fired by one of three young boys who were shooting at a target with a .22 caliber rifle. The boys fled, he said, when they learned of the accident.

Cardani was given first aid at Casualty Hospital.

U.S. Workers' Union Seeks Pay Rises

Points to Increased Living Costs at Session Boosting Randolph Bill

Eight hundred Federal and District workers last night heard speakers urge pay rises as the right of Government employes with living costs rising in a time of defense spending.

In a rally in South Interior Department auditorium, featured by placard-carrying and singing, officials of the United Federal Workers of America and the Congress of Industrial Organizations urged passage of H. R. 625, sponsored by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), for automatic annual boosting of salaries of Government workers.

Henry Rhine, national organizer of the U. F. W. A., sounded the meeting's theme—"With living expenses rising we need rises and we're going to get them now."

Urges Lobbying

The speaker urged a widespread lobbying campaign, backed by organized labor, to better wages among both Federal and District employes.

He declared that with vast defense expenditures "we deserve a little" and added, "the best defense of America is the defense of the American people."

"Go back to your local and talk boldly," he urged the members of the Government union and to non-members he stressed the necessity of affiliation with the unit.

Rhine described plans for circulation of petitions through the House and Senate and Government departments "to impress upon Congress" need for the pay boosts. He said the campaign for wage increases is already being carried on in the District set-up.

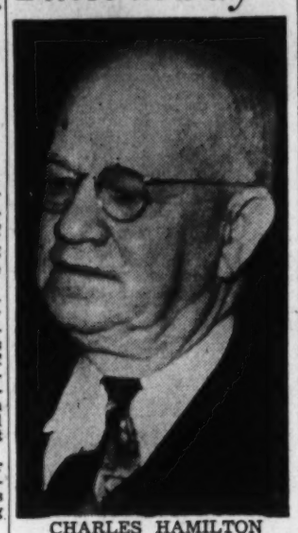
Members Parade

Other speakers included Lem De Caux, C. I. O. publicity director, and William Plunkett, West Coast U. F. W. A. organizer.

Following the addresses members paraded through the auditorium, bearing placards entitled "All I Ever Made Was $1,080," and "Food Doubled in 1917—1941?"

A skit also stressed the pay-rising theme with an enactment of the plight of a young Government worker struggling to support wife and child.

D. C. Man Cleans Up Twice in Day



CHARLES HAMILTON

The rainbow with the pot of gold at the end of it dropped right in on Coburn S. Hamilton, 57-year-old Government Printing Office guard last night just after taking a bath and shave.

The bath and shave had nothing to do with it, you understand, except that he had just finished when the phone rang at his house, 101 Eighth Street Southeast. He stopped momentarily to tone down the radio, and picked up the receiver.

"Hello?"

"Is this Mr. C. S. Hamilton?"

"Yes."

"Fine. This is Horace Heidt of the Pot o'gold program, calling from New York. You just won $1,000."

"Well, that's good news."

Hamilton hung up. He turned up the radio. It was Horace Heidt talking, via WMAL, telling the world that Hamilton's ship had come in.

Well, thought Hamilton, won't wifey be surprised. And his two daughters, tooo. They were all out to the show. Perhaps he ought to think it over. You know, he'd kid them about it. They'd never take it seriously.

But the phone started ringing. The newspapers! Interviews and pictures! Then N. B. C. rushed him downtown to the studios for a special broadcast on his luck. Shucks, it was a good thing that he had taken the bath and shave.

As for the $1,000, Horace Heidt gives that sum away each Thursday night for his sponsor simply by picking a name out of a phone book, and if the party answers, that's all there's to it. Hamilton is the first Washingtonian to fall under the horseshoe. What's he going to do with the windfall?

"Hmmm," replied Hamilton, "guess I'll invest it."

Defense Office Sites Limited

Congress Agrees Such Buildings Be Confined To the District

The Senate yesterday took steps to guard against a repetition of haphazard location of World War temporary office buildings as both Houses of Congress agreed that $4,100,000 of such structures projected by the defense program should be erected within the limits of the District.

The agreement was reached when House and Senate, in passing the fifth supplemental defense bill containing the building appropriation, accepted a conference amendment to build the structures in Washington rather than "in or near" the city as provided in the measure as it passed the Senate Monday.

In a move timed with the bill's passage, Chairman Maloney, of the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, named a subcommittee of three to make a study of existing laws to determine to what extent they provide protection against "boom-town" development of the defense office building program.

The committee is headed by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, who expressed concern lest future planning for the city be lost sight of in the pressing need for temporary office space.

Other members of the committee are Senators Green, of Rhode Island, and Gillette, of Iowa.

Taft made it clear that he had in mind no such elaborate building plan as resulted in the Federal triangle development, but emphasized the need for orderly expansion of Government buildings in Washington.

The Mall development was authorized in the Public Building Act of 1926, Taft pointed out. The question arose among members of the buildings committee whether this law was sufficient to cover defense and other future building needs or whether the law required strengthening.

The decision of Congress to keep defense buildings in the District eliminated Arlington County, Va., as site for the structures. It was originally intended to erect six frame buildings on the Arlington Experimental Farm, though county officials made no secret of their concern over the ability of the county to provide school, police and other facilities to meet the resulting boom.

Wood's 66 Leads Masters by Five Strokes

Little, Hogan, Nelson Trail In 2d Place

Bobby Jones Has 76; Willie Goggin Also Among 71 Shooters Over Windy Course

By Bill Boni.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Augusta, Ga., April 3.—The first round of the eighth annual Masters Golf Tournament today was the first chapter in a story which if carried through to a happy ending, will be one of the most popular in American golf.

For the end of this first of four 18-hole rounds the lead was held by Craig Wood, who has come close to more major championships without winning any of them than seems possible, or fair.

This afternoon, with the pins stuck in tougher spots on Augusta's carpet-like greens than Wood ever had seen them, the 39-year-old blond veteran from Mamaroneck put together a six-under-par 66. Bobby Jones was the first to hail it as "one of the greatest rounds that's ever been played over the Augusta national course."

Missed One Fairway

Wood missed one fairway, on the first hole, where he recovered to get the first of seven birdies. He didn't hit every green square, but when he didn't he either chipped dead or knocked in bold putts from all over the place. He had a total of 30 putts, and on eight greens he got down in one.

By the end of a long afternoon's firing in the face of a blustry southeast wind, Wood had a five-stroke lead on the four next best men in the field of 50 starters.

P. G. A. Champion Byron Nelson, Open Champion Lawson Little, Ben Hogan, the winter's top money-winner, and Willie Goggin, the White Plains (N. Y.) veteran, tied for second place at 71. Felix Serafin, the pudgy Scranton (Pa.) pro, and Light-horse Harry Cooper were the only men to match par of 72.

Many 1 Over Par

The 73 bracket was extremely popular. Sam Snead, Tony Penna, Johnny Bulla, Tony Manero, Clayton Heafner, Jimmy Thompson, Home Pro Ed Dudley, Jimmy Thomson, Sammy Byrd and Jack Ryan, of Louisville, Ky., all were in there. Moving higher, there was George Dawson, of Chicago, low amateur at 74; Lloyd Mangrum, of Oak Park, Ill., who set the course record of 64 in 1940's first round, 75; Jones himself, 76, as were Gene Sarazen and Ralph Guldahl; Jimmy Demaret, 1940 winner here, 77 on six three-putt greens, and Francis Ouimet, 82, and Walter Hagen, 87.

Ouimet promptly declared he would not play tomorrow, but instead would "have some fun watching these young fellows play." Hagen's score was the highest he's ever posted in a tournament.

Baer, Nova May Draw 17,000 Fans Tonight

Gate of $70,000 Expected for Garden Bout With Nova Favored in Early Betting

By the Associated Press

New York, April 3.—Strictly for the fun of it, and without enclosing any box tops or reasonable facsimiles thereof, just try to think of a more remarkable sports figure at the moment than Madcap Maxie Baer.

If you come to the conclusion that he is "it," you'll have the answer to why it is a very tough problem to pick the winner of tomorrow night's 12-rounder in Madison Square Garden between Maxie and Lou Nova, the California collegian.

You'll also have the answer to why Promoter Mike Jacobs is gleefully expecting some 17,000 fans to show up for the proceedings and contribute to a "pot" of over $70,000, for this fuss which is to decide a September opponent for Joe Louis. That is, provided the bomber doesn't suffer a relapse from overwork against Tony Musto, Abe Simon, Billy Conn and probably one or two others in the meantime.

On form, and off their previous get-together two years ago, in which Nova stopped Max with a cut mouth in 11 rounds after Baer had the blonde belter so groggy in the sixth he was walking to the wrong corner, you have to like Lou. This corner strings along with that belief, picking Nova to win a decision. However, knowing Lou's stubborn pride in his ability to slug it out with any fighter, this department wouldn't be surprised at all if he tries to do just that and winds up sound asleep after catching one of Max's right hands on the "whiskers."

Baer Again Underdog

But Max, having come off the fistic ash-heap twice, stands today—at 32—the complete surprise package of the ring. He's a 5-to-7 underdog in the betting, but he was 1 to 4 the night he made Tony Galento holler "uncle" by digging shots into Two-Ton's tummy last summer, and he was 5 to 8 when he chased Patrick Edward Comiskey right out of the picture in about two minutes flat a couple of months later.

As for Nova, he, too, has come back a long way. Galento and a blood condition put him in a hospital in September, 1939, and there he stayed for a year. Back in action, he cut Comiskey up considerably and won a ten-round decision in January to get the shot at Baer.

The main go is slated for 10 p. m. (E. S. T.). Chief of the five preliminaries is an eight-rounder between the stiff-slugging but somewhat soft-chinned Bob Nestell, of Los Angeles, and Pat Valentino, a well-regarded San Francisco flailer making his Garden debut.

Hoyas Reported On Detroit Grid Schedule in 1942

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 3.—Athletic Director Charles E. (Gus) Dorais, of the University of Detroit, announced tonight that Georgetown University had been added to the 1942 football schedule. The game will be played October 24 in Briggs Stadium, home of the Detroit Tigers.

Confirmation of the game was lacking last night from Georgetown University authorities who admitted negotiations were under way but had not been completed.

Hoya alumni in the midwest have been attempting to bring the team either to Detroit or Chicago for several years. Walter O. "Spike" Briggs, vice president of the Detroit Tigers whose father owns the stadium, graduated from the Hilltop in 1936 and is one of those back of the Detroit game.

'Y' to Hold Annual Volley Ball Tourney

The eleventh annual Cherry Blossom volleyball tournament will get under way at the Central Y. M. C. A. tomorrow with the North Branch Y. M. C. A. team from Philadelphia in the role of defending champion. Play will be on a double elimination basis.

Other "Y" teams entered in addition to the defending champions include the hosts, Camden, N. J., Central Branch, Philadelphia; York, Pa.; Baltimore and Greensboro, N. C.

Baseball Roundup:

Feller Bests Hubbell, but Nobody Stars

By the Associated Press

Talladega, Ala., April 3.—Bob Feller and Carl Hubbell were knocked with everything except brass knuckles today in what was slated to be a pitching duel and the Cleveland Indians belted the New York Giants, 11 to 4.

Feller worked six innings, walked eight men and gave up two home runs, a triple, a double and three singles. Hubbell quit after the fifth, by which time he had yielded six runs on two homers, three doubles and three singles.

Gee Walker drove in half a dozen of the Indians' runs with a home run, a double and two singles.

Pirates Beat Chisox

El Centro, Calif., April 3 (AP).—Home runs by Debs Garms and Vince DiMaggio helped Pittsburgh win its second straight victory today over the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 5.

Garms' smash came in the first inning and DiMaggio's in the second with a mate on base. Thornton Lee and Julius Solters hit homers for the Sox.

Chicago outhit the Buccaneers, 14 to 12, Bob Klinger permitting eight safeties in the five innings he worked, but tightened with men on bases.

Eldon Auker in Uproar

Texarkana, Ark., April 3 (AP).—Eldon Auker, the St. Louis Browns' submarine baller, pitched one of the best games of his career today, and also hit a homer, but he had to be rescued in the ninth inning to provide the American Leaguers with a 7-to-5 victory over the Boston Bees.

Auker faced only 25 batters over the first eight innings, giving only two hits, of which one was a homer by "Bama" Rowell.

In the ninth, however, he lost his touch, filled the bases on passes and then tossed a grand-slam home-run ball to Maxie West with two out. He passed Gene Moore after that and then was yanked in favor of Johnny Allen, who struck out the last Bee to end the game.

Vander Meer Beats Bosox

Montgomery, Ala., April 3 (AP).—It fell to Johnny Vander Meer to be the first Cincinnati Red pitcher to hurl the full nine innings in spring training, and the southpaw did himself proud today as the Reds beat the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 1.

Johnny, who hasn't been right since pitching two successive no-hit games in 1938, held the Boston sluggers to six hits. He walked five and fanned five.

Led by Harry Craft with two doubles and a single, the Reds pounded out 14 hits off Woodrow Rich, but left 13 men on the bases.

Ernie Lombardi's game ankle stood up for the entire game and he collected a pair of singles.

Yuma, Ariz., April 3 (AP).—Connie Mack's Philadelphia A's walloped the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4, today for their fifth straight victory over Manager Jimmy Wilson's club. Novikoff, the mad Russian, connected for a homer in the sixth inning with one on to put the Cubs ahead 4-3, but the Athletics came back to nick Claude Passeau for a pair of runs in the seventh.

Yankees Crush Tulsa

Tulsa, Okla., April 3 (AP).—The New York Yankees, once famous for their "one-big inning" offensives in the American League, crammed seven runs into the third stanza today and crushed the Tulsa Oilers of the Texas League, 14 to 5.

Bruins Trip Toronto, 2-1, Earn Finals

By International News Service

Boston, April 3.—The Boston Bruins tonight toppled the Toronto Maple Leafs, 2-1, in the seventh and deciding game of the Stanley Cup series "A" playoffs and earned the right to meet the Detroit Red Wings in the final cup round.

Assuming the role he played two years ago when he sparked the Bruins to the Stanley Cup championship, Mel Hill was brilliant as he led the hard-skating Bruins to victory in one of the roughest contests ever witnessed at the Boston Garden.

Hill, who assisted Flash Hollett in scoring the first Boston tally, broke the deadlock in the fifteenth minute of the final canto when he gained control of the loose puck and golfed a 30-foot shot by the partly screened Toronto goalie.

The Maple Leafs jumped to the front in 13:20 of the opening period when Pete Langelle seized the bounding rubber off the backboard behind the Boston net and flipped to Bucko McDonald, who blazed a 30-foot shot by Goalie Frank Brimsek. One minute later the Bruins equalized. Hill passed to Eddie Wiseman who in turn detoured the disc to Hollett on the blue line. His 40-foot shot was partly deflected by Defenseman Walter Stanowski but it managed to dribble into the cage defended by Turk Broda.

The second period was marked by violence with five penalties—two majors—being called. Toronto Manager Connie Smythe was fined $100 and banished from the bench for going on the ice after Langelle was the victim of a "slugging."

A capacity crowd of more than 16,400 watched the fray.

Bloodworth May Play Third Base for Nats

Move Depends on Buddy Lewis' Draft Call; Travis, Archie Also Under Consideration

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., April 3.—Jimmy Bloodworth is bulking more importantly in Washington's 1941 infield plans. With Uncle Sam's Army beckoning to Buddy Lewis, Manager Bucky Harris indicated that his choice for the third-base job would be the rugged little fellow who had been scheduled to play second base.

Lewis' perilous draft status was officially confirmed today when the Winter Park, Fla., Draft Board No. 2, which had superintended his physical examination, formally announced that, physically, he was in Class A-1. Previously, Lewis had been told merely unofficially that he had passed all tests. The announcement was made following completion of blood tests at the Jacksonville, Fla., laboratories.

Three Things May Happen

With scant hope that Lewis can win deferment because of dependents, and expecting him to be missing from the Nats within a month after the season opens, Harris was faced with three choices in revising his infield. They were:

(1) To restore Cecil Travis to third base, and bring Jimmy Pofahl into the lineup at the shortstop job Travis was holding.

(2) To move First Baseman George Archie to third base, in the light of his third base experience in the American Association, and

(3) To turn the third base job over to Bloodworth and rely on Buddy Myer to play second base.

Harris inclines to the Bloodworth-at-third plan for several reasons. Archie has expressed a willingness to move to third base, but he has not played the position in three years, and Harris is anxious to keep him in the lineup at first base, especially against left-handed pitching.

Need the Hitting Power

The plan to play Travis at third base and Pofahl at shortstop is not particularly unattractive to Harris. It would add up, perhaps, to the best fielding combination. But in the presence of Pofahl, the Nats would be sacrificing hitting power which they sorely need.

Harris is looking with increased favor on Bloodworth as his third baseman since Buddy Myer has been demonstrating that he is in good health and apparently able to play regularly at second base.

"I'm not reflecting on Bloodworth's abilities at second base, but I think he's a better third baseman," said Harris today. "He played the posi-

Navy Abandons Boxing, Webb To Be Retained

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 3.—Decision of the U. S. Naval Academy to abandon boxing as an intercollegiate sport will not affect the status of H. M. (Spike) Webb, varsity coach for 20 years, academy officials said today.

Webb, who became coach when the ring sport was inaugurated at the academy in 1920, will devote his time to coaching intramural boxing.

Although Commander Lyman S. Perry, graduate manager of athletics at Navy, said the abandonment of intercollegiate boxing had been under consideration for some time, Webb said today he knew nothing about it.

"It came as a shock to me. I can't make any statement on the matter," Webb said.

The decision was announced early today by Rear Admiral Russell Willson, superintendent of the academy, who said "the pros and cons have been carefully weighed and a conclusion has been reached that better instruction with increased benefit to more midshipmen will be obtained by placing boxing on a strictly intramural basis."

Jim Pixlee Accepts Army Air Corps Physical Education Job

Former G. W. Coach To Take Over New Duties Today

James E. Pixlee, George Washington University's former football coach and athletic director, yesterday accepted a position as director of physical education of the Army Air Corps.

G. W. President Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin announced Pixlee had been granted leave of absence from the university, as chairman of the alumni advisory committee.

Pixlee's position will be a familiar one as he was civilian adviser to the commanding general in the first World War, when he took charge of the general athletic program for the Seventeenth and Thirty-sixth Divisions of the United States Army.

The appointment becomes effective today, and Pixlee's duties will be to execute a physical training program for the entire Army Air Corps.

An alumnus of the University of Missouri, Pixlee coached at Oklahoma A. and M., Missouri Wesleyan and Westminster (Mo.) College in addition to George Washington. He resigned as head coach at G. W. in February, 1938.

Paths Cross Once Again

Orlando, Fla., April 3.—The fistic paths of Max Baer and Lou Nova converge again tomorrow night with a Madison Square Garden ring and you'll have to be clairvoyant to win a bet on this one. It ought to be interesting, if for no other reason than that they are as unpredictable a pair of guys as ever laced on the regulation six-ounce gloves.

POVICH

If they both show up for the battle the ring will contain two men who in their time have cuffed opportunity around unmercifully. They are trying to fight their way back to a shot at Joe Louis, which they both muffed dismally within the last two years. Nova's was the most miserable fumble. He couldn't beat Tony Galento at a time when that was the only requirement.

That was in the summer of 1939, and Joe Louis had already dispatched Galento as a title threat. There was no Billy Conn around to challenge for Louis' title, and Nova was beginning to bulk pretty importantly on the heavyweight scene. He was young and vigorous, and he had knocked over a lot of boys on the coast. He was getting a buildup as a studious, diligent lad who was being pictured as a second Gene Tunney.

Nova Met a Better Man

Nova, in fact, was rated as a better than fair fighter, and only Galento stood between him and a chance at Louis. Nova had already beaten Baer, and a victory over Galento would catapult him into a title shot, because fat Tony did have Louis on the floor a couple of months before. So it was Nova vs. Galento, and what happened?

You know what happened, and if you saw the fight or the pictures you'll never forget. Nova, with every advantage of height, reach, speed and boxing, stupidly attempted to slug it out with Slugging Tony and took a horrible beating. He was pounded into a misshapen mess by Galento's left hooks, and they had to stop what was called the goriest fight in Philadelphia's boxing history. Nova, who blew his title chance, took such a bad beating that he was out of the ring for a year.

Baer's reputation as a confirmed in-and-outer was established long before. A year after a brilliant knockout victory over big Primo Carnera in which he knocked down the big Venetaian eleven times, Baer placidly permitted old Jimmy Braddock to outpoint him for his championship. He scarcely put up a struggle.

When the opposition for Louis was running dry and in sheer desperation Promoter Mike Jacobs brought Baer back for a chance at the Detroit Bomber which he didn't deserve, Baer embraced it with all the ambition of decrepit hound dog. He was palsied in the dressing room and had to be prodded into the ring. He threw one punch at Louis and when that one missed, Maxie took the full count while resting on one knee.

Baer, Disgraced, Came Back

The public and the prize ring wanted no more of Baer after that horrible performance. His fistic career was supposed to be at an end and quickly forgotten. But Baer is never to be ignored. He bounced back and continued to fight, and eventually he found himself in the ring with Nova, the rising young man from the coast where he, himself, had launched the career that was to bring him the title briefly.

Strangely, it was in his defeat by Nova that Baer sort of reestablished himself. His courage, which had always been under question, was magnificent in that battle. He went 11 rounds with the rugged Nova, gave his all, took a brutal beating and at the finish was still pleading with the referee not to stop it. The cheers were for Baer that night, and he left the ring with his courage redeemed.

Last summer, after Nova's defeat by Galento, Baer found himself in the ring with fat Tony, and he gave Galento a worse beating than even Louis had administered. Thus another Baer-Nova bout began to crystallize. When Baer knocked out young Pat Comiskey in a round, and Nova also beat Comiskey quickly, another fight between the pair was inevitable, and that's why they're in the ring tomorrow night.

Meanwhile, young Billy Conn has beaten them both to a shot at Joe Louis, which is understandable. The public as yet has no taste for another Louis-Baer fight, or even a Louis-Nova fight. There will be no excuse for either affair until either Baer or Nova beats the other decisively. As for tomorrow's battle, the only safe bet is that it's scheduled.

Pro Grid League Prepares For Battle Over Layden Today

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 3.—The National Football League opened the most momentous meeting in its history today with its president, Carl Storck, flatly predicting a battle tomorrow over installation of Elmer Layden as its first commissioner and warning the professional league he would continue as president under Layden only if given certain rights and duties.

In an exclusive interview which he prefaced with the remark "How would you feel if you had given 20 years to something and then been treated this way?" Storck said the league owners were in disagreement over Layden's selection as commissioner and indicated he had much more support among the executives than has been reported.

While Storck sat alone in his room most of the day, club owners reportedly had lined up solidly in favor of reframing the constitution and electing Layden. During the day it was said three more owners signed the contract under which Layden was retained under a five year contract at $20,000 a year. It was indicated that tomorrow's fight would be over Storck.

Storck Exhausted

Seriously ill, Storck said he has been in bed for seven weeks with nervous exhaustion. Even though partially paralyzed in his right side, and coming here against advice of a physician, he said he was determined to carry out his duties as president and preside at tomorrow's executive session.

"This morning," he said, "two club owners came to me as a committee to see how I stood. That was the first time they had ever consulted me on the matter of a commissionership. I asked them how they would feel in my place? I told them I haven't a letter in my files criticising my work as president for two years. They made the rules and I simply enforced them. I've been in this league for 20 years—not for money but because I loved it.

Wants Contract

"I told the league I would serve as president under Layden only on the provision that I get a contract which defines my duties.

"I have nothing against Layden, but I don't think he knows what a contract or a waiver means. And while they say they have, I tell you the owners haven't got enough votes for him yet."

"For 15 years I worked for nothing," Storck said. "Two years ago when I became president, I didn't quit my job with General Motors because I was afraid something like this would happen."

The league's session, scheduled to run through Sunday, also calls for adoption of a league schedule, and approval of any rule changes recommended by the rules committee, which met at length today without making any announcement.

Georgetown Beats Harvard, 7-4; Terps Rout Vermont, 11-0

Jim Kiernan Hurls No-Hit Relief Ball

Hoyas Score 3 Times In Seventh Inning To Break Tie; Three Hits for Castiglia

By Bill Burnett

After wasting one run and then tossing off a three-run lead, Georgetown University's 1941 baseball team made its first effort of the season a winning one yesterday, beating a well balanced Harvard nine, 7-4, on Medical Field.

It was the tough right arm of Jim Kiernan, of basketball fame, which saved the Hoyas' day as they floundered hopelessly in the seventh inning. With three runs over, the score tied and two Harvard stalwarts on base, Jim relieved Pitcher Bill Wixted, retired a third Crimson batsman easily and went the rest of the way without allowing a hit.

Hoyas Have Big Seventh

Meanwhile, Joe Judge's boys went to work to help Kiernan. In their half of the seventh they jumped on Harvard's starting hurler, Jack Schwede, for the three tallies that stood between the clubs at the end and held their lead safe from then on.

The loss brought Harvard's record on its current trip to two lost and one won. A triumph over Maryland started its tour, but Wednesday Navy eked out a 7-6 victory.

Georgetown got the first score yesterday, but it wasn't particularly proud of the fact. A high throw by Shortstop Ford Keyes in the second frame put George Pajak on first and he came home shortly afterward on a single to left by Jules Koshlap which Outfielder Lou Clay handled with little grace.

Again Georgetown threatened to score in the third inning, but the effort was a total waste. After Wixted had popped out to first, Jack Smith came up and slugged a ringing triple over the right fielder's head. He romped in immediately on Hank Mylnarski's fly to center, but the run was voided because he had left third too quickly.

Harvard Scores in Fourth

Harvard's first counter was legitimate. With one out in the fourth Bart Harvey, who led Crimson hitting with a pair of two-baggers, got his first double. He moved to third on Smith's momentary bobble, and hit the scoring column when Buckley lined a perfect shot over Mylnarski's head into center.

Things were comparatively quiet from then until Georgetown's first three-run uprising in the sixth. Mylnarski started that one with a walk, Ghecas flew out and big Jim Castiglia slammed the longest hit of his three hits, a triple, into right field, scoring Mylnarski. The big catcher came in on Pajak's single, and the latter moved around on Koshlap's single and Miller's double.

In retaliation, Harvard evened the count again in the top half of the seventh, two singles, Harvey's second double and a pair of walks turning the trick. That ended Wixted's efforts and brought Kiernan to the mound.

After forcing Tulley to ground out, second to first, Jim got his chance in the batters' box and started Georgetown's seventh with a double. He was tossed out at third as Smith bunted. Ghecas' single sent Smith, who stole second, homeward, and Ghecas came in on Castiglia's line drive to left. That left Big Jim on first, and he closed out scoring with his usual flair. While stealing second he was hit on the shoulder by the catcher's throw, and he thundered all the way in before the ball was recovered.

Hoyas Cut Off a Run and Try a Sacrifice in Opening Game

Upper—His football training stood Jim Castiglia in good stead yesterday as he blocked home plate and tagged out Harvard's Gil Whittemore to momentarily stop a Crimson rally in the seventh inning of Georgetown's opening baseball game. A perfect peg from Third Baseman George Pajak made the play possible. Old Liners Victors, 14-2, In Lacrosse

Art Woodward Stars In Relief Stretch; Harvard Ten Bows To College Champs

Maryland's baseball and lacrosse forces scored a twin victory at College Park yesterday as the old Line nine shut out Vermont, 11 to 0, and the stickmen topped the Harvard ten, 14 to 2.

Art Woodward, Maryland hurler, stepped into the game in the second inning after both Jim Mead and Max Hunt were in trouble in the opening frame, but was saved by a fast double play, Radebaugh to Whipp.

While Woodward was keeping three singles paced over his seven-inning stay, the Old Liner batters gathered 13 hits off Vermont's Ackeley and Alpergini, who paced the hill for the Vermont nine. Seven errors by the New Englanders helped the Terps.

Terps Score Early

In the opening inning the Terrapins broke the ice. Whipp, the first Liner batter, was safe on an error by Woods, Vermont shortstop, and MacDonald hit a ground single through second base to move Whipp to third. Whipp scored a moment later when Maisel layed down a beautiful bunt. Merel Duvall, Liner first baseman, then was safe on Woods' second error of the inning as MacDonald tallied the second score. Maisel then scored the third run as an attempt to throw out Wharton failed on a grounder to short.

In the third inning MacDonald again was safe on Woods' third error. Merel Duvall then got his second hit of the game to score the Liner second-sacker. With a 3-2 count, Pop Wharton, Liner third-sacker, punched out a single over second, and both Duvall and Wharton scored when Curley Radebaugh, Liner shortstop, blasted a double into deep center field. Radebaugh,

Judge Landis' Habit Boomerangs

New York, April 3.—Sportin' around:

Among those whose 1940 income was dented by the poor work of the New York Giants was Mrs. John J. McGraw, widow of the man who made the team. Mrs. McGraw is one of the team's stockholders . . . Joe Engel's suggestion that soldiers be charged only a quarter to see Southern League games this season should be extended to the big leagues . . . The delay in the Farley-to-the-Yankees deal is occasioned by the Farley group's decision to bid less for the property, in view of the fact that the draft makes ball clubs risker investments and the fact that the Farley group knows that it is the only one actually bidding for the firm . . . Judge Landis' habit of punching his listeners, for emphasis, boomeranged recently. He was pummelling Clark Griffith on the old gentleman's sensitive ribs, trying to drive home certain points to Griff, when Griff stood up and hollered, "Hey! You sit down here, Judge, for a minute, and let me punch you for a while."

CONSIDINE

Madcap Maxie in Good Voice for Fight

Max Baer finished his training session for the Nova fight in fine voice:

"Sure, Baer's a clown. The world needs more clowns. Everybody's too serious, everybody's worrying about the war. Why must there be wars? Why do people have to fight, to settle an argument? I don't wan't war. I don't want to fight, unless it is to protect my loved ones.

"Nova? Sure, I'll beat him. I never lose to a fellow the second time I fight him. Oh, I guess he's okay, in an obnoxious kind of way, though that Yoga stuff shows he's warped somewhere. I've been checking up on him. I looked up the place where he went to college in California and found that he majored in chicken husbandry. I only went to the eighth grade myself, but I bet I'm more of a mental giant that he is. He cut my mouth with a lucky punch the last time. I was gagging. This time I've got a new mouthpiece. After I beat him I'm going to rest a week, then do some radio work."

Roger Peckinpaugh knew last September, when Oscar Vitt was still in office, that he would succeed him . . . Mioland's coming to Pimlico for the $20,000 Dixie Handicap . . . a friend of Trainer Lou Schaefer taped Challedon's cracked hoof the day the Brann star beat Kayak II in the Pimlico special. Owner Brann came into the stable while Schaefer's Pal was working on the Maryland champion and ordered him out. In turn, the taper ordered Brann out, and went on with his work. Later there was a formal introduction, but that night Schaefer went off with his pal, who is an old horseman, instead of to the victory party thrown by Brann. That was the beginning of Schaefer's dismissal.

Doc Painter, Yankee trainer, said an interesting thing about Babe Ruth recently. "Ruth hit home runs with less effort than any player I ever saw. When Gehrig, Foxx, Greenberg or those other great sluggers connected for home runs you could see the muscles stand out on them, and you were aware of the tremendous power being put into play. Ruth's homers sailed off his bat like birds. I mean as effortlessly as a bird would fly from home plate over the wall. The secret was Babe's great natural sense of timing. There was no brute strength there, just miraculous coordination. The only hitter I've seen since then who even approaches Babe's timing is Joe DiMaggio."

Leo Durocher believes that the Reds seriously hurt themselves by trading Billy Myers. "He never hit much," Leo says, "but every once in a while he'd hit one a mile. Eddie Joost, who takes his place, can't do that. We can breathe easier this year, with Joost up there" . . . The Baseball helmets of Ducky Medwick and Pee-Wee Reese are made mostly of that new flexible glass . . . Who'd'a ever thought that Bobby Jones would be a 50-1 shot in a golf tournament? That was his first day quotation in the Masters. One DeLand J. Wilcox was 40-to-1 . . . The amateur ice carnival business seems to be through. The annual show at Madison Square Garden finished in the red, as did most of the other amateur shows throughout the country.

Ernie Dusek Wins Wrestling Match Over Plummer at Arena

Mountainous Ernie Dusek, that old master meanie, soundly thrashed Lou Plummer, the Baltimore nasty man, in the main event of the wrestling show at Turner's Arena last night before 1,800 of the faithful, who enjoyed many a vicarious thrill during the titanic struggle.

After some superfluous instructions from Referee Casey Berger, the tank-sized groaners wasted little time in getting to the dirty work. Plummer was tossed through the ropes four times during the bout, while Dusek joined the crowd only once. When that routine began to pall on the customers, the lads would tie up on the canvas for a spell. Occasionally Berger would get down on his knees to investigate and would chidingly whisper into a gnarled ear, "What's your angle, strangle?" Then, finding something amiss, he'd break the boys up and they would do it all over again.

The headliners went through every maneuver in the books and Plummer, a master of the grimace, would lash around the mat like a beached whale, muttering bravely, "No! I'll never give up!" But he did, at the end of 38½ minutes when Ernie applied a series of body slams and crotch holds.

Warren Bockwinkle took the semifinal match from Rudy Dusek by pinning Dusek with a body roll and press. Earlier in the evening some of the performers lost a page of the script, consequently ruining the timing, so Bockwinkle had to work 27 of the allotted 30 minutes before he could take his bout. Bock and Dusek aimed to please and their antics were well received, with Dusek drawing the ire of the fans with his unsportsmanlike conduct.

In the two-man team match Len Macaluso and Fred (Spider) Grobmier made short work of pudgy Ed Newman and Chief Whitefeather. All four grapplers working at once presented a spectacle that one would expect to see after downing a bowl of chow mein on top of nine double Scotches, and old Hysteria Hall groaned under the impact. Grobby eliminated the Indian with a figure-four scissor hold after 9½ minutes of struggling. Macaluso got Newman with a figure-four scissor and a leg stretch in 11 minutes.

A newcomer, one Gama Parker, an alleged Hindu from Calcutta, won the opener from Otto (Red) Brill with a body press after 17 minutes.

Boston, April 3.—The Boston University football team came out of a huddle today—in flight formation.

All 11 men, first-string players last season, filed applications for service in the United States Naval Air Corps.

Capt. John A. Connearney, of Waltham, led his squad in the 11-man wingback which they hope to start at the Squantum base after school closes in June. It's a take-off of touchdown power for B. U., but eight of the men are seniors and all of them are of Selective Service age.

Interlace, Favorite, Captures Feature on Bowie Race Card

Victor Pays $7; Ridden By Madden

Scandalous Runs Second; Charlotte Girl Is Third; 7,500 Fans Present

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Bowie, Md., April 3.—Carrying Apprentice Jockey Darrell Madden and enough equipment to make 102 pounds, the lightweight of the party of six, R. J. Randolph's Interlace galloped to a five-length victory in the sixth race, best offering on a featureless program. The daughter of Transmute and Web, fresh from Florida campaigning, led Carl Graham's Scandalous to the wire. A head farther back came Gustave Ring's Charlotte Girl, to be third in the test over a mile and a sixteenth.

Interlace was installed the favorite and paid a $7 mutuel while going the route in 1:50 over a dull oval. A crowd of 7,500, lured by perfect racing weather, participated in the program.

Madden rode the public choice confidently, rating her while Trysak set the pace for a half. Interlace rallied when asked to take command and drew out through the stretch run to win easily. Scandalous and Charlotte Girl moved together and were a tight fit going into the wire for second money.

Favorite Wins Opener

Scratches left the Millsdale Stable's Airspring a standout favorite in the first race and Jockey Nick Wall booted the son of Ariel to a two-length victory. E. K. Bryson's Gummed Up was second with Witness Stand, owned by C. W. Shaw, jr., third in the field of eight 2-year-olds. Witness Stand, Lustrous and Gummed Up had good early speed along with Airspring, but the Millsdale colt drew out in the closing eighth. The winner paid $4.30 and was clocked in 0:48 over the dull track.

L. E. Ogle's Hunting Home was an easy winner of the second race and brought a $31.70 payoff in the daily double, while providing his individual backers with an $11.50 mutuel. Under Jockey Sterling Young's handling, the veteran son of Time Maker circled his field to win by five lengths in handy fashion. King Cotton was second three parts of a length in front of Iskie.

The favorite players got down with all barrels on Alpine Lad in the third race, and the son of Canter made good at a $3.50 mutuel. He shook off Leonardtown and drew out in the closing stages under Jockey Eddie DeCamillis' riding. Leonardtown was second, with Golden Mowlee a distant third.

Real Value Proves Mettle

Real Value, racing for Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer, made every post a winning one in the fourth race. The son of Economic ran True Warrior into defeat and went on to hold Chalcolite safe at the end of a 6-furlong test. Punchdrunk was third in the field of eight. The winner was a paddock tip and paid $11.80.

Pep Talk, carrying a $16.90 price tag, lasted to win by a narrow margin over a charging Irish Moon, the favorite, in the fifth race. Surprise Box was third in the field of a dozen claiming sprinters. Jockey R. Scott rode the winner, which had a slight lead throughout the running.

Pony Boy's Leap Catches Runaway At Tropical Park

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., April 3.—The Tropical Park crowd saw a rodeo performance along with a horse race program today.

Sweep Singer threw Jockey Sammy Williams just before the start of the second race and ran 1½ miles, with Pony Boy Bob Turner in pursuit.

Finally, Turner managed to grab Sweep Singer's bridle when the gelding stumbled. But the strap broke, and the horse was off again. Turner eventually solved the problem by leaping astride Sweep Singer and bulldozing the animal to a halt.

When all the excitement was over, Sweep Singer ran last in a field of 12.

HUNTING HOME, within striking distance from the start, came around the leaders to take command entering the stretch and drew out to win in hand. KING COTTON was off in a tangle, worked his way to a forward position and closed willingly. ISKIE, off alertly, forced the pace of NAVIGATION and weakened in the final test. CLINGENDAAL went evenly and showed a good effort.

Daily Double, AIRSPRING and HUNTING HOME Paid $31.70.

IRISH MOON, taken up when in close quarters in the early stages, closed with a bold rush and would have won in another stride. SURPRISE BOX worked his way to contention, challenged gamely and then hung. SCHLEY GOREE raced on the outside of the leaders and appears to be ready.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

Perhaps you remember that piece I wrote some six months ago about Jockey Johnny Shanks having a good job at Fort Meade and being through with racing, according to reports. Well, I predicted then that Johnny would have a different idea when the weather became warmer and the horses started to run at Bowie. Anyway Johnny is back at the track working horses and he will be seen in action in races any day now. The jockey being carried on the programs here as R. L. Hightshoe is Ray Hightshoe, a brother. "R. L." is still in Florida and won't ride here. Remember He Rolls at Charles Town? He won the Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn and trainer Vic Noyes just shipped him to Laurel. I recall we didn't think he could beat Delhi Dan one day. Owner J. B. Partridge has engaged Willie Garner to handle Robert L in the $5,000 Bowie Handicap on Saturday. Johnny Gilbert is leading the jockeys at the meeting. He is riding free lance and promises to get a large share of the "live" horses hereabouts. The half-mile boys are still arguing about the relative ability of Apprentices Ricco Sisto and Herb Claggett. Sisto is getting the most votes at this time. Both are hard-working youngsters and deserve to get ahead. Spring must be here. Elmer Hathaway, veteran colored clocker, is down to one overcoat. He wears three during the winter and if it snows or rains he puts an oilskin over the whole outfit. Anti Air was scratched yesterday by order of the stewards who contend the filly is unfit for racing at this time. The Kindergarten, first big test of the year for 2-year-olds in Maryland, is likely to bring a clash of Doctor Reder, winner of two California races, and Tremontier, double winner at Hialeah Park. Former Jockey Chick Lang handles the book and coaches Apprentice J. De Lucia, Jockey Buddy Root writes that he will leave Cuba next week. He plans to go to his Kansas City home and then back to this section. Jockey Francis Kelly, contract rider for J. W. Y. Martin, swung into action yesterday. The young man who rubs Alan Clarke's colt, Walter Haight, wants me to quit giving the 2-year-old publicity. He says the colt "won't do nothing" since he saw his picture in The Post. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—PACIFICATION was second in his debut and raced greenly. That effort should serve as education and I look for a winning performance in this field. LADY MELODY got a taste of competition opening day and is mighty dangerous. MYSTIQUE breaks off the rail and may be in the money cricle.

Second race—BABY MOWLEE gets in light and has been trained over this track. Meets only the cheapest kind in this field and I expect no mistakes. MARDI GRAS belongs with this kind and will be in the thick of contention. MISS IDENTIFY to take care of the others.

Third race—MISS MAKER showed good closing ability in her first outing. She is a hard-knocking filly and I'm going to root her home. SHOULDER ARMS, if ready would run away from this field. However, I believe he will need a race. OURAGAN gets off the rail this time.

Fourth race — HI-LIGHT has plenty of speed and has worked well. Comes from a good barn and should tie this gang in knots. RING STAR may be better than rated. SPANG should like the soft track.

Fifth race—COUNT ELEVEN was well thought of in Florida and promises to do a lot of running in a field of this kind. Gets in with steadying weight and I'm going to take my chances with him. CUCKOO raced well on the bad track here last Wednesday and should be a keen factor again. PLAYMORE comes back after a long rest.

Sixth race—FAIR HERO showed enough here opening day to warrant a top selection in a field of this sort. He is better than shown and that was a tightener. BARRYMORE belongs close with such as these. NANNYKINS has speed and may forget to stop this time.

Seventh race—J. HAL has beaten this brand of company and is reported fit for a serious purse bid. RUSSELL McGEE is cheap but displayed early speed last out and probably was short. BREEZING ALONG makes his way in these cheap affairs.

Eighth race — SHANSI appears suited by conditions in the day's finale. Needs only the right handling. PORTUNUS likes this oval HARRY'S DREAM was a keen factor last out at long odds.

Best bet—FAIR HERO.

Fearing Scalpers, Promoter Sets Baer-Galento Ticket Limit

Alvis Says Only Ten To Customer

Both Battlers Agree That Big Brother Max Will Whip Lou Nova

Ray Alvis, local boxing promoter, yesterday prepared to meet the challenge of invading New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore ticket scalpers when he restricted the number of tickets to be made available to each person to ten for the boxing show featuring Tony Galento and Buddy Baer at Uline's Arena Tuesday night.

"When I made my bargain with Mike Jacobs to bring big-time boxing to Washington I told him the Washington fans would be my first interest," Alvis declared yesterday, "and now that we've got a nationally important fight here I'm giving them first call on the tickets.

"We still have plenty of good seats available at all prices, but we've set Saturday afternoon at 6 o'clock as a deadline for picking up reservations. All tickets unclaimed by then will be put back into circulation on a first-come, first-served basis."

A heavy demand from out-of-town points for choice tickets was reported yesterday as boxing fans throughout the East thrilled to this approaching shot. The demand was particularly heavy from Philadelphia, which had put in a spirited bid for the bout, and also from Newark, Jersey City and Orange, N. J., where hundreds of admirers of Tony Galento hold forth.

To Break Camp Today

Both Buddy Baer and Tony Galento are to break camp in their respective havens at Lakewood, N. J., and Orange, N. J., today and will sit in at ringside at Madison Square Garden tonight when Max Baer boxes Lou Nova. Oddly enough, both Galento and Buddy Baer are agreed upon one point, each predicting victory for Max Baer via the knockout route.

Both Buddy Baer and Galento are to put in an appearance here tomorrow morning and will be featured in a double-header public workout in the afternoon at 1 and 3 o'clock. It appeared likely last night that they will work at the Huron gymnasium, 511 Eleventh Street Northwest.

Devitt Opens Season, Beats Anacostia, 7-6

Scoring two runs in the sixth inning, Devitt Prep diamonders came from behind to open their season with a 7-to-6 triumph over Anacostia High yesterday on the latter's field. The game went only seven innings.

Each team made only three hits, but a total of 16 errors boosted the scoring chances of both. Devitt committed nine, five going to Catcher Eddie Iglesias, while Anacostia turned in seven.

Starting off impressively, the Prepmen took a 5-to-0 lead before Anacostia got its first pair of counters in the second inning. Four more tallies by the Indians in the third frame gave them a 6-to-5 lead which stood until an error and Cullen's single in the sixth inning decided things.

Barlund Provides Conn Last 'Drill' In Chicago Tonight

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 3.—Billy Conn, handsome young boxing master from Pittsburgh, engages in his last ring assignment tomorrow night before his golden opportunity against Joe Louis in June.

The 23-year-old Irishman will face the seasoned Gunnar Barlund, formerly of Finland, biggest and perhaps the most dangerous heavyweight he has yet to meet, in a 12-round battle in the Chicago Stadium. Because of Conn's popularity, the bout may draw in excess of 16,000 spectators and a gate of $37,000.

Conn is exceptionally sharp and full of fire after two weeks' training. With his speed and superior boxing skill, the ambitious Pittsburgher is convinced he will be able to outbox his heavier and slower moving opponent. Conn expects to scale between 176 and 178 pounds.

Herndon High Wins

Ammendale, Md., April 3.—Outhit by 12-8, Herndon High's baseball team took advantage of four Briarley Military Academy errors today to eke out a 7-5 victory in the first start of the season for both teams.

Frankie Mann High in Praise Of His Fighter, Jim DeChard

Frankie Mann (right) closely examines the wrappings on Jimmy DeChard's right hand—the hand that may carry Jimmy to the heavyweight championship of the world. Jimmy injured the hand two years ago, and now a special wrapping is applied before each workout by Harry Groves, one of the best hand men in this sector. Jimmy makes his professional debut at Uline Tuesday night against Joe Linsie, of Trenton, N. J.

Local Heavyweight to Make Professional Debut on Galento-Baer Card Tuesday

Without any fanfare, and with the calm assurance that he has the next world's heavyweight champion, affable, easygoing Frankie Mann is methodically going about the task of preparing the coming champ for his first professional fight.

The lad in question, if you hadn't guessed it, is young Jimmy DeChard, christened James Leo DeChard, jr., August 9, 1918.

Jimmy is going to make his professional debut in a special 6-round fight on the Tony Galento-Buddy Baer boxing show Tuesday night at the Uline Arena—but that isn't the story.

The story is that Jimmy is the first Washington boy to come out of the amateurs bearing the mark of a champion since Lou Gevinson.

"Jimmy has something now that ordinarily comes only with years of experience," Mann, who has been a boxing figure in the Capital for over three decades, mused. "It's what fellows in the fight business call a sixth sense of boxing. Some fighters never develop it, but Jimmy has, and I'm as certain as I am of the fact that I'm sitting here that he has a great future."

Has Nursed Fighter Along

For four years Mann, who has been a fighter, manager, promoter and matchmaker, has nursed Jimmy along. Every other night Jimmy has reported faithfully to Frankie's backyard gymnasium in the rear of No. 11 Fifteenth Street Northeast, for schooling in the manly art of self-defense.

Jimmy has had but 13 amateur fights during this time, and Frankie has been called everything in the book by various "authorities" who insisted he was retarding the boy's progress by keeping him out of the professional end of the business.

"I've been criticized, yes, but I've nursed him along for four years with a purpose and I'm convinced he's ready now to go out and win that title from whomever holds it when he gets up that high," Frankie said last night.

"Jimmy has everything—he can hit like a mule's kick and he's one of the fastest big men I've ever seen."

Has Good Job Already

DeChard doesn't have to fight, strangely enough. During his training program under Mann, Jimmy was serving his apprenticeship as a plumber. He recently passed his examinations and is a full-fledged plumber making $13.50 a day, five days a week, now.

But after his eight hours are over—he's on a job at the National Institute of Health currently—he reports to Mann's crude but complete gymnasium and works for six rounds under Frankie's critical eyes. Around the ring sit a few of Jimmy's countless admirers—the biggest of whom, perhaps, is Father Edward O'Connell, who comes up from Jimmy's parish, St. Dominick's, every night now to watch Jimmy get ready for his professional debut.

Jimmy's prowess locally is well known, and he is so highly recommended that Mike Jacobs has promised Promoter Ray Alvis and Mann that he will put him in a preliminary on the Billy Conn-Joe Louis fight if he looks good in his debut Tuesday. Jimmy fights another youngster, Joe Linsie, of Trenton, N. J., on the Galento-Baer card.—HAILEY.

George Washington Wins Fifth Place In National Shoot

George Washington University's rifle team was notified yesterday it won fifth place in the National Championship firing, although it placed only third in the sectional division here last week.

The National Rifle Association, which conducted the shoot, found the G. W. total of 1,373 was topped only by Minnesota, Lehigh, Navy and Oregon State. The national champions, Minnesota, scored 1,388.

Lehigh and Navy both led G. W. in this section's firing, but the scores were so high here that only two other schools beat the G. W. total, good for only third place in its section.

Al Seidler, of the Colonials, was a seventh-place individual winner with a 220 total.

Naiman Five Ousts J.C.C. In League Play

The field in the race for the championship of the D. C. Recreation Basketball League was narrowed still further last night as four games took place on the Tech and Roosevelt floors.

Naiman Photo pulled the big upset of the night when it eliminated Jewish Community Center from further consideration, winning by a 29-26 count. Pat Hurley, former Central athlete, led the winners' attack with 11 points.

Another surprising result was the 33-29 beating handed the Arlington Maccabees by Marion A. C. Kemp's 10 points were high for the winners, but Arlington's R. Atkinson hung up 13 for scoring honors. In other games National Baptist nosed out Air Duct, 17-15, in a tightly contested battle and Hot Shoppes whipped Mails and Files, 32-28.

Frog to Take Place of 'Frogskin' As Admittance

By the Associated Press

Gainesville, Fla., April 3.—Baseball officials here are looking for a barrel of toads.

They want to turn them loose to devour mole crickets which have played havoc with the turfed baseball diamond, used by Gainesville's Florida State League team.

Dr. G. B. Tison, ball club director, enlisted the aid of a Gainesville theater, which will give free admission Saturday to each boy or girl depositing a toad in a barrel at the ticket office.

Ye Ol' Game Begins to Bloom:

Schoolboy Golfers Open Today

A pair of schoolboy golf matches and two women's intraclub tournaments will bring out the golf score sheets for the first time this season today.

A golf committee tournament was announced for the Army and Navy women members by Chairman Mrs. M. K. Barroll for this morning, with all players requested to report to the golf shop between 9 and 9:30 a. m.

The weekly Friday ladies' days at Congressional will get underway this morning with Mrs. F. G. Awalt, chairman of the women's golf committee, in charge of the eighteen-hole medal play tournament.

Bladensburg vs. St. John's

The two scholastic encounters will bring together two teams that finished well down the list in the Metropolitan sector last year, Bladensburg and St. John's, at Beaver Dam.

The opening match of the interhigh section, for the Dawes Cup, will pit Central against Anacostia, at Capital. R. G. Vanderlip, chairman of the interhigh golf, announced that members of golf teams will be ineligible for other sports.

Golf Stars Who'll Play Here Fare Well in Masters

Scores of the big-time golf stars who will compete in the British War Relief Match at Chevy Chase next Thursday were all favorable in the first round of the Masters' Tournament yesterday at Augusta.

The six players who will compete here and are playing in the final event on the winter tour were all within speaking distance of par, but not so close to the pace-setting 66 of Leader Craig Wood.

Jimmy Thomson and Clayton Heafner each posted 73s, Horton Smith and George Dawson, amateur, came through with 74s; Jim Ferrier posted a 75 and Gene Sarazen a 76, a score he will undoubtedly improve on today.

Were Not in Masters

Wilford Wehrle and Bobby Cruickshank, who are slated to appear here in the benefit match, did not play in the Masters.

Maj. J. B. Patterson, prominent member of the Chevy Chase Club, will have charge of the gallery arrangements, while pairings for the three or more foursomes will be announced next week.

Four local mentors, Wiffy Cox, Fred McLeod, Bob Barnett and Allan Burton will play in the match and possibly Al Houghton.

Softball Diamonds On Polo Field

Eight new softball diamonds will be opened in the near future near the Polo Field in West Potomac Park, it was announced by the National Capital Parks Commission yesterday through Dick Tennyson, assistant director of the D. C. Recreation Department.

Though situated all around the Polo Field, the new softball fields will in no way interfere with regular polo games, Tennyson said. An unusually large number of polo games will be staged, and to avoid clashes of the two sports softball will be called off when the horse sport is scheduled.

Addition of the eight fields brings to 36 the total number of diamonds now available through the Recreation Department. Application for use of a site should be made through Mr. Tennyson at 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

IN THE EASTER PARADE "Man in 3" WILL BE WEARING ILL-FITTED SHOES!

• In a few days, thousands of well-dressed men will swing along in "America's greatest parade" on Easter Sunday. And one of every three will be wearing dangerously misfitted shoes — as indicated by X-ray tests conducted by the Regal Shoe Company in principal cities!

• In offices and industrial plants, Regal has been taking actual X-ray photographs of the feet of hundreds of well-dressed men — showing position of foot bones inside the shoes — and submitting them for analysis to famous foot specialists. Their verdict: 1 MAN IN 3 is wearing shoes too short, too narrow, or both!

ARE YOU THE
1 man out of 3
WEARING ILL-FITTED SHOES?

1. GOOD FIT. This X-ray shows sufficient length and width to allow bones of feet to function naturally.

2. BAD FIT. These shoes are too short and too narrow! Bones are crowded dangerously, style of shoe ruined.

A MISFITTED SHOE is a dangerous shoe! Not only does it lose its shape and style — it may result in serious ailments, even though you may be aware of only slight discomfort while wearing it!

That's why the Regal Shoe Company has spent more than $100,000 to develop "PRESCRIPTION FIT"—the exclusive system which measures and records the length and width of both feet in sitting, standing and stepping positions! So when you're "Prescription Fitted," you know you're getting not only one of the greatest shoe values from the standpoint of AUTHENTIC STYLE and QUALITY — you're also getting SOLID COMFORT, and PROTECTION against dangers that lurk in improperly fitted footwear!

Remember, only in Regal Stores can you buy Regal Shoes! No dealers or middlemen — no multiple profits! Don't watch the Easter style parade — GET IN IT, with a pair of "Prescription Fitted" Regal Shoes!

REGAL SHOES

Because Regal standards of quality are never lowered, Regal's nation-wide price—always as low as possible—is always subject to change based on cost of materials.

Briscuso Hurls Wilson High To 4-2 Victory

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., April 3.—Capitalizing on the four-hit hurling of Briscuso and the timely and heavy hitting of Hillock, Woodrow Wilson High School's nine opened its spring campaign with a 4-2 victory over Episcopal High School here today, in a game that was surprisingly smooth for an opening day contest.

Briscuso handcuffed the Maroon batters with his four-hit performance, while Hillock came through with two doubles and a triple in three times at bat to account for three of the visitors' four runs. Ellis, Episcopal hurler, went the full distance, but he was nicked for 11 hits.

Wilson Takes Lead

Wilson hopped off to a 2-0 lead in the second inning, scoring on Hillock's walk and two hits, but the Maroons tied it up in the next frame on a hit, a walk and an error. The Presidents took the lead with one run in the sixth when Briscuso doubled and scored on Hillock's triple, and added another marker in the ninth when Hillock doubled and came home on a hit by Schwab.

Episcopal threatened in the ninth when Berkeley led off with a single, but the Presidents halted the threat with a neat double play, Faust to Vinson to Hillock.

Frank Wideman, veteran third baseman, paced Episcopal's comparatively weak attack with two doubles in three trips to the plate.

Cards Outlast Columbus

Columbus, Ga., April 3 (AP).—Stan Musial and Clarence Beers, of the Columbus, Ga., club of the Sally League, held the St. Louis Cardinals hitless for six straight innings today but the major leaguers won, 14 to 6.

St. Louis got six runs in the first, three in the second and five in the ninth largely through the wildness of Columbus pitchers. Johnny Mize and Terry Moore of the Cardinals hit home runs.

Dodgers Ease In

Waco, Tex., April 3 (AP).—With Fred Fitzsimmons and Tex Carleton pitching six-hit ball, Joe Medwick hit his fifth home run in five days and stretched his hitting streak to 18 consecutive exhibition games today as the Brooklyn Dodgers downed the Dallas Rebels, 5 to 1.

The Dodger pitchers received spectacular help from their teammates, who put on a fielding show, with 19 assists and 3 double plays.

Extra! Newsom Talks

Lakeland, Fla., April 3 (AP).—Rain washed out the Detroit Tigers' scheduled game with the Newark Bears today, but it didn't keep the players from talking about the probable pennant winners.

"We'll take it in our league this year," said Louis (Buck) Newsom, Tiger pitcher.

"We have the punch, and we'll get the pitchin'. The Yankees will finish second and the Indians third. For my dough the Browns will be fourth. You can pick the rest of the clubs the way you please."

Detroit plays Washington tomorrow at Orlando. Paul (Dizzy) Trout and Bob Uhle are the probable pitchers.

More Dodgres

Waycross, Ga., April 3 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers B team pounced on Waycross, of the Georgia-Florida League, today for a 14-to-4 triumph as Rookie Max Macon skidded perilously through nine innings.

He allowed 13 hits, only 4 less than the Dodgers corralled, but managed to finish with five scoreless innings at the end.

Alex Kampouris hit a two-run homer in the second, and the Dodgers reeled off 11 runs in a merry-go-round fifth inning to stow the victory away.

Postscripts . . .

Orlando, Fla., April 3.—The Nats' pet victims in the Grapefruit League, the Detroit Tigers, come back to Tinker Field tomorrow. . . . The Tigers have lost three straight to the Washington club in Florida. . . . and tomorrow they will be meeting up with Dutch Leonard, who is scheduled to give his knuckle ball a workout for the first six innings. . . . The other Washington pitcher will be Jim (Dopey) Dean who is perilously close to losing out with the club. . . . Unless Dean turns in an impressive job soon, he will be returned to the Charlotte team whence he came. . . . The Nats' bosses have advised Dean to give up the knuckle ball he is trying to throw. . . . Arch McDonald, who will broadcast the Nats' games over some station as yet unidentified, departed the Washington camp with his family today. . . . Rick Ferrell in recent games is demonstrating that he may yet be Washington's No. 1 catcher. . . . Al Evans has encountered a hitting slump after his early successes. . . . The Chattanooga club which had no first baseman until it acquired Jack Sanford from the Nats, may still have no first baseman. . . . Sanford is expecting an Army call before the season is many weeks old. . . . Danny MacFayden will not be used as a relief pitcher at the start of the season, but will be given an opportunity to start one game a week. . . . Other one-game-a week pitchers in the league are Lefty Grove and Ted Lyons. . . . The Washington players are learning that they are facing a housing situation in Washington. . . . None of them have been able to obtain apartments, and hotel rooms are at a premium. . . . Both Manager Bucky Harris and Clark Griffith think the team to beat for the American League pennant is the Yankees. . . . Neither of them rate the Cleveland Indians above the Detroit Tigers. . . . It is now Bucky Harris' plan to carry two first basemen with the club all season and alternate George Archie and Mickey Vernon against left and right-handed pitching, respectively. . . . Archie is the only Washington player who has beaten out a bunt in the Nats' 15 Florida games this spring. . . . Bucky Harris has been ordering his players to swing, not bunt, on the theory that the training games are for hitting practice.—POVICH.

S. O'Donnell Rolls 193 for Bowling High

Stanley O'Donnell started with a spare on which he cut a deuce, got nine out, rolled a quad-strike, counted ten in the next box, then spared, got a strike and closed with a spare last night at Penn Recreation in the Agriculture League, totaling a terrific 193 to break all kinds of all-time league records and post one of the finest games of the year. O'Donnell's set was 407, also high, and it was no wonder his Farm Credit team won the highs with 688 and 1,795.

ICE PALACE

The Washington Automotive League was led by Buck White and John Anderson with the former rolling 151-373 to spark his Pohanka Service team to top counts of 591 and 1,700. But Johnny Anderson, one of the loop's stars, was not to be outdone. He had a 148 game and then tied White's set mark of 373 to enable his Arcade Pontiac boys to post a 1,700 set count, too. Wesley Snook, also Arcade Pontiac, was a big help to Anderson as he contributed a 367 set.

N. E. TEMPLE

When the tallies were counted in the Temple Minor League it was found that Charley Cassell, Jimmie's Grill, was the man in the limelight for his individual highs of 142-378 were what his quintet needed to take top set with a 1,687 count and three straight from opponents. The McKee Pontiac boys rolled a 589 high team set. Frager's Hardware, Nestle's Chocolate, Eastern Pharmacy, Jimmie's Restaurant and Bright Star Liquor also swept opponents aside in three straight.

ARLINGTON

Jimmie Rivercomb, Maccabees, had a high single of 158 in the Arlington Commercial League to spark his quintet to a record high team game of 631, high for the season. Al Wright was up to his old tricks for his 132 game and 370 top set made it possible for his Martin's Men's Shop team to take the odd tilt from R. E. Morris. The Maccabees won all three from the Sher & Cohen quintet.

CONVENTION HALL

The G. A. O. League was led by Pinky Bradt's 169-395 and Charley Murdock's 161-397. Bradt's quintet, B. & C. won the team top totals with 629 and 1,801 and now are out in front with a one-game margin over Claims.

BROOKLAND

The D. C. Government League was paced by Harney, Repair Shop, with a 154 single, and Frank Innocenti, Police No. 2, whose 387 set enabled his quintet to win team honors after pinfalls of 614 and 1,763. Police No. 1 scored a sweep over Division of Materials.

Roland Hayes Upset Victor Over Howard

Clyde Howard, the Postoffice employe who advanced in a series of upsets to the finals of the Inter-Departmental Recreation Council's first table tennis tournament for colored Government workers, was himself the victim of an upset last night as finals in five divisions were held at Banneker gym.

Howard bowed to Roland Hayes, of Treasury, by a 21—13, 21—16, 21—16 count in the men's singles. The match wound up hostilities which opened with 28 players in the running.

By way of proving their class, Howard and Hayes then teamed up in the men's doubles to trounce James Hundley and John Duncan, both of Interior, by 21—12, 21—9 21—10, Howard scored his second victory of the night when he paired with Mary Gant, of Census, to turn back M. Hoffman and Hundley in the mixed doubles, 21—9 and 21—11.

The women's singles final was also something of an upset, Mrs. Florence Barnes, of Bureau of Engraving, easily defeating Miss Gant, 21—9, 21—7. The latter was never able to seriously threaten her opponent who played steadily throughout. In the women's doubles it was Mrs. Barnes on top again with M. Hoffman, her partner, in a 21—13, 21—14 beating to the Gant-Inez Wood combine.

Stanley Fields Loses in New York

Stanley Fields, of Washington, one of the favorites in the national table tennis championships which opened in New York yesterday, lost in the first round, the Associated Press reported.

Fields was defeated by Lou Pagliaro, New York, 17-21, 21-16, 21-13, 21-14.

who replaced McHale at short, was the star of the game for the Old Liners.

Lacrossmen Win

Harvard's lacrosse ten stopped the national champion Old Liner forces in the opening minutes of the game, but Ray Grelecki and Al Slesinger, Terp front line men combined their efforts in the final period to score six times. In the opening period Charlie Allen and Al Slesinger ripped the nets on set shots to give the Terps a 2-0 lead. The Harvard crew came right back as Doug Anderson scored on a brilliant dodge shot. Jorden Sexton, Terp attack man then tallied to give the Terps a 3-1 lead.

In the second session, Bill Rand scored the second and final marker for the Harvard ten and from here on the Old Liners, with Landis Hill and John Carter pacing the attack, riddled the Harvard defense.

Bloodworth May Shift To Third Base

tion for several years in the minors, and last year, when I had him at third toward the finish of the season, he did a fine job of it.

"At third base, Bloodworth won't need to cover as much territory as at second, and one of the best things he does is handle hard-hit balls. That's where you get most of those kind—at third base. He has the perfect arm for that long throw. In fact, he has the most powerful arm on the club. He can get the ball away better than any infielder we have. I won't mind starting the season with Bloodworth at third."

Need Clean-up Hitter

In another way, however, Lewis' absence poses a problem for Harris. The Nats' manager cannot so readily replace Lewis' bat in the lineup. Lewis' hitting has been far more important to the club than his defensive play, and he appeared the only man in the lineup who could do justice to the clean-up hitting job.

In desperation Harris may promote either Buddy Myer or Bloodworth to the fourth-hitting spot in the lineup. Myer lacks Bloodworth's power, but he is the team's clutch hitter. Bloodworth would be the ideal mop-up man if he could maintain a better average at the plate. He consistently hits a longer ball than any other man on the club, but his strike-out habits are disturbing. Bloodworth batted only .245 last season.

'Men of Boys Town' Hits Hard at Mind and Heart

Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney Still Costar; Author Occasionally Handicaps Supporting Cast; Well-Chosen 'Shorts' Augment Palace Feature

"MEN OF BOYS TOWN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a screen play by James K. McGuinness, costarring Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, with Bobs Watson, Larry Nunn, Darryl Hickman, Henry O'Neill, Mary Nash, Sidney Miller, Lee J. Cobb, Addison Richards, Lloyd Corrigan, George Lessey, Robert Emmett Keane, Arthur Hohl, Ben Welden and Ann Revere. Directed by Norman Taurog. At Loew's Palace Theater.

AIMED PRIMARILY AT ENTERTAINMENT of the most interesting, amusing and poignant sort, this sequel to the memorable "Boys Town" of 1938, fulfills the further and equally commendable purpose of laying heavy stress upon the value of the work being done almost single-handedly by Father Flanagan in his little city for juvenile delinquents out there near Omaha in Nebraska.

BELL

If "Men of Boys Town"—and they are the maturing adolescents of this unique institution—falls short of the immense appeal exerted by its predecessor, it will be because sentiment, emotionalism and certain dramatic factors that do not quite ring true have been extravagantly overemphasized.

The story of the film play, revealed yesterday for the first time on a local screen at Loew's Palace, is one of many ramifications. It has for its ominous basis the desperate need of funds to prevent Boys Town from passing into oblivion. Against this constantly threatening background are the tales of Whitey Marsh's apparent backsliding into a life of crime, when all he was trying to do was be helpful to a younger kid caught in the toils of the law; the pathetic case of Ted Martley, facing a dark ordeal in order that he may walk again and bitter anguish in the death of his faithful dog; the youthful turmoil in the sensitive soul of the tiny Pee Wee and the incomprehensible behavior of a group of adults that should have known better.

Reform Schools Suffer by Comparison

Out of this plethora of dramaturgic material, Scenarist McGuinness has evolved a fast-moving and well-balanced contemplation of a vital sociological topic that finds it easily possible to contrast the deep humanitarianism and honest purpose of Father Flanagan with the conduct of ostensible "reform" schools, dominated by politics and dedicated to physical violence, ruthlessness and contempt for erring youth. The picture makes out a pretty black case against the public institutions of "correction" and magnifies the stature of Father Flanagan to something approximating the dimensions by which it deserves to be recognized. To detail the story would be to destroy the power of its impact for future audiences. It is, as I have said, overdrawn and too exaggerated in certain of its aspects. It is, nevertheless, a film of such unimpeachable purpose, such great human warmth and such skillfully blended qualities of seriousness, mirth and pathos as to command the admiration, the respect and the enjoyment of any discriminating playgoer. Its slightly maudlin moments are few and far between.

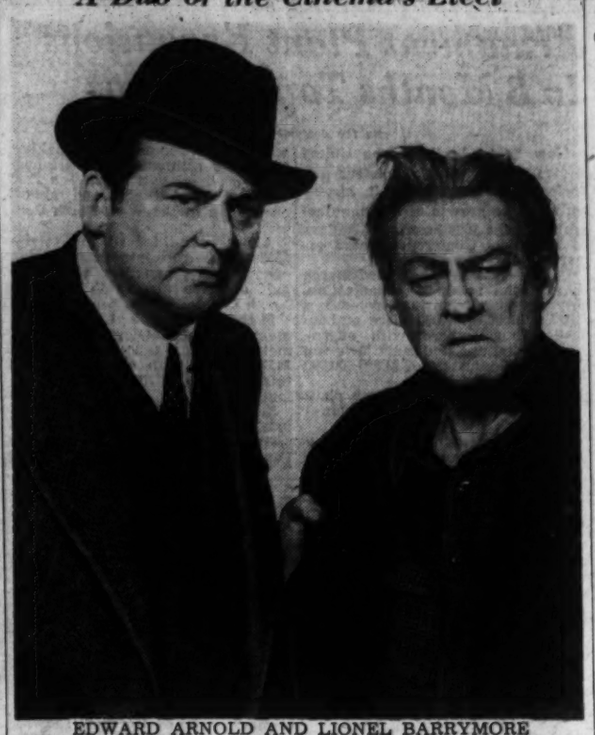
Tracy and Rooney Repeat Stellar Performances

This, of course, is due in great measure to the deftness of a cast that has been chosen with impeccable care. Spencer Tracy perpetuates and accentuates on the screen the great heart and understanding of the founder of Boys Town. His Father Flanagan won one Academy Award and might well win another one. Mickey Rooney, as the maturing Whitey Marsh, meets every demand of a variegated part with the consummate artistry of a born actor, as adept in periods of melodramatic intensity and pathos as in the brighter intervals of comedy. Three other youngsters turn in exceptional performances. They are Larry Nunn, as the injured lad, whose bitterness eventually evaporates; little Bobs Watson, with an infinite gift of tears, and Darryl Hickman, hitherto unknown to these eyes and ears, who makes Flip, the victim of the reform school, an horrendous moppet who makes any one of the Dead End Kids seem pallid in comparison. He is an exceedingly hard egg until the "men" of Boys Town straighten him out. Henry O'Neill and Mary Nash, as the socialites who adopt Mickey out of the Boys Town of which he is serving as "mayor," probably would not have acted like that, but within the author's limitations, contribute excellent performances. And so does Lee J. Cobb, the unforgettable father in "Golden Boy," financial adviser to Father Flanagan and almost unrecognizable in persona propria. Arthur Hohl, who has a peculiar penchant for perniciousness, is a reform school guard you would love to impale on the iron fence and then draw and quarter. The remainder of the cast could be similarly extolled.

"Whispers," a new release in M-G-M's "Passing Parade" series; a cartoon comedy—something about "Abdul the Bul-Bul Amir," if we didn't look away from the title at precisely the wrong time—and the "News of the Day" augment a feature that is entitled to unequivocal recommendations for its exalted intent, if not for every minute quality of its execution.

"Missing Ten Days" about describes what Henry Hiser, of the Hiser Theater, in Bethesda, probably thinks of us. We have been missing every time he has tried to favor us with a preview of the reputedly sterling picture that stars Rex Harrison. The film has scored such a hit for Mr. Hiser—it opened Sunday—that the engagement in Bethesda has been extended from the original three days through Friday of this week. The crowds at every performance have been over-capacity—an avid dream of every showman.

A Duo of the Cinema's Elect



EDWARD ARNOLD AND LIONEL BARRYMORE cast in two of the most important male roles in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The Penalty," which opened yesterday on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Marsha Hunt, the almost-Washingtonian, is cast in the principal feminine role, with Emma Dunn and Grant Mitchell leading the support

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 3.

If you care to see Melvyn Douglas dream through another picture in those striped pajamas, have no uncertain feeling about going to see "That Uncertain Feeling." Director Ernst Lubitsch's deft touch is insurance against boredom over a plot in which boy kicks girl out of his life so he can bring her back into his life permanently. That, according to the script, is a new angle on love-making. Or is it?

HOPPER

Burgess Meredith is swell as the frustrated pianist who moves in with Douglas' neurotic wife to create a situation in the old homestead that only Lubitsch could get past the raised eyebrows of the Hays office. Lubitsch leaves the audience staring at a piano when Meredith and Merle Oberon rush off screen for their love-making. While you expect to be cut in on the romancers any minute, all you ever get is the piano!

In spite of other fine performers, Gracie Fields was a one-woman show at our Shrine auditorium, and she shook the rafters. When the audience joined her in singing, it was the sort of thing you remember. Most of the town turned out. Brian Aherne, who had never heard her before, came out raving, as did everyone else. You've got to have something to go through the highways and byways and alone collect half a million dollars. Gracie's got it, and she's done it.

You can hear Col. William Hayward crowing all the way from New York to Honolulu, now that he's got a grandson. It's the offspring—and first son—of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Hayward (Margaret Sullavan).

Day after Will Hays banned sweaters, adorable 16-year-old Joan Leslie appeared at the All-Year-Round Club in an almost shockingly revealing halter evening gown. I don't blame Joan, but the studio that designed the gown shouldn't ask her to wear a thing like that.

Every time the "Sergeant York" script says a year has passed, an inch of leather is added to little Dickie Moore's shoes to produce the effect of his growing up. "If the story had lasted longer," says Dickie, "I'd be on stilts."

So Dottie Lamour was going to divorce that sarong, was she? Well, she showed up at Paramount to do her first scene in "Aloma of the South Seas," and you know what she wore? A tight, wet sarong. In the sequence, Dottie has just had a swim, and is lying on a beach talking to Jon Hall.

Harry Carey tells me he doesn't know where the rumor of his retiring from the screen got started. He's hard at work in "Parachute Battalion." "Besides," says Harry, "you don't retire from this business — you get thrown out. None die, and few resign!"

Tommy Dorsey and Orchestra, 'Penalty' on Capitol's Hit Bill

By Richard L. Coe

"THE PENALTY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a play by Martin Berkeley, costarring Edward Arnold and Lionel Barrymore, with Marsha Hunt, Robert Sterling, Gene Reynolds, Emma Dunn, Veda Ann Borg, Richard Lane, Gloria DeHaven, Grant Mitchell, Phil Silvers, Warren Ashe, Ralph Byrd and Edgar Barrier. Directed by Harold S. Bucquet. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Gather 'round, chillun, 'n' pappy'll try to tell y'awl 'bout Tommy Dorsey, his trombone 'n' his band and a neat little picture called "The Penalty," all of which opened 'way back yesterday morning at the Capitol.

Ya know 'bout Tommy Dorsey, sho-nuf? How he raises his golden trombone 'n' makes music sweet as yella satin? How he's got Ziggy Elman, Buddy Rich 'n' a whole lot of others in his band and how he's got Frankie Sinatra and Connie Haines to sing just the way they do on the radio? It's smooth, chillun, mighty smooth sometimes, 'n' then, sometimes, chillun, it gets mighty boogie.

About "The Penalty," chillun, the picture on the Capitol screen, pappy thinks you'll like it, even if it may sound like the same old story in rough outline. Thing is, it's differently told and it has a zip to it that'll keep you interested all the way through.

Edward Arnold plays a highly successful killer-bandit who loves his son even more than the clothes-conscious blonde who makes things homey for him. Gene Reynolds is the son, a lad in his middle teens, who thinks he has everything figured out in the ruthless way his dad taught him until he comes across some gentle people who have other ways of doing things.

It's no new lesson he learns, but director Harold S. Bucquet teaches it in a new way, with the gentle comedy of a harmless gander (that's a farm animal, you city chilluns) and by not seeming to try too hard. Curiously enough, the whole point of the film is the same as "Men of Boys Town," an M-G-M studio-mate which opened yesterday at the Palace. "The Penalty" likewise condemns the lack of understanding which makes criminals of boys.

There's a nice variation in setting for "The Penalty," with the unhealthy surroundings of the early reels giving way convincingly to the natural aspects of farm life. Logical reason for this new twist to a familiar story is that Producer Jack Chertok and Director Bucquet here make their full-length bows after heading the M-G-M short subjects department.

"The Penalty's" acting is ably done by players already familiar to their roles. Arnold gives his well-known characterization of the iron-hearted guy, Lionel Barrymore is a wise rustic, Gene Reynolds is nicely effective as the boy and Quondam Washingtonian Marsha Hunt is a refreshingly different personality as the love interest to Robert Sterling, the bumpkin who takes over Gene's loftier education. Veda Ann Borg deserves special mention as a candy-crazed charmer.

To get back to Tommy Dorsey et. al., it's a full hour of music his lads present, ranging from "Swanee River" and "Song of India" to Ziggy Elman doing his "And the Angels Sing" and Buddy Rich beating out a cataclysmic "Quiet Please."

Frank Sinatra just about stops the show with Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine," a nicely retiring "Everything Happens to Me" and an amusing assault on "South of the Border." The highly regarded Pied Pipers were ailing yesterday, so were not with the troupe, but "Marie" took their place.

Connie Haines swells the rising tide with "Rum-Boogie" and "Nobody's Baby" in a style to which her recordings do not do complete justice.

No, chillun, pappy isn't drunk. He just had that 11 p. m. feeling at 11 a. m.

New Car Sales Here Up 42% During Month

New car sales in Washington increased 42 per cent in February as compared with the same 1940 month, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. Passenger auto sales totaled 2,302 against 1,617 in February, 1940, the survey showed.

Two-month sales in Washington were 4,415 as compared with 3,347 last year, or an increase of 32 per cent.

The five States included in the Fifth Federal Reserve District likewise showed sharp increases, new-car sales being 21,621 in February against 15,581 last year. Cumulative sales for the first two months were 44,983 against 33,241 last year, or a gain of 35 per cent.

Commenting on automotive sales in the Fifth District, the bank said, "Sales of used cars have also been in large volume in recent months but have not kept pace with new car sales. Stocks of used cars on dealers' lots have consequently increased.

"Dealers also have relatively large stocks of new cars on hand but in view of the approach of the spring season and a possibility that manufacture of automobiles may have to be restricted as a part of the defense program later in the year, stocks of neither new or used cars are thought to be excessive."

Sener Becomes Partner

Joseph Ward Sener, who has been associated for more than 20 years with Mackubin, Legg & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, has been admitted to partnership in the firm and has become an allied member of the exchange.

Mr. Sener is well known in Washington for his work as one of the organizers and a former officer of the National Security Traders Association. He is a member of the Bond Club of Baltimore and the Baltimore Security Traders Association.

The investment banking and brokerage firm of Mackubin, Legg & Co., formed in Baltimore in 1899, has a Washington branch under the direction of Charles B. Quarles.

West in Defense Post

Robert R. West, former president of the Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills at Danville and more recently director of a bureau of industrial research at the University of Virginia, has been named Fifth Federal Reserve District manager of defense contract service of the Office of Production Management.

As such, his job will be to get as many subcontracts as he can for defense materials which can be made in the district, which includes Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina and the District of Columbia. He will open an office in the Federal Reserve Bank building at Richmond, Monday.

Convention Plans Mapped

Plans for the annual convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association were discussed at a meeting of officers and committee chairmen at the Columbia Country Club, Sidney F. Taliaferro, general convention chairman, said a special train will leave the afternoon of June 4 and arrive at Hot Springs, Va., about 11 that night.

Reservations for the four-day conclave are being handled by W. T. Vandoren, vice president and cashier of the Liberty National Bank.

Advertising Spurts 11.5 Per Cent

With the general appearance of milder weather throughout the country, the volume of newspaper advertising placed by retailers in 56 major cities spurted during the week ended March 22, attaining a level of 11.5 per cent higher than the corresponding week of last year, according to Advertising Age.

During the seven-day period, 24,108,373 lines of retail display advertising were placed in newspapers of 83 cities, an increase of approximately 2,500,000 lines over the corresponding 1940 figure of 21,627,568.

For the 12-week period since the beginning of the year, retail newspaper advertising is reported 0.7 per cent ahead of last year, the current figure being 224,168,683 lines, compared with the 1940 figure of 222,595,282 lines.

Hardware Sales Heavier

An average gain of 13 per cent in sales of independent retail hardware stores in February as compared with sales for the same month last year is reported in the every-other-week market summary of Hardware Age. This data is based on reports from 1619 independent retail hardware dealers, in all 48 States.

Volume for the reporting stores was $6,046,629 in February, 1941, as compared with $5,374,573 for the same month last year. Robert L. Clause Heads Pittsburgh Plate Glass

Pittsburgh, April 3 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. today announced the election of Robert L. Clause as president.

Clause, who joined the firm in 1914 as a draftsman, succeeds H. S. Wherret, who becomes vice chairman of the board.

Stockholders approved the creation of the new office of vice chairman at the annual meeting at which all directors were reelected.

Cotton Futures

New York, April 3 (AP).—Cotton futures pushed up $1 to $1.20 a bale today but carried only about half of this gain to the close.

The market's buoyant tone in early trading reflected confidence the Administration and farm bloc would agree on higher crop parity loans but the Senate's vote to increase parity payments was reported after the market closed. Retreat from the highs was based on hedging and general realizing.

Cotton cloth trading in Worth Street was relatively light but the market's underlying position remained strong.

Exports Wednesday nil; season so far, 799,509. Port receipts, 3,358. Port stocks, 3,464,836.

Stocks Swirl Higher in Year's Heaviest Trade; Rails and Industrials Post $1 to $2 Gains

New York, April 3.—Stocks broke out of the doldrums in today's market with the speediest rally of the year in which rails and industrials ran up gains of 1 to more than 2 points. A number of favorites posted new 1941 highs.

Brokers attributed the brisk upswing mainly to the revival of "inflationary thinking" which served partially to obscure fears of an imminent Nazi thrust at Yugoslavia and the many disturbing labor rifts at home. More notice also was taken of generally encouraging business news and the persistent climbing tendencies of major staples. In addition it was reasoned the Government's action in ordering a ceiling on iron and steel scrap and soft coal indicated the idea of soaring prices was coming to the fore.

The list got off to a hesitant start but railway stocks soon began to steam up and imparted some of their vigor to other departments. Utilities were the only real laggards.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was ahead .6 of a point at 42.3, the best day's advance since March 10, when a gain of as much was recorded. It was one of the broadest markets of the year, 831 individual stocks being traded against 700 yesterday.

The ticker tape picked up speed at frequent intervals and the day's turnover of 940,560 shares was the largest since December 31. It compared with 445,510 Wednesday.

Putting power in the rails was the summary of last week's freight loadings disclosing a more than seasonal increase to the best total for this week since 1930. Cheerful factors included another jump in bank clearings to above the $7,000,000,000 mark, reports of rapidly expanding retail spending and a further upswing in heavy construction awards.

Among stocks getting into new high ground for 1941 were Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, U. S. Rubber, and the preferreds of Gulf, Mobile & Ohio and Electric Power & Light.

Prominent pushers elsewhere were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Crucible Steel, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Western Union, Dow Chemical, du Pont, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Great Northern, N. Y. Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Montgomery Ward and General Steel Castings preferred.

An exception among leaders was American Telephone, which finished off ½. Although the Bell System announced the biggest increase of stations in the first quarter in the concern's history, the move of the Federal Communications for lower long distance rates was thought to have been a handicap.

Railway loans were in front of a fast bond division. Cotton futures retained gains of 50 to 80 cents a bale. Gains inclined to slip. Wheat at Chicago backed down ⅜ to 1 cent a bushel and corn was off ¾ to ⅞.

In the Curb, Aluminum of America got up 5 points. Lesser improvement was shown by Jones & Laughlin, American Cyanamid "B," Electric Bond & Share common and preferred, Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, Creole Petroleum, Babcock & Wilcox and Tampa Electric. Volume here was around 111,000 shares versus 93,000 the day before.

Bond market activity stepped up to the fastest pace since early this year as leading rails and a few others advanced fractions to more than a point.

The day's business of $19,531,400, par value, was the largest since January 9 and was within $300,000 of being the best day thus far in 1941. Wednesday's sales amounted to $11,722,200.

The Associated Press average of 20 rails was at a new 1941 high at 66.1, up .6 of a point on the day. Other groups in the compilation exhibited steadiness.

Prominent issues on the upturn included Erie 5s at 25, Southern Railway 4s at 65¼, American Telephone 3½s at 107¾, St. Paul 5s at 10¼ (on sales of $438,000), Rock Island General 4s at 2½ (sales $414,000), Delaware & Hudson Refunding 4s at 53⅞, Illinois Central 4¾s at 45, Baltimore & Ohio Convertibles of '60 at 29¾ (sales $745,000), Missouri Pacific 5s at 24¾ (sales $339,000), St. Louis-San Francisco 4½s at 14⅝ (sales $296,000) and Western Union 5s at 82.

In the scramble to buy speculative corporate bonds, United States Governments were neglected. Activity was light in both stock exchange and over the counter. The trend was to the offside with closing prices down 4-32 to 6-32 in the longer term Treasury group.

Engineering Awards Near Record in Month

New York, April 3 (AP).—Engineering construction awards in March, totaling $452,430,000, were the third highest monthly volume ever reported, Engineering News-Record said today. The total was two and one-half times as great as the same month a year ago.

During the latest week, however, the pace of new contracts slowed somewhat, the magazine's tabulation indicated. Contracts amounted to $68,989,000, a decline of 45 per cent from the previous week but 24 per cent greater than a year ago.

Awards for both private and public construction dropped off sharply during the week.

Norfolk & West. In Year Earns $21.66 a Share

By the Associated Press

The Norfolk & Western Railway Co. reported yesterday a net railway operating income of $33,254,232 for the year 1940, an increase of $1,595,015, or 5.04 per cent, for 1939.

This income was equivalent to 6.29 per cent earned upon the company's total railway property investment, compared with 6.17 per cent in 1939.

A spokesman said the line's earnings equaled about $21.66 a share for 1940 compared with $20.67 in the previous year.

Freight revenues were $100,305,450, an increase of $11,755,803. The rise is attributed, in a report of the directors, to the increased demand by heavy industries for bituminous coal, which represented more than 20 per cent of the freight tonnage handled.

Passenger revenues were $2,093,904, an increase over the previous year of $190,179. Total operating expenses in 1940 were $57,580,323, an increase of $6,461,036.

Gillette Safety Razor Co

Gillette Safety Razor Co. reported for 1940 net profit of $2,601,093, equal to 55 cents a common share, compared with $3,284,797, or 89 cents a share, in 1939.

Phoenix Securities Corp.

Phoenix Securities Corporation, an investing concern, reported net assets as of February 28 of $10,148,787, equal to $7.53 a common share, compared with $11,870,964, or $8.86 a share, on August 31, 1940.

Interlake Iron Corp.

Interlake Iron Corporation, one of the country's largest independent producers of merchant pig iron and commercial coke, reported for 1940 net profit of $829,450, equal to 41 cents a common share. This compared with a loss of $553,978 in 1939.

New Plane Plant Completed 45 Days Ahead of Schedule

Pittsburgh, April 3 (AP).—Construction of a $7,000,000 airplane assembly plant 45 days ahead of schedule through the use of prefabricated cellular steel, bomb resisting, insulated structural units, was reported today.

Developed in the steel laboratories of the H. H. Robertson Co. here, the new construction technique was used for the first time in building the North American Aviation Corporation's plant at Dallas, Tex., which is scheduled to be opened April 7.

J. Gordon Turnbull, consulting engineer of Cleveland, reported more than 30 per cent was cut from the construction time of the Dallas plant, with completion achieved in 130 days. Twenty acres of roofs were erected at the rate of an acre a day and walls at the rate of one-third acre a day.

Development of the steel unit construction came largely as a result of study of British plants during bombings. The Robertson company claims that only small sections of such type buildings are damaged by bombs. The Dallas plant is windowless, lighted by fluorescent lamps and equipped with bomb baffles at all doors.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 3 (AP).—Wheat prices about-faced today after bounding upward as much as a cent a bushel to new highs since last May, and at one time slumped more than 2 cents from the early highs under pressure of profit-taking and some hedging sales.

Wheat closed ⅜-1 cent lower than yesterday; May, 91⅜@91½; July, 90½@90⅝; corn, ¾@⅞ down; May, 66¾; July, 67; oats, ½@⅝ off; soybeans unchanged to 1 higher; rye unchanged to ¾ higher and lard, 10@15 higher.

Grain men spent another session trying to translate reports of Washington developments into market action and then decided to accept profits available as a result of 15 to 20 cents appreciation in wheat values since mid-February and 8 to 10 cents gain in corn.

Early wheat buying was associated with Washington reports of prospects of higher loan rate for the new crop and marketing quota adoption. May wheat rose to 93⅛ while September matched that price. Two months ago September sold at a discount of about 6 cents under May.

The trade heard rumors that Government wheat holdings may be impounded but many dealers regarded this as unlikely.

Armament Plant Expansions In 8 Months Top 2 Billions

By the Associated Press

New York, April 3.—The United States is expanding armament factories at a rate matched in history only by the growth of all manufacturing in the 1929 boom, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today.

In the eight months ended March 1, said the research organization, defense manufacturing expansions totaling $2,053,000,000 were authorized. This compares with expansions for mining and manufacturing plant and equipment of $3,596,000,000 in the full year 1929.

In February alone, defense plant expansion awards were almost $700,000,000

More than one-third of all the new defense-plant awards—$750,000,000—will be used for munitions making, the board estimated. At least one-third of these will be in the East North Central States and almost one-fourth in the West North Central.

Almost one-third of the total—$633,000,000—goes into the expansion of aviation production, with one-half of these awards to the East North Central States.

Miscellaneous plant expansion, mainly in the metal producing and metal processing industries, total $457,0000,000, with 40 per cent of this construction in the Middle Atlantic States.

Shipbuilding facility expansions totaled $153,000,000, one-half of this assignment going to New Jersey, Pennsylvania and California.

Auto Output Dives in Week Due to Strike

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 3.—Production of automobiles and trucks this week will decline to 107,170 units because of the strike at the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co., Automotive News said today in its weekly survey of factory activity.

Output last week, the publication said, was 118,380 vehicles, while in this week a year ago 104,749 were assembled.

Automotive News estimates showed that a new record high production mark for the industry was set in the first quarter of this year, when 1,551,029 new cars and trucks were assembled. This compares with the previous high of 1,546,319 vehicles turned out in 1929 and 1,302,518 built in 1937.

The survey places General Motors production this week at 53,620, compared with last week's 53,565; Chrysler assemblies at 26,570, compared with 24,773, and Ford completions at 10,450, compared with 23,050 vehicles last week.

Soap Firm Charges Product Imitated

Cincinnati, April 3 (AP).—Claiming infringement of certain characteristics of its product, Ivory soap, Procter & Gamble Co. today filed suit in United States District Court against the British-owned Lever Brothers Co., of Cambridge, Mass.

The action seeks an injunction, accounting of profits and costs. The bill of complaint alleges that the defendant company's recently-introduced Swan soap imitates Ivory soap in size and design of cake and in odor and floating properties.

The National City Bank is ranked by only the Chase National Bank, whose resources reported yesterday indicated that it soon might become the first $4,000,000,000 institution.

The Chemical Bank & Trust Co today became New York City's seventh billion-dollar bank when it reported resources of $1,020,165,963.

Rail Loadings Up 3.1% in Week

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 792,125 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 23,617 cars, or 3.1 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 163,204 cars, or 25.9 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 191,434 cars, or 31.9 per cent, compared with 1939.

A sharp expansion in miscellaneous freight and a smaller gain in less-than-carlot merchandise accounted for most of the rise in total loadings which was of greater than seasonal proportions. Total shipments were the largest since the week ended November 2, 1940, and were the greatest for any like week since 1930.

"You know perfectly well I never hit anything head-on—I always back into things!"

Listen!

with Glynn

Today's the day that WJSV's vocalist Alyce Winstead, who's also known over the WJSV air as Alyce Bruce, gets her big break as guest soloist on Al Pearce's C. B. S. network show from Hollywood at 7:30 p. m.

It's Mr. Pearce's very pleasant habit to look around the country's radio stations, find promising vocalists who have never had a chance to appear on a network show, and then to give them a choice spot on his very popular program.

The singers so chosen are given their transportation and a week in Hollywood at Mr. Pearce's expense in addition to a sizeable fee and a great many of them who have appeared with "Al Pearce and His Gang" have found themselves with offers of good-paying jobs.

You've heard Miss Winstead, who hails from North Carolina, on WJSV's "This Is It," with Paul Kain's Orchestra. It was only about a month ago that Lloyd Dennis, WJSV's program director, had a recording made of one of her renditions and sent it on to Pearce. And it was just a week ago that a telegram arrived from Pearce bidding Miss Winstead board a train that day and come to Hollywood.

It's doubtful that she's singing any blues tonight.

Contract Bridge

Here is a little bidding problem for you to solve. See if you can select the correct call without getting entangled. The answer is given below.

♠AQ75
♡AQ93
◇82
♣AQ5

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
1♠	2◇	Pass	Pass

What call do you make?

A double is the wisest call. It offers an opportunity to make an aggressive bid or better still, to inflict a penalty on the adversaries. Partner may bid hearts or clubs in reply to the double or with diamonds pass for penalties. A two-heart bid cuts out the chance for a set. A pass would be ultra-conservative: partner may have a little strength but not enough for a free bid.

Two Boys Seized For Record Thefts From Post Station

Two 'teen age boys were arrested by Third Precinct police yesterday in connection with record thefts from a Washington Post distributing station at 1719 Twentieth Street Northwest.

The boys are being held for juvenile authorities and reputedly implicated three other youngsters. One of those apprehended, according to Precinct Detective R. A. Williams, had recently been granted probation on another robbery charge.

Investigators said the boys—ranging from 14 to 17—broke into the substation, destroyed records and took a list of 190 subscribers from whom they collected money.

The Post circulation department warned subscribers to request proper identification in instances where the route delivery boys are not known to them.

HANDSOME NEW SPRING STYLES IN

Hechtonian Spring Felts

with *Celok Perspiration Proof Sweatband and Hat Lining

Once the perspiration or hair oil comes thru your hat to the outer band . . . your felt hat is ready for the trash basket. Cleaning cannot take the oil out of the felt once it has soaked thru. BUT NO MORE OF THAT! The world-famous Celanese* Corporation of America has patented a process of treating the Celanese* Rayon lining and sweatband so that perspiration and oil cannot penetrate to the outside felt. That means longer, smarter wear. The sweatband will not wrinkle and perspiration drys amazingly fast.

Now add the Celok* feature to the distinctive styling of these Hechtonian Spring Felts and you've a hat that takes the blue ribbon for smartness, shape-retaining ability and exceptionally long wear.

Squirrel Grey, Steel Grey, Cocoa Tan and Willow Green. Sizes 6⅞ to 7½.
